Roosevelt Hits Critics, Defends Cost of Relief; 3,500,000 Given Work

50,000 in Atlanta Hear President Promise to Curb Debt.

Country Declared Once More Solvent

Gov. Talmadge Snubbed at 'Home-Coming' to Open Campaign.

A Staff Correspondent.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 28.—Hailing the substantial achievement of his work relief goal, President Roosevelt, in an address which may be regarded as the opening of his campaign for re-election, today vigorously defended his Administration against charges of wasteful and disastrous spending.

Speaking to 50,000 Democrats from six Southern States, but chiefly from Georgia, in a historic "home-coming" demonstration, the President declared the national balance sheet—that of the country's citizens taken as a whole—was "once more in the black" and that "today we are solvent," whereas in March, 1933, "we were insolvent."

Mr. Roosevelt pointed to a country making "progress" and again achieving prosperity, not the "orgy of prosperity" of the Coolidge era, when "mammon ruled America," but a progress which means "not only a sound business and a sound agriculture from the material point of view" but also "a sound improvement in American life."

Lashes at Critics.

Although the President remained primarily on the defensive in this address, projecting nothing new in the way of policy, he lashed out twice at the critics of his Administration, once at those who find fault with the relief program and, at the bankers who bemoan the rapidly mounting national debt as endangering the Nation's credit.

In a scorching passage of his address, which brought his audience in the huge Grant Stadium to its feet cheering, the President raked those "gentlemen in well-warmed and well-stocked clubs" who discourse on the "suffering that they are going through because the Government is spending money for work-relief."—He castigated those urging the dole as more economical than work-relief as persons lacking an understanding of the American character.

A few moments later the President struck out at those bankers disturbed over the national debt. In the spring of 1933, the President asserted, when the New Deal was disbursing money to save banks, insurance and mortgage companies and railroads, a group of the "great bankers" of the country heartily approved of such spending.

This group of bankers, he asserted, told him on that occasion "the country could safely stand a national debt of between 55 and 70 billion dollars," but, he added, smiling broadly, he spurned such suggestions as "wholly unnecessary" and said he would "not go along with them." He asked the Nation to remember now that then "many bankers and big businessmen would have been willing to put the country far deeper into debt than I shall ever let it go."

Cites Debt Figures.

In this connection, the President cited figures on the national debt which indicated, although he did not draw the conclusion, that the debt increased more in the Hoover Administration than since the New Deal started, if the existing Treasury balance and recoverable assets were deducted.

He promised, moreover, a decreasing Treasury deficit, asserting that "we have passed the peak of appropriations." Despite attacks made on the Government's credit by New Deal critics, the President said, it stands today higher than that of any other great nation in the world.

Perhaps the most significant point of the President's address was his announcement that on last Wednesday, 3,125,000 jobless persons had been given employment on work-relief projects and that the remaining number of those on relief had been ordered to report to work on projects under way or ready to be started.

Great Achievement.

"This result," the President asserted, "constitutes a substantial and national achievement.

President Roosevelt's visit to Atlanta and his address here were arranged as a great tribute to him from the people of his "second home," he having owned a farm at Warm Springs since 1924. More elaborate plans were made for today's events than for any occasion in a decade or more.

But it was more than a demonstration of loyalty and affection for the President. It was a pointed demonstration against Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who has been outspoken

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Thirty Billion National Debt, Treasury Hint

$29,585,000,000 Current Peak Expected to Be Swelled by Plans.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury's December borrowing plan—to be announced Monday—yesterday held potentialities for pushing the public debt above $30,000,000,000.

The extent of the rise depended, of course, on how much new borrowing, as distinguished from the refunding of maturing securities, was intended. For the time being the figure was carefully guarded.

However, some who follow the situation contended that, in the light of the Treasury's current cash position, the amount might run to $500,000,000, which would carry the debt to another all time peak of more than $30,000,000,000. It stood yesterday at $29,585,000,000.

Cited By Roosevelt.

Possibly preparing the public mind for the announcement, President Roosevelt, speaking in Atlanta yesterday, said that early in his Administration the banking fraternity told him the country "could safely stand a national debt of between $55,000,000,000 and $70,000,000,000.

Since his Administration began, he said, the debt has risen from $21,000,000,000 to $29,500,000,000, the latter figure not taking into consideration a cash balance which he said was nearly $1,500,000,000, and recoverable assets aggregating $4,500,000,000.

Yesterday's Treasury statement, however, showed the working balance at $1,051,000,000, its lowest point in a number of months. This factor furnished the principal basis of predicting that new borrowing might run to $500,000,000.

New Money Raised.

For nine months the Treasury has been raising new money by issuing $100,000,000 a week in Treasury bills, against weekly maturities of $50,000,000, thus supplying itself with $50,000,000 of new cash each week.

Recent refinancing programs have given investors a choice between medium and long-term issues. While the details of the forthcoming announcement were kept secret, indications pointed to a continuance of this practice.

Goal for Relief Jobs Is Reached, Declares Williams.

Dole Abandoned, FERA Will Close

22 States Told Funds Will End; Burden Up to Them.

By Felix Bruner.

The goal of the Administration works-relief program—putting 3,500,000 persons to work by December 1—has been reached, Aubrey Williams, assistant works progress administrator, announced last night.

Simultaneously, it was announced that one of the New Deal's great relief agencies, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, would go out of business officially as of December 1.

These announcements mean that, technically at least, the Government has abandoned the dole, carrying out President Roosevelt's intention of getting out of "this business of relief."

With the ending of the Federal dole, 22 States were informed that no more Federal money would be available to them for direct relief; that hereafter the Government intends to support relief only through the medium of jobs. Previously, the other 26 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands had been informed that no more money for doles would be available.

Supplementary Allotments.

Actually, the announcement does not mean that, so far as many of the States are concerned, the dole will end abruptly tomorrow. Allotments have been made to some of the States for November, and these have been followed by supplementary allotments which will carry over into December, the amounts of which, in most instances, have not yet been made public.

Government money thus will continue to be used to care for needy workers until their WPA checks are given them and to carry families over the adjustment period between direct and work relief.

States notified yesterday that they could expect to receive no more direct relief allotments are California, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Montana, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Williams' announcement followed closely that of President Roosevelt in his speech at Atlanta, revealing that 3,125,000 persons were at work Wednesday. Williams said his figure represented the number that would be on the pay roll by tonight. On the basis of announced figures, the Administration has put to work through WPA and other agencies approximately 1,133,000 persons during the last two weeks of this month. More than 500,000 of those included in the total are in CCC camps.

Burden Now on States.

Action of the Relief Administration places the burden of caring for unemployables and those employables not included in the 3,500,000 figure directly on the shoulders of State officials. Some States are prepared to meet this situation. Many others do not have sufficient funds and it is expected to be some time before they are ready. This means that in thousands of instances indigent persons, particularly those who are unable to work, may at least for a time receive considerably less assistance than they have in the past.

The 3,500,000 figure was originally set as an arbitrary goal. The time when these people were to be put to work had gradually been postponed until December 1 was fixed as the final goal. The figure was intended to represent approximately

Livermore's Son Shot By Mother, Near Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.
Jesse Livermore, jr., and his mother, Mrs. Dorothea Livermore.

Doctors Doubt 15-Year-Old Youth Can Live 12 Hours; Both Intoxicated at Time of Shooting, Probers Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Nov. 29.—Jesse Livermore, jr., son of the spectacular Wall street "plunger," lay near death tonight. Authorities, who said the youth's mother shot him in a drunken argument, were unable to get any statement from her in two hours of questioning.

Doctors expressed doubt whether the 15-year-old youth could live more than 12 hours.

District Attorney Percy Eckendorf and Undersheriff Jack Ross said Mrs. Livermore was somewhat dazed and "talked around" the affair. They planned further questioning tomorrow.

"It was an accident," the youth gasped as an opiate was administered. "That's all I wish to say about it. I'm too tired to talk now, anyway."

The mother, divorced second wife of the once famous market manipulator, was held under guard.

Dr. Neville Ussher, administering physician, quoted Mrs. Livermore, the former Dorothea Wendt, of Brooklyn, as exclaiming:

"I've shot my boy;"

Undersheriff Ross said both mother and son were intoxicated when taken to a hospital early today.

The elder Livermore received word of the shooting at St. Louis. He left immediately for Santa Barbara by plane. He now makes his home in New York with his third wife, the former Harriet Metz Noble, of Omaha. She arranged to accompany him West.

Ross said he learned the mother upbraided the youth, while both were intoxicated, for his drinking, and asserted she would rather see him dead.

D. B. Neville, a guest, told officers the boy handed his mother a .22-caliber rifle with the challenge, "Well, here you are."

Neville said he left the room for a moment. When he heard a shot he dashed back. He found the boy

Flood of Suits On Utility Act Deluges Courts

Four Filed Here as SEC Plans to Shut Books Tomorrow Night.

By Robert C. Albright.

A last-minute storm of injunction suits against utility act enforcement shook the doors of the courts yesterday, as the Securities and Exchange Commission moved to close its books to registrations at midnight tomorrow.

With three exceptions, the industry in mass refused to register, while major companies flocked to the bench for protection. Four injunction suits challenging utility law validity were brought in the District Supreme Court here and a score of others elsewhere, bringing the total suits filed to 38.

The Securities and Exchange Commission meanwhile made another overture to the industry by slashing regulation red tape to permit blanket exemption of all companies predominantly operating in one State, without application to the commission.

Exemption of such companies was

Stains on Auto Speed Inquiry In Loring Case

Redmond's Car Also Yields Women's Gloves; He Is Held in Jail.

Stains on the canvas top of a small coupe and women's gloves found beneath the seat of the automobile last night engrossed the attention of investigators working on the Corinna Loring murder mystery.

The automobile belongs to Victor H. Redmond, 42-year-old manager of a Washington restaurant, who is in jail in Upper Marlboro charged with attempting assault upon a 9-year-old girl in the neighborhood of the Loring home in Mount Rainier, Md.

The stains were found on the car by Robert Hicks, criminologist, who examined it in the Sixth Precinct garage last night. Hicks scraped a red splotch from the top of the machine near the right door and removed other stains from the seat covers preparatory to making a chemical analysis to determine the presence of blood.

Hicks found two pairs of women's gloves and two single gloves be-

Neighbors Shun Mrs. Maxwell, Outcast by Mountain Society

An Edith Maxwell Defense Fund Coupon will be found on Page 4.

By Virginia Lee Warren,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pound, Va., Nov. 29.—The Maxwell place used to be a sort of community house. Part of the flat-roofed, white frame, one-story dwelling is rented to the Government for a postoffice. Everybody in Pound used to drop by Mrs. Trigg Maxwell's sitting room and visit for a spell while the mail was being put up.

But that was before Mrs. Maxwell's 21-year-old daughter was clapped into jail at Wise, the county seat 13 miles away, convicted of the murder of her father, quick-tempered Trigg Maxwell.

Now the neighbors avoid the Maxwell house as if it had a smallpox sign on the door. They have stopped speaking to Mrs. Maxwell.

"No, I don't try to go to church any more," said Edith's pale, gaunt mother today. "I used to teach a Sunday school class. So did Ed. But ever since the trial the women won't speak to me. I actually hate to go outside my door."

The Maxwells, mother and daughter, attended the Pound Methodist Church South. It's the only one here. A preacher comes once a month to hold services and sometimes there are prayer meetings and socials in between.

Mrs. Maxwell used to attend them. But the harassed woman has been almost afraid to step outside her house since her daughter was sentenced ten days ago to 25 years in the penitentiary for the murder of Trigg Maxwell. There are baleful glances. There have been muttered threats.

It took the mother some time to realize the cause of all this resentment. She learned it was not entirely because Edith whacked her 55-year-old father on the head with a high-heeled slipper, when he went after her with a butcher knife and threatened in his drunken rage to kill her for staying out after dark with a neighbor boy.

That was enough to turn the folks in Pound and the surrounding mountainside against Edith. Even if Maxwell hadn't died an hour after being hit with the slipper everybody would have thought the girl "had mighty little to do, a-strikin' back at her pappy thataway."

In this hard-bitten section a father has the right to rule his wife and children in any way that

Alice du Pont, Husband Arrive In D.C. by Plane After Nuptials

A private cabin plane landed at Washington Hoover Airport last night with the former Alice F. du Pont and her bridegroom, James P. Mills, broker and polo player.

The former Miss du Pont is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix du Pont. She became the bride of Mills, a member of the executive committee of the United States Polo Association, in a ceremony in the Cathedral Church of St. John in Wilmington, Del., late yesterday.

Mills is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Mills, of Radnor, Pa., New York and South Carolina, and a grandson of Samuel Wayne Mills, commandant of West Point in 1895.

The bride's father is vice president of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Mrs. Mills was a licensed pilot at 17. However, a pilot employed by the du Pont family was at the controls of the plane when it landed here at 8:37 p. m. The couple left the landing field immediately and the pilot flew the plane back to Wilmington.

Socially prominent persons from Philadelphia, New York and other cities attended the ceremony yesterday. The Rev. Walden Pell, of St. Andrew's School, Middletown, and the Rev. Hiram R. Bennett, dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John, officiated. Miss du Pont's sister, Miss Lydia C. du Pont, was the maid of honor.

Miss du Pont, with her brother, Richard, made a flight last year to Central America. In January, 1934, she took part in the All-America air races at Miami.

'Ultimatum' by France Meets Threat of Italy; Drastic U.S. Ban Urged

Moffett Intimates Company's Accord

Ambassador Rosso Is Silent on Visit to the State Department.

As the provision of the neutrality act requiring manufacturers and shippers of munitions to register became effective yesterday, Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, asked that Congress extend the provisions of the act to outlaw shipments of all war material to belligerents. This would include oil, steel and cotton, the shipment of which commodities to Italy and Ethiopia is being discouraged by the State Department.

Meanwhile, Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso visited the State Department for the second time in three days. He conferred with R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, explaining afterward that his talk was "general." It is believed the conversation included discussion of the proposed League of Nations embargo on oil to Italy and the attitude of this country toward similar shipments.

Moffett Explains.

From New York the Associated Press reported that James A. Moffett, vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and former head of the Federal Housing Administration, had said that American companies will stop shipment of oil to the warring nations if the Government requests it. Moffett made the statement just before sailing for Europe.

The munitions registrations provision becomes effective under an Executive order fixing November 30 as the date on which manufacturers, exporters and importers of arms and ammunition must be registered. A permit will be required before shipment can be made to any foreign country. An annual report will be made to Congress on the manufacture and exportation of munitions. These provisions cover only actual munitions and not materials, such as steel and oil, that can be converted into munitions.

Warns Against League.

While suggesting a broadening of the munitions act, Senator Norris warned that the United States should in no way be associated with League of Nations sanctions. Norris is one of the Senators who voted against entrance into the World War.

Norris made it plain that he believed a ban on shipments of munitions and commodities usable in warfare should be applied in the same way to all belligerents and that if any exception is made it should be made by Congress.

Bridge Structure Falls on Ferryboat

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 29.—Timber and tools showered 250 feet down on a passing ferryboat when two San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge catwalk cables snapped today.

Ferry passengers dodged the falling wood and steel. Workmen on the catwalk hurried to safety, one clinging to a main bridge cable until rescued.

Officials of the $75,000,000 bridge project said no one was injured and that damage to the catwalk, a temporary structure along which the main bridge cables are being spun, was slight.

A woman narrowly escaped being hit by a falling plank on the ferryboat. Another timber fell among a group of passengers.

Driver Held in Fatal Crash; 84-Year-Old Hit-Run Victim May Die.

Thomas Albert Walmsley, 66, a former Washington newspaperman, who fatally injured at Fifteenth and L streets northwest, last night as he was hurrying to have dinner with the woman he was to have married, Mrs. Abbie Brown, of the Sherman Apartments, 1101 Fifteenth street northwest.

Walmsley, who lived at the Portland Hotel, 1133 Vermont avenue northwest, was struck as he was crossing Fifteenth street, by an auto police said was driven by Henry A. Magnuson, 40, of 1480 Chapin street northwest, an architect. Magnuson was held for the coroner by the Third Precinct police.

While Walmsley was being taken to Emergency Hospital where he died of a fractured skull, the driver of an old sedan was fleeing from Second and East Capitol streets where his machine struck, and perhaps fatally injured, 84-year-old Mrs. Anna Treadwell, of 101 Second street northeast.

Walmsley's was the city's 104th traffic death for 1935. Mrs. Treadwell, the mother of Miss Annie Treadwell, a Government attorney, was the second hit-run victim here within 24 hours. Anthony Z. Mattis, of Philadelphia, was fatally injured by a hit-run truck at Fourteenth street and Independence avenue Thursday night.

Mrs. Treadwell was brought to Casualty Hospital in a hospital ambulance. She suffered a possible skull fracture and internal injuries. She was going to have dinner with her daughter at Miss Treadwell's residence in the George Washington Inn at New Jersey avenue and C streets southeast at the time of the accident.

Police broadcast a lookout for the driver of the car. He was said to be a white man. Police have a description of the machine.

Mrs. Brown had dinner waiting for Walmsley when informed of his death. She was overcome with grief. She said:

"We were to have been married. He called me several times today. He seemed so happy."

Walmsley had been employed for about two years in the public re-

Coroner's Jury Clears Boy, 13, In Fatal Stabbing of Friend

A wide-eyed little boy, his freckled face topped by a shock of unruly red hair, fidgeted in a big chair at the District Morgue yesterday and stared in bewilderment as a coroner's jury was told how he used a rusty penknife to fatally stab a neighborhood playmate.

And then, after nearly an hour of testimony, 13-year-old Rayburn Smallwood grinned. It was a forced grin, but he was glad that the jury held him blameless in the death of his young friend, William Wesley Suddath, 15.

"I didn't mean to do it," he insisted—and the jury believed him.

But a tangled maze of events, starting last Tuesday when William died in Georgetown Hospital and ending yesterday in the drab inquest room, left Rayburn—they call him Ray—with an impression he will never forget.

He faced the coroner's jury—six business men who smiled at him from their row of seats—as one of the youngest defendants ever to face a possible murder charge.

He sat there in the big chair and blinked his eyes. Once or twice he bit his lip. Around him were lawyers, policemen, physicians and reporters. It was hard enough to hold back the tears when they told him William was dead. And it was hard to spend Thanksgiving Day in the Children's Receiving Home. But it was even harder yesterday when his mother put her arm around him and the jury filed in.

When it was all over, and Detective Sergt. John Dalglish, of the Laval Says Attack Upon Britain Will Mean War by Paris.

Word Is Delivered To Il Duce's Envoy

Sanctions Are Forecast Soon After League Session Dec. 12.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 29.—A virtual ultimatum to Premier Benito Mussolini from Premier Pierre Laval of France, warning him officially to refrain from an unprovoked attack on Great Britain in the Mediterranean Sea, was disclosed in authoritative British quarters tonight.

Laval told Il Duce's ambassador directly, these sources said, that France would consider such an attack to be an attack on France.

(Paris dispatches said M. Laval's action on the subject of an unprovoked sea attack against Great Britain had wrecked Italian hopes for further delay in a League of Nations oil embargo against the Fascist kingdom.)

High quarters, professing no alarm over reports of mysterious Italian troop movements, simultaneously expressed the opinion that oil sanctions against Italy would be applied quickly following upon the December 12 meeting of the League of Nations sanctions committee to discuss such an embargo.

The French premier, informed sources said, delivered his tacit ultimatum to the Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, after a conference with Sir George Russell Clerk, the ambassador from Great Britain.

Reaffirmation of Pact.

It was disclosed, asked Laval to give Italy a straightforward reminder that all members of the League of Nations are standing together to resist attacks.

This, as a matter of fact, was a reaffirmation of previous agreements between Great Britain and France. But its importance, observers said, lay in the fact that this time the French statement was direct and official.

A cabinet sub-committee conferred today on the matter of the oil embargo. The project also contemplates addition of coal, iron and steel to the "key products" which are denied to Italy because they might become sinews of war.

Antony Eden, Great Britain's minister for League affairs, is expected to represent the United Kingdom at the committee of 18 meeting in Geneva two weeks hence.

Defense Plans Secret.

Rome, Nov. 29 (AP).—Official Italy drew a cloak of secrecy about its plans for defense against an oil embargo today, although a government spokesman said such action by the League of Nations would be "an act of very great unfriendliness."

Italy's reprisals, the spokesman insisted, would be determined only after the embargo is declared. He denied the accuracy of reports from high unofficial sources that the Fascist grand council had adopted a program of defense against possible oil sanctions at its meeting November 18.

These sources said the program included withdrawal of diplomatic missions from sanctionist nations, withdrawal from the League of Nations and possibly a sudden attack on the British Mediterranean fleet.

As for the attitude of the United States, authorities said they understood America would continue to ship oil for Italy's civil population but not for her war activities.

Officials expressed pleasure at Premier Pierre Laval's cabinet majority on domestic issues, and took occasion to say that while no important Italian troop movements were going on in Europe, in any case none should be considered as directed at France.

Paris, Nov. 29 (AP).—Premier Pierre Laval's direct support of the safety of the British Mediterranean fleet has advanced the Italo-Ethi-

Embargo Crisis Clouds Outlook For Naval Talk

American Delegation Off as Date of Parley Is Shifted to Dec. 9.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—A menace of war growing out of League of Nations sanctions against Italy seriously threatened the success of the forthcoming London Naval Conference as the American delegation sailed tonight.

The delegates—Norman H. Davis, veteran of international conferences since the World War; William Phillips, Undersecretary of State and close friend of President Roosevelt, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations—had passage on the S. S. Aquitania sailing at midnight.

As a result of the last minute change in date for opening the conference to December 9, the United States representatives will have two days in which to perfect final plans for American participation in the parley.

Under previous plans they would have dashed directly from the boat to the Locarno room in the foreign office in London, a few hours late for the formal opening.

Tension Added Obstacle.

Increasing bitterness between the League nations, led by Great Britain and France, and Italy over proposed embargoes on oil and other essential materials was considered, by diplomatic observers, to add immeasurably to the many difficulties already facing the naval parley.

If the Italian delegation—named today—should assume an aggressive and belligerent position at the conference, it would only multiply the headaches among other delegations.

Since Italy is cast to play a prominent role in any discussions involving naval strength in the Mediterranean, its co-operation is necessary before there can be any adjustment of the European naval situation.

Might Be Last Straw.

In view of the discouraging outlook for achieving any agreement already facing the sea powers' envoys, any particularly new trouble-breeding situation might prove the last straw against success.

The American delegates have already let it be known, however, that they will make every legitimate effort at London to co-operate with the other naval powers in achieving some formula to solve naval problems, regardless of the dark outlook.

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The foreign office announced today that the International Naval Conference will open December 9 to suit the convenience of the delegates from the United States, who would be unable to arrive in time for the scheduled opening, December 6. The naval conference will be attended by representatives of the United States Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy.

Goal of Works Jobs Reached, Williams Says

the number of employable heads of families and single persons on relief. Actually, reports from over the country indicate, the number is somewhat larger.

President Roosevelt's expectation, as he announced his plan, was that while the Government would take care of 3,500,000 persons, an additional 3,500,000 would be absorbed by industry. Most of these latter, while unemployed, have not been on relief. Industry has not absorbed workers in a number even approaching the total projected by the President. Meanwhile, many of these people have been going on relief rolls, and are now a part of the burden of the States, many of which have made no adequate provisions to care for them.

WPA allotments have been made on the theory that projects would be completed within a year. In some instances work will end long before that time, and in others it will continue. The PWA program is expected to absorb many of these workers as the WPA program ends. That part of PWA financed under the $4,880,000,000 appropriation is barely getting started.

Made for 2-Year Period.

The $4,880,000,000 fund is not expected to be exhausted by July 1, the beginning of the next fiscal year, so at least part of the work can be carried past that date. The appropriation was for a two-year period and President Roosevelt recently told the Conference of Mayors that any idea that the Government would cease to assist the needy at the beginning of the fiscal year was "silly."

While industry in some urban manufacturing centers is rapidly absorbing labor, the situation in rural communities is more acute because of seasonal unemployment. The peak of the relief load normally comes during the early months of each year. The ending of the Federal dole will thus coincide with the period of the heaviest load.

Protests from many States are expected to come to Washington with the ending of the dole. The first was received yesterday from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman (Republican), New Jersey, who charged that the works administration had broken faith with his State. His charge was made in a telegram to Williams.

Permanent Program Urged.

Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, who recently predicted that Congress would be asked to appropriate an additional $1,000,000,000 for works relief, yesterday suggested that a permanent public works program be established to be used in time of financial depression. He said that States should be required to care for unemployed when the number declines to 2,000,000, which he said he believes to be normal.

The permanent works program would be ready for use whenever the number of unemployed exceeds this amount. Plans for public works would be on file and ready for immediate use on an emergency. A similar plan has been suggested by Secretary Ickes and by the National Resources Board.

Congress created the FERA—which now officially goes out of existence—on May 12, 1933, with an initial appropriation of $500,000,0000. Harry L. Hopkins was almost immediately named to head the organization. Since, Hopkins had been head of the CWA, the Surplus Relief Corporation and the WPA. The FERA has distributed nearly $1,000,000,000 of the $4,500,000,000 appropriation for direct relief. At one time it was distributing relief money at the rate of $5,000,000 a day.

Between You and Me

Western Dislike of New Deal in Digest Poll Reviewed; Spectral Blue Eagle Flaps.

By Raymond Clapper

The most alarming portent for President Roosevelt is the way the Literary Digest poll is going.

Because these polls have a long history of relatively high accuracy, politicians in both parties take them seriously. If the figures in the current poll are an accurate reflection of sentiment in the States reported, the 1936 outlook for the re-election of President Roosevelt is very dark, indeed. Whether they are a fair index ought to be the most important fact-finding assignment of the Democratic national committee forthwith.

Twelve States are shown in the returns to date. The question was: "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?"

The total vote thus far is 55.89 per cent against the Roosevelt policies. Only two States show up favorably, Georgia voting 67.55 per cent for the New Deal and Texas 61.88 per cent for. Florida drops just below the line, with a vote of 49.39 per cent for. Oklahoma, normally Democratic, musters 51.32 per cent against.

The other eight States, all in the Middle West, show astounding opposition. This is the battleground territory, the area where the Democrats expected to hold traditionally Republican States in in line sufficiently to win. These States go against the New Deal in the following percentages: Illinois, 67.22; Iowa, 58.29; Kansas, 57.13; Minnesota, 63.15; Missouri, 55.57; Nebraska, 59.03; North Dakota, 60.19; Ohio, 65.14.

To appreciate the significance of these figures it should be borne in mind that a 60 per cent majority is a landslide. In 1932, Mr. Roosevelt received 59.15 per cent of the Hoover-Roosevelt vote.

In contrast to these figures, the last survey of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published in The Washington Post November 24, shows Mr. Roosevelt with a 53 per cent majority Nation-wide. This survey places Ohio as a borderline Republican State, Illinois and Minnesota as borderline Democratic States, and the others of the twelve covered by the Literary Digest as definitely Democratic.

The American Institute of Public Opinion's survey was on the basis of the question: "For which candidate would you vote today? Republican? Roosevelt? Socialist? Third Party?"

Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, points out that this canvass was on the question of re-electing Roosevelt while the Literary Digest's is on the question of approving the New Deal policies. He contends that Mr. Roosevelt is more popular than his policies.

Grant that, yet there is a limit to how many voters will oppose the President's policies and still vote for him. Certainly when, as in Illinois, almost seven out of ten vote against the Roosevelt policies, it is stretching the probabilities beyond the point or reason to think that a majority would still vote for the man who is responsible for the policies so widely disapproved.

There is uncertainty as to how completely the Literary Digest taps all strata. Does it confine its canvass to telephone and automobile registration lists? Or does it also include a fair proportion of the bottom layer, the relief clients and those near the borderline? Until those questions are answered it is not possible to assess the accuracy of these figures. The volume of ballots tabulated is large enough, provided they are distributed in correct cross-section to give a reliable index. Almost 35,000 ballots are shown from Iowa and almost 30,000 from Kansas.

These hostile New Deal percentages are surprising to this observer. In Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska they go counter to the private judgment of well-informed opponents of the New Deal. They are contrary to the judgment of a number of political observers who have canvassed that section. The Nebraska and Missouri figures seem incredible to this observer. The Kansas figures would also seem to register a heavier opposition than exists, although all Kansas political sentiment is now colored with the hope that Gov. Landon will be the Republican candidate.

Yet the Literary Digest has every incentive to seek to maintain the history of accuracy which it has built up and it is not easy to discount these figures even though they seem out of line.

A little more will be indicated when the returns are shown from Kentucky, New York State and Pennsylvania, where in the recent elections the Democrats polled a volume of votes which indicated far greater strength than many suspected.

Postmaster General Farley, who has to be an optimist, says the Digest's question concerns policies and that there probably are millions of voters who find fault with some particular detail of the emergency program but who nevertheless will vote for Roosevelt. He says no straw vote can be indicative until the Republicans name their candidate. Perhaps so. But it's not a very convincing answer to the figures.

Col. George A. Lynch of the Fifteenth Infantry at Tienstin is on a hot spot, but he was on a hotter one barely a year ago. Col. Lynch was executive officer of NRA during the most turbulent part of Gen. Johnson's regime. He went back to the Army for peace and quiet.

The ghost of the Blue Eagle still flaps in Delaware. William Mapel, executive editor of the Wilmington Morning News, discovered that an NRA research organization continues to function there, costing some $9,300 a year.

There was a reason why you read no foolish blurbs from Senators and Representatives who went through Japan on the Philippine junket to witness the setting up of the new Commonwealth government. On the way out, they entered into a gentlemen's agreement that Vice President Garner and Speaker Byrns would do the talking for the party.

The Japanese idea of our Congress might be inferred from the statement in the Japan Times that Garner "looked exceptionally well, despite his 30 years as a member of Congress."

Doctor's Own Kin Killed for 'Mercy'

Dr. Lorenz Admits Orders for Lavish Drug Use.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—Dr. Adolf Lorenz, famed Viennese surgeon, disclosed today that two members of his own family were hastened to their graves through a form of "mercy killings" to prevent unnecessary suffering from lingering illnesses.

Dr. Lorenz, here for his annual professional visit, said the two were the first wife of his son, Dr. Albert Lorenz, and an uncle, the 82-year-old Abbot Gregor, of St. Paul Monastery, in Carinthia.

Each was incurably diseased, and the hastening of death was accomplished by excessive administration of narcotics, he said.

"I instructed the physician in charge not to spare narcotics," said Dr. Lorenz, who explained the "lavish" dosage kept the patients oblivious to their extreme discomfort until death.

He expressed the opinion virtually every physician has been a "mercy killer" at one time or another, administering narcotics which shorten life for incurables.

"I would tell my son to do the same for me," he said.

Davey Assails Bulkley; Will Seek Re-election

Kent, Ohio., Nov. 29 (AP).—Gov. Martin L. Davey, (Democrat), announced his candidacy for re-election tonight to an audience of his fellow townsmen and launched into an attack on Senator Robert J. Bulkley, Ohio Democrat. He also attacked a Cleveland newspaper and declared the paper had "maliciously distorted the truth about my administration" and had "deliberately misrepresented my position on relief."

Davey asserted Senator Bulkley "and his little crowd of bitter-enders have sought by every means, fair and foul, to destroy me."

In Cleveland, Bulkley said "the thing is wild. I haven't time to comment on statements like that."

Third Giant Zeppelin Being Built by Germany

Berlin, Nov. 29 (AP).—Germany is building a third giant Zeppelin, an official announcement said today. The new ship, which is already under construction, will be called the LZ 130, it was stated. It will be a sister ship to the LZ 129, which will soon be ready for service.

The announcement said the LZ 130 will be completed in the Friedrichshafen hangar after the LZ 129 is moved out.

Tokyo Gets Soviet Note Protesting Use of Rivers

Moscow, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Soviet government protested today against the alleged appearnace of Japanese vessels on the Amur, Usuri and Sungari rivers along the Soviet-Manchukuo border. The U. S. S. R. maintained this was in violation of an agreement signed in 193, which barred all except Soviet and Manchukuoan vessels from the frontier waterways.

An official statement said the Japanese government had promised to investigate the alleged treaty violations.

Thomas Warns Against 'Credit' Bonus Payment

Only Cash Will Hasten Recovery, Declares Oklahoman.

By the Associated Press.

A warning against paying the bonus in "credit" was sounded yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, with a call for cash payments to hasten economic recovery.

Still at odds with the Administration over its policy of buying silver without remonetizing it at face value, the Oklahoman was asked if he thought paying the bonus would help.

"Absolutely," he told newspapermen. "It will do the job, if they pay it in cash. If it is paid in what amounts only to credit, it will hurt."

Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Appropriations Committee, has hinted that an effort may be made to compromise the bonus issue by exchanging the adjusted service certificates for baby bonds, which the veteran could discount at his bank.

Thomas favors the Patman plan calling for payment in new money.

He said the dollar in November was worth 124.1 cents in commodities, compared with 167 cents when the Roosevelt Administration came in.

"We have taken 43 cents of value out of the dollar during this Administration," he said. "We have cheapened our dollar in commodity values, but it is still 24 cents above the 1926 'Coolidge dollar.' We have got to further cheapen the dollar before we have prosperity."

Without explaining, Thomas said he doubted if there would be any silver legislation the coming Congress, but that "there probably will be silver manipulation."

"We don't need legislation," he declared. "The President has the power to remonetize silver, but we just can't make him do it."

Garner Stays Aboard To Receive Officials

Shimizu, Japan, Nov. 29 (AP).—Vice President John N. Garner did not land when the liner President Jefferson stopped here briefly today, but received local officials on the deck.

The ship, on which Garner is returning to the United States after attending the inauguration of the Philippine commonwealth government and calling on the Emperor of Japan, continued to Yokohama after taking on a load of oranges for the United States.

provided in the act. The new rule simply relieves these utilities from the necessity of applying to the S. E. C. Up to closing time last night, 89 companies had asked the S. E. C. for exemption, some ten applying yesterday.

Four other classes of utilities were exempted until February 3. These included predominantly operating companies with operations confined to the State of operation and adjacent States; companies primarily engaged in businesses other than electric and gas utilities; concerns serving temporarily as holding companies in connection with debt liquidation or security distribution, and companies controlling only foreign systems.

"Affiliates," or persons owning 5 per cent or more of the voting securities of a utility company were exempted until February 3 from applying to the commission for approval of further security purchases, on condition that these are reported within 30 days.

Beset on every side with litigationtion, the commission's legal staff drew some consolation yesterday from a refusal by Federal Judge John P. Nields in Wilmington, Del., to rule on the constitutionality of the utility act without giving the SEC "its day in court."

Judge Nields dismissed a petition filed by trustees for the Central West Public Service Co., seeking determination of the law's validity in connection with proceedings for reorganization under section 77B of the bankruptcy act.

"Day in Court."

According to the Associated Press, Judge Nields ruled the SEC cannot "be destroyed and stripped of its powers without being a party to the proceedings and without having its day in court."

SEC lawyers were cheered, because they thought Judge Nields' ruling strengthened the appeal case against the recent decision of Federal Judge William C. Coleman, in Baltimore, declaring the utility act "invalid in its entirety."

Commission officials said that as "friend of the court" their arguments were similar to Nields' in contesting the Baltimore case, and the Wilmington decision would be cited in the pending circuit court appeal.

The SEC is now seeking to beat the Baltimore case to a Supreme Court test with a suit it picked itself and filed against vast Electric Bond & Share Co. interests in New York early this week.

Although few more registrations are expected, despite eleventh-hour concessions to constitutional rights of utilities, the SEC has decided to keep its doors open all day tomorrow, the last day for registrations under the utility act.

Only one company registered yesterday—the Indiana Southwestern Gas & Utilities Corporation, which has 11 subsidiaries, but in the opinion of some lawyers is entitled to exemption because it operates intrastate. This brought total registrations to three.

At least two more registrations are expected today; the New England Power Association and the Utilities Power & Light, Associated Gas & Electric interests, headed by Howard C. Hupson, were said to be undetermined as to their course of action.

The four suits brought in the District Supreme Court yesterday, contesting the constitutionality of the utilities act, and seeking a court restraining order against the Government, were filed by the law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb.

They represented the United Light & Power Co., United Light & Railways Co., Continental Gas & Electric Co. and American Light & Traction Co., all of Chicago. Joining with the Continental Gas & Electric Co. was the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co., 90 per cent controlled by the former. The companies, operating in 11 States, represent a combined investment of more than $400,000,000.

Earlier this week, the North American Co. and the American Waterworks and Electric Co. had filed suits for injunction here.

Cities Service Sues.

Cities Service Co. interests attacked the validity of the act yesterday in three Federal courts, in New York, Wilmington and Toledo. Suit was brought by the Cities Service Co., the Cities Service Power & Light Co., the Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation, the Ohio Utilities Finance Co., the Toledo Edison Co., Toledo Power & Light Co., and Public Service Co. of Colorado.

In New York another action was brought by Federal Light & Traction Co., a New York corporation, and Central Arkansas Public Service Corporation, its affiliate, a Virginia corporation, according to Associated Press. Suits were brought by the United Corporation and the Cities Service Co. and subsidiaries, in Wilmington.

SEC officials said they were perplexed by applications for exemptions filed by three subsidiaries of the American Waterworks and Electric Co., the main company and another one of its subsidiaries having brought suit for injunction.

Associated Press dispatches from Wilmington said the Federal court there has fixed December 23 for a hearing on the Standard Gas & Electric Co.'s petition assailing constitutionality of the law.

Coal Tax Enjoined.

Kansas City, Kans., Nov. 29 (AP).—Federal Judge John C. Pollock today issued a temporary restraining order preventing Government officials from collecting a 15 per cent tax or "penalty" from four Kansas coal companies refusing to sign the code provided in the Guffey coal law.

Attorneys for the company argued they had been the objects of threats from the Government and asserted administrators of the Guffey statute had informed certain railroads their mail contracts would be canceled if they bought coal from companies not signing the Guffey code.

A. L. Berger, one of the coal companies' attorneys, contended the Guffey act was a "camouflaged NRA."

Government attorneys offered no argument.

Prisoner 'Very Sick'—Kicks Nurse, Flees

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 29 (AP).—Toive Heino feigned appendicitis so realistically that he was taken from his jail cell to a hospital today, kicked a nurse on the shins and escaped.

The 18-year-old Fitchburg resident, booked as an automobile thief, convinced his guard that he needed an immediate operation. He was left unwatched at the hospital by the police ambulance crew because he was "too sick to need a guard."

As nurse Helen Hughes approached to prepare the patient for the operation, he leaped from the stretcher, kicked her, slapped her face and jumped out a window.

Police started looking anew for Toive Heino.

Bank Reduces Interest Rate On Home Loans

Action to Affect Over 300 Financing Institutions in Eight States.

By the Associated Press.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 29.—Reduction of the interest rate on Federal Home Loan Bank loans from 4 per cent to 3½ was announced here today by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem.

The action affects more than 300 financing institutions of the States of Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, and the District of Columbia.

The new rate will become effective January 1, 1936. Existing outstanding loans aggregating nearly $8,000,000 will benefit from the reduction regardless of the rate they are now bearing, bank officers said.

O. K. Laroque, president of the bank, announced the reduction and said "it continues the bank board's policy of making all funds that may be needed for home financing in the district available at rates that will attract borrowers on long terms."

Since April 1 this year, the bank here has had a net increase of more than $3,000,000 in outstanding loans. Loans for the period aggregated $5,695,000, of which approximately $2,695,000 was repaid, Laroque announced.

Japan Adopts Biggest Budget For Army, Navy

Relations With U. S., China and Russia Are Cited as Justifying Rise.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tokyo (Saturday), Nov. 30.—The cabinet approved today the largest army and navy appropriations in the history of the Japanese empire, constituting 46.8 per cent of the total estimated expenditures for the coming fiscal year.

The appropriations were approved after a 21-hour session ending at 9 a. m. The action concluded a week of heated contest over the framing of the budget for the year beginning April 1, 1936.

Acceptance by the cabinet is generally regarded as meaning almost certain passage of the budget estimates by Parliament at its session beginning December 24.

The navy is to receive 552,000,000 yen (about $159,480,000) for a one-year period under the estimates of the new budget, while the army gets 508,000,000 (about $146,870,000).

This compares, respectively, to 530,000,000 and 491,000,000 yen for the present budget.

Totals $658,590,000.

The total of the new budget is estimated at 2,271,000,000 yen (about $658,590,000). The present budget totals 2,122,000,000 yen.

During the budget debates Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, and Gen. Yoshiyuki, minister of war, cited Japan's relations with America, China and Soviet Russia as reasons why larger defense appropriations should be made.

A final minor concession of the army in retreating from its original demands was reported to have permitted an agreement on the budget.

London, Nov. 29.—Japan officially has disavowed to Great Britain responsibility for the North China automony movement, it was learned tonight.

The vice minister in charge of the Japanese foreign office in Tokyo told A. F. H. Wiggin, the British charge d'affaires, that Japan considers the movement to be entirely Chinese and wholly spontaneous, authoritative sources said.

Japan is watching the Chinese developments as an interested spectator, the vice minister stated.

Wiggin was said to have sought clarification of conflicting reports on the situation.

It was understood the charge d'affaires, who is handling British diplomatic affairs in the absence of Ambassador Sir Robert Clive in China, had not called the nine-power treaty to Japan's attention pending further instructions.

Held a "Dodge."

In London the Japanese viewpoint was accepted as a polite diplomatic dodge, and it left the future course of British action unclarified.

Despite the response, informed sources said it was clear the Japanese are resorting to almost the exact tactics they used in presenting Manchukuo to the world as an independent state, over which they professed to have no jurisdiction.

There was no official indication that London or any other major power was prepared to do more than disapprove North China's secession in case it develops fully.

However, some persons suggested the British might refuse to recognize any government set-up in the affected zone.

Informed sources said the United States was being kept advised of the British viewpoint on the North China situation.

Tientsin (Saturday, Nov. 30.—Sung Cheh-Yuan, governor of Hopei province and overlord of Charar, has decided to telegraph Nanking that he will declare autonomy of these two provinces unless the central government makes wide concessions immediately, Japanese newspapermen said today.

The Japanese said the conditions are such that Nanking will not be able to grant them and that autonomy for Hopei and Charar may be expected " in the very near future."

Chinese believed the Japanese report was correct since the Japanese military has been increasing its pressure on Sung for the past 48 hours.

Sung received Japanese newspapermen in Peiping. He did not explain what "concessions" he had asked from Nanking, but did admit that he expected his request to be refused.

Han Ready to Follow.

Once Sung declares autonomy it was believed Han Fu-Chu, Governor of Shantung and Yen Hsi-Shan, who controls Shansi and Suiyuan Provinces, would have to fall into line.

Meantime, the Japanese army continued to tighten its grip on north China.

Despite a formal protest by the Nanking government to Japanese Ambassador Akira Ariyoshi, Japanese soldiers remained in control of the Peiping-Tientsin-Shanhaikwan section of the Peiping-Mukden Railway and continued to prevent movement of rolling stock from the north China lines southward to the Nanking-controlled Yangtse Valley.

Informal British representations in Tokyo were equally ineffective, although Japanese commanders reiterated that British railway and mining enterprises in the north China region will be guarded scrupulously and their revenues respected.

The visits of the British charge d'affaires in Tokyo to the Japanese foreign office further irritated the Japanese military here who repeatedly have accused Britain of instigating Chinese opposition to Japan.

"Britain has no more right to ask us to 'clarify' our attitude towards China than we would have to ask her to clarify her attitude towards Italy," the army spokesman said. "Britain should confine her activity to the areas in which she has really vital interests."

Dr. Sze Talks With Hull.

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese ambassador, called on Secretary Hull late yesterday to inform him of developments in the North China movement for autonomy.

The Chinese envoy said he acted on direct instructions from the Nanking central government, which he says has protested against alleged Japanese influence in the North China separatist movement.

Beyond this statement and explaining he wished to convey "certain information" to Hull, Sze would not comment.

Asked by newsmen whether he directed the secretary's attention to Japanese obligations under the nine-power treaty, the ambassador replied any announcement concerning his visit must come from Hull.

At the State Department it was said the Chinese envoy brought no specific proposals.

United States Protests to Japan.

Tokyo (Saturday), Nov 30 (AP).—The newspaper Asahi reported today that the United States had made representations to Japan because of asserted nonfulfillment of a textile export agreement affecting the Philippines and that Japan had rejected them.

Mrs. Hert Resigns As G. O. P. Official

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee yesterday announced "with regret" the resignation of Mrs. Alvin T. Hert as vice chairman of the Republican national committee after 12 years of consecutive membership in that body and 11 as its vice chairman. In that capacity she has headed women's activities in three Republican presidential campaigns.

At its meeting here on December 16 the national committee may fill the vacant vice chairmanship for Mrs. Hert's unexpired term, which ends at the Republican convention next June.

Mrs. Hert's interest in organization work among Republican women began in 1916, when her husband, the late Alvin T. Hert, serving as national committeeman from Kentucky, managed the Western campaign of Charles Evans Hughes for the Presidency. After Mr. Hert's death in 1921 his successor as national committeeman recommended Mrs. Hert as national committeewoman from Kentucky in 1923. The committee in 1924 chose her as its first vice chairman and because of her success in organizing women during subsequent Congressional and Presidential campaigns, she was re-elected in 1928 and 1932.

In New York the Associated Press reported, Mrs. Hert said the resignation was due only to her desire to relinquish the duties to some other woman and remarked that no matter of policy was involved.

How to Keep Colds UNDER better CONTROL

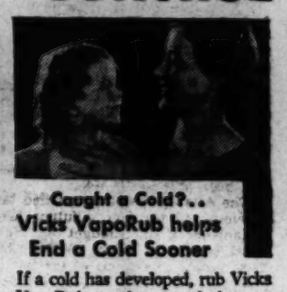
Catching Cold?.. Vicks Va-tro-nol helps Prevent many Colds



Caught a Cold?.. Vicks VapoRub helps End a Cold Sooner

At the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. It stimulates Nature's own functions—in the nose—to help prevent colds, and to throw off head colds in their early stages. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps avoid many colds.

If a cold has developed, rub Vicks VapoRub on throat and chest at bedtime. VapoRub acts direct—two ways at once: (1) By stimulation through the skin like a poultice or plaster; (2) By inhalation of its medicated vapors direct to inflamed air-passages. Through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break congestion.

Follow Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds

A helpful guide to fewer colds and shorter colds. Developed by Vicks Chemists and Medical Staff; tested in extensive clinics by practicing physicians—further proved in everyday home use by millions. The Plan is fully explained in each Vicks package.

Fletcher Hits Economy Talk By Roosevelt

Atlanta Speech 'Political Propaganda,' Declares G. O. P. Chairman.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican national committee, last night said President Roosevelt's Atlanta statement on the prospective smaller deficit for next year was "sheer political propaganda."

"It is on a par with the promises of a balanced budget which he made during the 1932 campaign," Fletcher declared, adding that "we all know this definite promise was not fulfilled."

"As a candidate, Mr. Roosevelt is for economy," he said; "as a President, he is a spender."

The statement by the Republican chairman brought almost the only comment available here on the President's speech. Other persons approached for comment said they had not yet read the address.

Cites Current Trend.

Fletcher cited "the current trend of expenditures" in insisting the President's Atlanta statement "has no substance." He said that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, the average daily deficit of the Government was $8,350,000, while for this fiscal year, through November 15, that daily average was $12,665,000.

He called upon the President to "take the country into his confidence" and name the bankers who said in 1933 that the country could stand a debt of between $55,000,000,000 and $70,000,000,000.

He termed "misleading" the President's statement that the "so-called recoverable assets" will be used for the purpose of reducing the public debt, insisting these assets are not available for reduction of the public debt so long as the Government operates at a deficit.

Mr. Roosevelt's reference to the credit of the United States being the best in the world was attributed to the low rate of interest at which the Government is operating, a rate which Fletcher called "the result of the Administration's manipulation of the market for Government bonds and its forcing of obligations upon the commercial banks."

Credit Is Different

Declaring the President "continually confuses the United States of America and the American Government with his own temporary experimental administration," the Republican chairman said "the credit of the United States Government is an entirely different thing from the credit of the Roosevelt Administration."

"The credit of the country," he continued, "has been built up through many years of sound financial policy on the part of Republican administrations and even the record of extravagant and of questionable financial and market policies of the New Deal have not yet been able to debase it."

The Atlanta speech was called "an obvious build-up for a future fake balancing of the budget by New Deal sleight of hand. When this new rabbit comes out of the hat it will be recognized as just another smart trick to mislead and fool the pepole," he continued.

Holding that "the extravagances of the Roosevelt Administration are making our taxes unbearable," he said, "it is not only men in clubs who have suffered from the Roosevelt wild spending, but the millions who have been kept on a near-starvation standard of living while the New Deal foisted one futile and costly experiment after another upon the American people."

"The sudden interest in economy shown by Candidate Roosevelt," he said further, "springs not from a desire to cease his political spending and squandering, but from his tardy realization that the long-suffering citizens are about to call a halt."

Austro-Hungary Pact Is Hinted After Visit

Vienna, Nov. 29 (AP).—The visit of Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary to Vienna gave rise to speculation in diplomatic circles today on the possibility of an Austro-Hungarian military understanding. Goemboes left for Budapest after conferences with Chancellor Kurt Schschnigg, President Wilhelm Miklas and Foreign Minister Egon Berger-Waldenegg.

Some diplomats said there was an increasing possibility of a mutual assistance agreement because Italy's preoccupation in Ethiopia might deprive Austria and Hungary of the aid of a strong ally.

Strike Pickets Injure U. S. Deputy, 4 Others

Minneapolis, Nov. 29 (AP).—Five men were injured today when strike pickets attempted to halt a truck moving merchandise from the Strutwear Knitting Co. plant, shut since last August because of labor trouble.

John J. Kane, deputy United States marshal, was among the injured. Pickets hurled stones and rocks at trucks leaving the factory. Four drivers were cut and were taken to a hospital. Movement of goods from the plant was authorized by an order issued in Federal court last week.

$1 Fine Meted Woman For Killing Husband

Portland, Ore., Nov. 29 (AP).—Agnes Spadefore was fined $1 and given a suspended 18 months jail sentence today for killing her husband, Carl Spadefore, 44, with a stove iron.

Convicted of manslaughter after testifying she struck him because he beat her, Mrs. Spadefore was paroled by Circuit Judge John Winter that she might care for her five children.

Ex-Rep. Simmons Dies.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP).—Former Representative James S. Simmons, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., died here last night after a heart attack suffered earlier in the week. With him at the time of death was his son, M. M. Simmons, who had been summoned from Niagara Falls.

'... And Now, Good-bye, My Friends—'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Heard by a crowd of 50,000 at Atlanta, Ga., yesterday, President Roosevelt is shown waving good-by to the throng after completing speech. Despite near-freezing weather, one of the largest crowds in Dixie political history listened to the address. Senator Richard S. Russell, jr., is at right.

50,000 Hear Roosevelt Hit Relief Critics, Defend Costs

in his criticism of the New Deal. The point of this demonstration was to take the heart out of Talmadge followers and indicate to the Nation that Georgia was supporting Mr. Roosevelt against its Governor.

Seldom, if ever, has a Governor of a State been left so completely and coldly out of a great civic and political demonstration as was Gov. Talmadge today. He was ignored on every hand, except during the early hours of the morning when he was "hanged" in effigy on a tree on the capitol lawn by a group of 50 men.

Given Secondary Seat.

All arrangements for the President's visit seemed designed to ignore Gov. Talmadge; he was invited to attend the mass meeting at Grant Stadium, but he was assigned a seat for secondary guests of honor. He showed contempt for the demonstration by being absent, spending the day on his farm at McRae, Ga., "farming and hunting —hunting something to plant on which there is no processing tax," he asserted in a brief statement of defiance.

Aside from indirect slaps at him, Gov. Talmadge was ignored at the mass meeting, none mentioning his name. The President, in beginning his speech, however, pointedly thanked the Georgia delegation for planning the reception given him, and a few minutes later Mr. Roosevelt indirectly answered the Talmadge criticism that "you cannot spend yourself wealthy."

"Your Government," the President asserted, "says to you you cannot borrow your way out of debt, but you can invest your way into a sounder future."

Other slaps at the Governor were delivered by Senator Walter F. George, who, in presenting Mr. Roosevelt, declared that there was "not a Benedict Arnold" in the Georgia Congressional delegation, nor in all three of Atlanta's daily newspapers.

The Atlanta Constitution this morning published a four-page rotogravure of phoographs of prominent Georgians and those participating in the welcome to the President. Gov. Talmadge's picture was missing.

Primary Sought.

Moreover, early in the day a group of the Democratic State executive committee adopted resolutions promising the State a preferential primary for the selection of delegates to the next Democratic national convention and threatening, if the Talmadge-controlled committee did otherwise, to hold a rump primary and send a rump delegation to the national convention favoring renomination of the President.

Since today's demonstration was made a test of popularity between the President and Gov. Talmadge, it is apparent that Atlanta, at least, is overwhelmingly for Mr. Roosevelt. Nothing was left undone to make the day a memorable one. For instance, for three straight hours, local radio stations this morning broadcast nothing but eulogies of the President.

Too Enthusiastic.

In their enthusiasm, the Atlanta newspapers somewhat overshot their mark. They predicted from 100,000 to 500,000 persons from outside of Atlanta and other Southern States would come here for the "home-coming." They further predicted 85,000 persons would jam Grant Stadium to hear the President speak.

Far fewer than the most conservative estimates of out-of-town visitors actually came, while not more than 50,000 persons were in Grant Stadium when the President started speaking. The bowl seats approximately 30,000 and almost two sections at the far end of the amphitheater were empty. Approximately 15,000 persons—if that many—stood in the playing field where it was expected there would be at least 50,000.

Perhaps the sharp, stinging wind which cut across the stadium was responsible for the failure of a maximum crowd to materialize. Perhaps, as some here suggested, the extravagant predictions of crowds from out-of-town and the extreme traffic regulations adopted for the day discouraged many who had planned to go to the stadium. Or, perhaps, as an up-State political leader privately suggested:

"Talmadge is stronger than many people think."

Not a Failure.

But the demonstration was by no means a failure. Atlanta was filled with shrieking sirens from daybreak until dawn, as motorcycle squads escorted motorcades of distinguished guests around the city. Large motor parties came from Florida, South Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee, each headed by the Governors of those States. Special trains came from Washington and throughout the South.

Tens of thousands of persons, blowing on their chilled hands, greeted the President as he rode in an open automobile through the city. More than a score of bands marched through the streets and constantly played in the stadium during that meeting. Hotels were jammed as luncheons, teas, dinners and dances added a social touch to the day's activities. Many stores and business houses were closed for all or part of the day.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt left the "Little White House" at Warm Springs a few minutes after 9 o'clock for the 76-mile trip to Atlanta. Small towns through which they passed were gayly decorated, while the populace turned out practically en masse to wave flags and cheer the President.

Greeted by Mayor.

On the ouskirts of Atlanta, at Fort McPherson, the President was greeted by Mayor James L. Key and the State's entire congressional delegation. Thus augmented, the party of 25 automobiles wound through Atlanta's business section and out to the stadium, the President constantly waving his hat to the crowds.

On the way to the stadium, the President paused momentarily at a park to receive a greeting from 100,000 Georgia school children and to congratulate them on their Americanism. He also stopped to unveil a marker at the Techwood housing project, an Atlanta slum clearance undertaking financed with PWA funds, nearing completion.

Entering the stadium on the arm of his eldest son, James, and with Mrs. Roosevelt at his side, the President was greeted with a mighty shout that echoed blocks away. Senator Richard B. Russell, serving as master of ceremonies, hailed the President as a saviour who had led the country out of darkness. He reminded his audience that "we stand on the soil of a commonwealth which has never seen the flag of the Democratic Party hauled down."

"Broke Fear's Grip."

Senator George, in presenting Mr. Roosevelt as "the President and the next President" eulogized him as a leader who had broken the "grip of fear," which held the Nation in March, 1933. His contention that among the Georgia delegation in Congress there was "not a Benedict Arnold" brought loud cheers.

Removing his overcoat, President Roosevelt started his address by expressing his pride in the progress which Georgia was making. Three times he used the word "progress" in his first paragraph, and subsequently asserted it was a better word than "recovery."

In hailing the returning prosperity of the country, Mr. Roosevelt explained he did not mean the prosperity which preceded the depression—a prosperity under which the cotton planter never knew when he planted his cotton whether it would bring 25 cents or 5 cents a pound and in which the poor vied with the rich in land and stock speculation.

"Fool's Paradise."

"Those were years for a fool's paradise," he continued, followed by the gloom and disaster of the 1929-33 period. But, he added, there was no need to recall the latter years. Suffice to say that before it was too late America turned about and started on an upward path.

Thus was inaugurated the New Deal which set to work to end "unfairly low prices" for farm products by curbing production, saving homes, guaranteeing bank deposits, abolishing child labor, establishing collective bargaining for labor, regulating stock-market activities and public utilities and setting up as a "prime achievement" the social security program.

Visualizing a new future for the country, the President pointed out the underconsumption afflicting the Nation and explained that it could only be cured through increasing the purchasing power of the masses. Steps toward this end already had been taken, he said, adding that farm income since 1932 had risen three billion dollars, due to increased prices for wheat, cotton and corn. Those increased prices, he indicated, were due to the AAA curb on production.

This increased farm purchasing power, he added, has meant the "rebirth of city business," the reopening of closed factories; the doubling of automobile production; improvement in transportation and the re-employment of millions.

Fed the Starving.

Yet unemployment remained as a great problem, he said. The President asserted "that an honest government has no choice" except to feed and care for starving people. It was at this point that he lashed at those critics who sit in "well-warmed and well-stocked clubs."

The President offered to show these critics not only the necessity for the expenditures being made, but the "definite and beneficial results we have attained with the dollars we have spent." Those who urge a return to the dole, he asserted, do not realize "we are dealing with properly self-respecting Americans to whom a mere dole outrages every instinct of individual independence."

Pointing out that he had achieved substantially his work relief program, Mr. Roosevelt cited the material benefits resulting from the expenditure of relief funds, in the way of housing projects, highways, school buildings, sewage projects and the CCC work, the latter reference being roundly applauded.

The remainder of the President's speech was devoted to an explanation and defense of the increasing national debt; his contention that the Nation had again climbed from insolvency to solvency and that "American life had improved in those two years and a half, and if I have anything to do with it, it is going to improve more in the days to come."

Returns to Cottage.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt returned to his cottage on Pine Mountain early tonight from his homecoming day celebration in Atlanta. The President's party arrived at 5:50 p. m., central standard time.

Obviously thrilled by the tremendous reception given him througout the long day, the President stopped at the Warm Springs Foundation before going up the hillside road and shook hands with drivers of the cars in the Presidential motorcade.

On the return home this evening from Atlanta, as on the way there this morning, the folks of every village, city and cross roads were out apparently en masse to wave greetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and members of their party stopped at Fort McPherson again on the return and were luncheon guests of Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, commander of the Fourth Corps Area.

Charles West, the Undersecretary of the Interior, met the President at Atlanta and returned here with him to spend a day or so.

New Deal Trails In Straw Balloting

Literary Digest Poll Shows 55% Disapproval.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 29.—Incomplete returns from 12 States in the Literary Digest's national straw ballot show a further increase this week in the majority of votes registering disapproval of President Roosevelt's New Deal acts and policies.

The magazine said 207,087 votes have been tallied, of which 91,351 show aproval of the New Deal and 115,736 express opposition.

The votes so far counted, the Digest said, are from Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma and Texas.

The Digest's report shows 55.89 per cent of the ballots counted opposed to the New Deal. A week ago the opposition votes amounted to 53.28 per cent.

Iowa Real Estate Man Hanged as Wife Slayer

Fort Madison, Iowa, Nov. 29 (AP).—Reginald Tracy, 54, Manchester, Iowa, real estate man, was hanged at Iowa State Penitentiary today for slaying his wife. The trap was sprung at 7:11 a. m. and Tracy was pronounced dead one minute later. Tracy told Sheriff Harry G. Utley, of Manchester, that he hoped his execution "would be a lesson to someone."

Tracy was convicted of plotting his wife's death with Mrs. Flossie Fear, now serving a life sentenece. The actual slaying, Tracy said, was committed by Adolph Berg, a former convict, during a faked holdup. Berg is a fugitive.

Deer 'Goes to Town,' Breaks Shop Window

Danbury, Conn., Nov. 29 (AP).—A year-old buck deer appeared suddenly in the business section of Danbury late today, dived through a plate glass window of a locksmith shop, ran out the door and dashed up the main street into woods north of the city.

The deer jumped a 7-foot fence and a parked car on its wild flight. Its swift passage through the locksmith shop fanned the cards from a desk on which Daniel Elwell, 70, was playing solitaire. Unexcited, Elwell calmly picked up the cards and resumed his game.

Text of President Roosevelt's Talk

Employment Goal Set in Spring Achieved, Georgians Told.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30.—The text of the address delivered here today by President Roosevelt at the Georgia homecoming celebration follows:

I am happy to be in Georgia. I am proud of Georgia. Happy because of this moving reception which my friends, the Senators and Representatives in the Congress from this State, have tendered me, and which you, the good people of this State, have responded to with such warmth and hospitality. Happy because I meet again so many old friends and neighbors. Proud because I see signs on every hand that the overwhelming majority of the people of this State are keeping pace with the millions of others throughout the Nation who believe in progress, are willing to work for progress and are going to get progress. Proud because I see clear signs of a revival of material prosperity in country and in city, and especially because I sense a swelling prosperity of the spirit that spells a greater help and a deeper happiness for our fellow men.

Eleven years ago I came to live at Warm Springs for the first time. That was a period of great so-called prosperity. But I would not go back to the conditions of 1924, and I do not believe that you people would want to go back, either. Of that year and of the five years that followed, I have a clear recollection which you can verify for yourselves. In that orgy of "prosperity" a wild speculation was building speculative profits for the speculators and preparing the way for the public to be left "holding the bag." In that orgy of "prosperity," banks, individually and by chains, were closing their doors at the expense of the depositors. In that orgy of "prosperity" the farmers of the South had become involuntary speculators themselves, never certain when they planted their cotton whether it would bring 25 cents or 15 cents or 5 cents. In that orgy of "prosperity" the poorest vied with the richest in throwing their earnings and their savings into a cauldron of land and stock speculation. In that orgy of "prosperity" slum conditions went unheeded, better education was forgotten, usurious interest charges mounted, child labor continued, starvation wages were too often the rule instead of the exception. Mammon ruled America.

Fool's Paradise.

Those are the years to remember —those fool's paradise years before the crash came. Too much do we harp on the years that followed, when from 1929 to 1933 this Nation slipped spirally downward—ever downward—to the inevitable point when the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop on March 3, 1933.

You and I need not rehearse the four years of disaster and gloom. We know the simple fact that at the end of those years America acted before it was too late, that we turned about and by a supreme, well-nigh unanimous national effort, started on the upward path again.

I have reason to remember the past 2½ years that have gone by so quickly, reason to remember the fine spirit of the average of American citizenship which made my task lighter. Memory is short, but yours is not too short to recollect those great meetings of the representatives of the farmers, regionally and in Washington, in the spring and summer of 1933, when they agreed overwhelmingly that unfair low prices for farm crops could never be raised to and maintained at a reasonable level until and unless the Government of the United States acted to help them to reduce the tremendous carry-overs and surpluses which threatened us and the whole world.

You and I can well remember the overwhelming demand that the national Government come to the rescue of the home owners and the farm owners of the Nation who were losing the roofs over their heads through inflated valuation and exorbitant rates of interest.

You and I still recollect the need for and the successful attainment of a banking policy which not only opened the closed banks but guaranteed the deposits of the depositors of the Nation.

You and I have not forgotten the enthusiastic support that succeeded, and still in part succeeds, in ending the labor of children in mills and factories, in seeking a fairer wage level for those on starvation pay and in giving to the workers hope for the right collectively to bargain with their employers.

You and I will not forget the long struggle to put an end to the indiscriminate distribution of "fly-by-night" securities, and to provide fair regulation of the Stock Exchange and of the great interstate public utility companies of our country.

You and I—yes, every individual and every family in the land—are being brought close to that supreme achievement of the present Congress—the social security law which, in days to come, will provide the aged against distressing want, will set up a national system of insurance for the unemployed and will extend well-merited care to sick and crippled children.

Enlisted in Crusade.

You and I are enlisted today in a great crusade in every part of the land to co-operate with nature and not to fight her, to stop destructive floods, to prevent dust storms and the washing away of our precious soils, to grow trees, to give thousands of farm families a chance to live, and to seek to provide more and better food for the city dwellers of the Nation.

In this connection it is, I think, of interest to point out that national surveys prove that the average of our citizenship lives today on what would be called by the medical fraternity a third-class diet. If the country lived on a second-class diet, we would need to put many more acres than we use today back into the production of foodstuffs for domestic consumption. If the Nation lived on a first-class diet, we would have to put more acres than we have ever cultivated into the production of an additional supply of things for Americans to eat.

Why, speaking in broad terms in following up this particular illustration, are we living on a third-class diet? For the very simple reason that the masses of the American people have not got the purchasing power to eat more and better food.

Farm Income Up.

I mentioned a few weeks ago that farm income in the United States has risen since 1932 a total of nearly $3,000,000,000. That is because wheat is selling at better than 90 cents instead of 32 cents; corn, at 50 cents instead of 12 cents; cotton, at 12 cents instead of at 4½ cents, and other crops in proportion. I wonder what cotton would be selling at today if during these last three years we had continued to produce 15 or 16 or 17 million bales each year, adding to our own surplus, adding to the world surplus, and driving the cotton farmers of the South into bankruptcy and starvation. The additional $3,000,000,000 of farm income has meant the rebirth of city business, the reopening of closed factories, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people.

That brings us squarely face to face with the fact of the continued unemployment of many millions of persons of whom approximately 3,500,000 are employables in need of relief. When some of the people of a great and wealthy country are suffering from starvation, an honest government has no choice. At first, realizing that we were not doing a perfect thing, but that we were doing a necessary saving and human thing, we appropriated money for direct relief. That was necessary to ward off actual starvation. But as quickly as possible we turned to the job of providing actual work for those in need.

Would Show Facts.

I can realize that gentlemen in well-warmed and well-stocked clubs will discourse on the expenses of government and the suffering they are going through because the Government is spending money for work relief. I wish I could take some of these men out on the battle line of human necessity and show them the facts that we in the Government are facing. If these more fortunate Americans will come with me, I will not only show them the necessity for the expenditures of this Government, but I will show them, as well, the definite and beneficial results we have attained with the dollars we have spent. Some of these gentlemen tell me that a dole would be more economical than work relief. That is true. But the men who tell me that have, unfortunately, too little contact with the true America to realize that in this business of relief we are dealing with properly self-respecting Americans to whom a mere dole outraged every instinct of individual independence.

Most Americans want to give something for what they get. That something, in this case honest work, is the saving barrier between them and moral distintegration. We propose to build that barrier high.

Last April I stated what I have held to, consistently ever since—that it was the hope of the Administration that by sometime in November of this year we would substantially end the dole and offer in place of it employment to by far the greater part of the 3,500,000 employable persons we estimated to be on the relief rolls in the United States.

Foes Ignore Truth.

Week after week since then some individuals and some groups, careless of the truth and regardless of scruple, have sought to make the American people believe that this program was a hopeless failure and that it could not possibly succeed.

Today is November 29. It gives me a certain satisfaction to be able to inform you, and through you the Nation, that on Wednesday, two days ago, there were 3,125,000 persons at work on various useful projects throughout the Nation. The small remaining number have received orders to report to work on projects already under way or ready to be started. This result, I believe you will agree with me, constitutes a substantial and successful national achievement.

Aside from the tremendous increase in morale through substituting work for a dole, there is the practical side of permanent material benefit. Within sight of us today stands a tribute to useful work under Government supervision—the first slum clearance and low rent housing project.

Cleared 9 Blocks.

Here, at the request of the citizens of Atlanta, we have cleaned out nine square blocks of antiquated, squalid dwellings, for years a detriment to this community. Today those hopeless old houses are gone and in their place we see the bright, cheerful buildings of the Techwood housing project. Within a very short time, people who never before could get a decent roof over their heads will live here in reasonable comfort amid healthful, worthwhile surroundings; others will find similar homes in Atlanta's second slum clearance, the university project; and still others will find similar opportunity in nearly all of the older, overcrowded cities of the United States.

I take it that it has been equally worthwhile to the Nation to give jobs to the unemployed in the construction of a vast network of highways, including thousands of miles of farm-to-market roads, in repairing great numbers of schools and building hundreds of new ones in city and country, in helping cities to put in sewers and sewage disposal plants and waterworks; in constructing cold storage warehouses and county recreational buildings; in creating aviation fields; in giving a million boys a chance to go to CCC camps and to work on forestry and on soil erosion prevention; in controlling malaria; in pushing health projects; in putting white collar workers into jobs of permanent usefulness to their communities, and in giving youth an opportunity for better education.

Into the ears of many of you have been dinned the cry that your Government is piling up an unconscionable and backbreaking debt. Let me tell you a simple story: In the spring of 1933 many of the great bankers of the United States flocked to Washington. They were there to get help of their Government in the saving of their banks from insolvency. To them I pointed out, in all fairness, the simple fact that the Government would be compelled to go heavily into debt for a few years to come, in order to save banks and insurance companies and mortgage companies, and railroads, and to take care of millions of people who were on the verge of starvation. Every one of these gentlemen expressed to me the firm conviction that it was all well worth the price and that they heartily approved.

Asked Debt Views.

In order to get their further judgment, however, I asked them what they thought the maximum national debt of the United States Government could rise to without serious danger to the national credit. Their answers, remembering this was in the spring of 1933, were that the country could safely stand a national debt of between fifty-five and seventy billion dollars. I told them that a rise in the national debt to any such figure was, in my judgment, wholly unnecessary, and that even if they, the bankers, were willing I could not and would not go along with them. I told them then that only a moderate increase in the debt for the next few years seemed likely and justified. That objective holds good today; but remember that at that time many bankers and big business men would have been willing to put the country far deeper into debt than I shall ever let it go.

If the bankers thought the country could stand a debt of fifty-five to seventy billion dollars in 1933, with values as they were then, I wonder what they would say the country could stand today, in the light of an enormous increase of values of property of all kinds all along the line since 1933.

Your Government says to you: "You can not borrow your way out of debt; but you can invest your way into a sounder future."

As a matter of actual fact, of course, the gross national debt under the last Administration rose from a little over seventeen billions to twenty-one billions. The day I came into office I found that the National Treasury contained only $158,000,000 or, at the rate of previously authorized expenditures, enough to last the Treasury less than a month. Since March 4, 1933, the national debt has risen from twenty-one billions to twenty-nine and one-half billions, but it must also be remembered that today, included in this figure is nearly 1½ billions of working balance in the Treasury and nearly four and one-half million dollars of recoverable assets which the Government will get back over a period of years, and which will be used for the retirement of debt.

Have Passed Peak.

As things stand today, and in the light of a definite and continuing economic improvement, we have passed the peak of appropriations; revenues without the imposition of new taxes are increasing, and we can look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit. The credit of the Government is today higher than that of any other great nation in the world, in spite of attacks on that credit made by those few individuals and organizations which seek to dictate to the Administration and to the Congress how to run the national Treasury and how to let the needy starve.

In the spring of 1933, if you and I had made a national balance sheet, we should have found that if we added up the values of all the property of every kind in the United States owned by American citizens, the total of these values, which we would call assets, would have been exceeded by the figure representing the total of all the debts owed by the people of the United States. In other words, at that time our national balance sheet, the wealth vs. the debts of the American public, showed that we were in the red. Today, less than three years later, it is a fact that the total of all the debts in the United States is lower than it was then. Whereas on the other side of the picture, you and I know that the values of property of all kinds—farms, automobiles, securities—and every other kind of property, have increased so greatly since 1933 that today we are once more in the black. We were insolvent; today we are solvent.

In this fact most of find a deep satisfaction. But recovery means something more than getting the country back into the black. You and I do not want just to go back to the past. We want to face the future in the belief that human beings can enjoy more of the good things of life, under better conditions, than human beings ever enjoyed in the past. American life has improved in these two years and a half, and if I have anything to do with it, it is going to improve more in the days to come. The word "progress" is a better word than "recovery," for it means not only a sound business and a sound agriculture from the material point of view, but it means, with equal importance, a sound improvement in American life as a result of continuing and forceful effort on the part of our people and, through them, on the part of their Government. I am certain that that is your purpose; and that is why I continue my confidence, my faith, in the people of America.

Richberg Plans Talks To Support New Deal

By the Associated Press.

Donald R. Richberg, former recovery chieftain, soon after the first of the year will start a series of speeches supporting the New Deal and President Roosevelt's general objectives.

In supporting the New Deal, Richberg will be breaking what amounts almost to a precedent established by retired Administration chieftains. Half a dozen of them have been highly critical since departing from its staff, although Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities Commisison, has maintained friendly relations with the New Deal.

The list of critics includes Lewis Douglas, former budget director; Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, although he still supports the President, personally; O. M. W. Sprague, former Treasury adviser; James P. Warburg, adviser at the London economic conference, and a number of lesser figures.

Richberg recently has completed a book, a study of the NRA and future possibilities along that line.

Party's Rally InPhiladelphia, Roosevelt Aim

Renomination in East Seen as Campaign Aid, Says Baltimore Paper.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 29.—The Sun says "unless there is a change of mind, and a change is most unlikely, the Democrats will hold their next national convention in Philadelphia."

The paper, in a copyright dispatch by J. F. Essary from Washington, said "it is Mr. Roosevelt's wish at the moment that he be renominated in the City of Brotherly Love.

"This decision, it is learned further, has been dictated by two important considerations. One involves campaign strategy, and the other involves the convenience of many hundreds of Eastern delegates; also the convenience of the President himself.

"Mr. Roosevelt • • • wishes to keep in hourly touch with the proceedings of the convention. • • •

Regarding the "campaign strategy" of the move, the Sun says:

"From the standpoint of strategy, it has been argued effectively in White House circles that the Democratic battle next year will be to hold such States as Pennsylvania and New York in the party column.

"The West is important, too, but it is an accepted fact that the New Deal has a distinct, perhaps a decisive, advantage in that region.

"Among the Eastern States, Pennsylvania is regarded as most susceptible to such campaign influences as a national convention hurrah. • • •

"Senator Joseph F. Guffey, • • • has convinced the White House, it is said, that the presence of the Democratic convention in Philadelphia next year will be worth from 50,000 to 100,000 votes in the State. • • •"

Women to Force Equal Rights Issue

Feminine Leaders Planning Legislative Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Feminine leaders gathered tonight to battle for an 18-word addition to the United States Constitution.

The addition, "men and women shall have equal rights through the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction," would constitute the twenty-second amendment, granting to women the equal citizenship which the National Woman's Party now contends is denied them.

The proposed amendment will be the chief topic at the party's two-day convention opening tomorrow.

An early arrival, Mrs. Helen Hunt West, of Jacksonville, Fla., vice chairman of the party congressional committee, declared there were 1,000 State laws plus the Federal economy act's "marriage clause" which deprive women of the right to earn a livelihood.

Edith Maxwell Defense Fund Totals $221.45

Contributors' Letters Voice Indignation at Girl's 'Unfair' Trial.

As several women's organizations throughout Virginia prepared to take action leading to the retrial and acquittal of Edith Maxwell, Wise County, Va., school teacher facing a 25-year prison term for killing her father with a shoe heel, additional contributions were received for The Washington Post defense fund.

The letters with the contributions expressed the same righteous indignation which prompted The Post, in the interests of justice, to take up the cause of Miss Maxwell, believing shat she killed her father only as a last resort of self-defense.

The trial brought out the fact that her father was drunk at the time he threatened to beat and even kill, his daugher because she refused to follow the ways of the hill country and stayed out at night after the curfew.

The following are samples picked at random from the letters received yesterday:

"It would be a disgrace to the whole country if such a punishment to an innocent woman be carried out."

"Self-preservation is the first law of nature. When anyone's life is in danger from a drunken parent, any child would and should have a right to protect herself."

"This girl was not judged by a jury of her peers, as the law requires. And, being of age, she surely is entitled to mold her own life, and not be subjected to the ancient law of the hills."

"I wish my contribution could be larger. However, if everyone who is indignant at this outrageous injustice gives something, I am sure there will be enough. The girl should be tried in some other place and by civilized people of the twentieth century, not by those who are still living in the Middle Ages.

The following contributions were received, making a total to date of $221.45 received:

Blow Is Blamed In Dize's Death; Veteran Is Held

Mrs. Dize and Her Son Also Seized After Home Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., Nov. 29.—State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix received an autopsy report today stating that Arthur A. Dize, Crisfield grocer, died of a brain hemorrhage "induced by a blow on the head."

William Powell, 40-year-old World War veteran, has been formally charged with the murder of Dize and is being held in jail here. He had nothing to say regarding the charge.

Dize was slain last week-end when he was visiting his estranged wife, Mrs. Grace L. Dize, her son, Charles Dize, and Powell. His body was found in the home Monday morning.

Mrs. Dize and her son were arrested with Powell. Yesterday, Maddox said, they told him Powell killed Dize with a chisel.

Dize's body was exhumed today and the autopsy performed by Dr. R. R. Norris and Dr. C. E. Collins. Maddrix said Powell would be given a preliminary hearing in circuit court here next week.

The State's attorney said Mrs. Dize told him that Powell asked her for a chisel last Sunday night and placed it under his bed. During the night, she said, Powell took the chisel and went to the room where Dize was sleeping.

Charles Dize, Maddrix said, followed Powell to the room and saw him stab the elder Dize three times in the face. Mrs. Dize, Maddrix stated, saw Powell standing over Dize with a chisel in his hand.

Morrow Will Keep Soldiers Home Post

Deputy Governor Named for 3-Year Term.

The reappointment of Col. William M. Morrow, U. S. A. retired, as deputy governor of the Soldiers' Home for a term of three years, was announced at the War Department yesterday by Harry H. Woodring, acting Secretary of War.

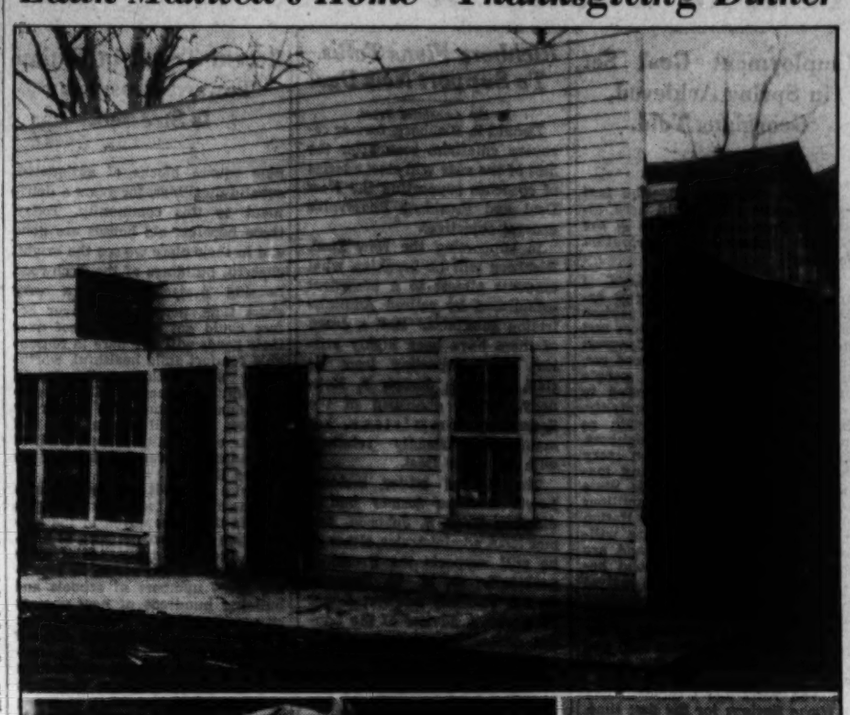
A native of Mich., Col. Morrow entered military service in 1888 as a private in the Seventeenth Infantry.

For heroism in action during the World War, Col. Morrow was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal and the Silver Star. He was retired from active duty on account of age, September 1930.

Col. Morrow was appointed to the Soldiers' Home post in February 1933, by Secretary of War Hurley, to succeed Maj. Parker West.

Under the law the deputy governor of the Soldiers' Home is appointed at the direction of the President, who acts upon the recommendation of the board of commissioners of the home and the designation of the Secretary of War. The appointment is not subject to confirmation and is for a period of three years.

Edith Maxwell's Home—Thanksgiving Dinner



By Arthur Ellis, Post Staff Photographer.

appeals to him. Trigg Maxwell liked to bang his around.

But Edith's daring to try to protect herself would not have turned this whole community against Mrs. Maxwell. The mother is blamed for two things: "Taking up for her murderous daughter" at the trial and for the "meddling of outsiders."

The "outsiders" are persons who live beyond a 50-mile radius of Pound and who are raising funds to carry on Edith's appeal for a new trial.

Community Is Bitter.

No one in Pound—there are about 500 inhabitants—can see "any sense in another trial."

"That Maxwell girl's a cold-blooded murderess and she got just what was coming to her," said a raw-boned, grim-faced woman in the drygoods store today. "And don't try to tell me," she continued, "Mrs. Maxwell didn't ask people to raise money. Why, reporters would never have come here if she hadn't asked them to."

That's the way everybody here has figured out the situation. A lot of the folks are giving Edith's older brother, Earl, credit for writing the stories concerning his sister which have appeared in the papers.

"Earl just laughs about it," said Mrs. Maxwell in her thin, sad, little voice. "Well, I'm glad he can. But I'm downright afraid for him. I wish he'd go back to the city. I'm afraid some harm will come to him if people keep on feeling so hard against us and I just couldn't bear that. But I don't know what I'd do if he did leave. He's about all I got to depend on now," and she looked fondly upon her only son, curled up on the studio couch Edith bought with her money from teaching a mountain school.

The Maxwell's little frame house doesn't look much like it did when Edith and her pappy had their trouble one sultry night last July. The lumpy studio couch upon which Edith slept is now in the family's combination bedroom-living room. Last summer it was in a modest sitting room but Earl Maxwell recently rented that space to a gift shop which deals mostly in gayly colored vases, dubious statues and fancy jewelry.

Back of the present combination bedroom-living room is another bedroom. This used to be the kitchen. It was here on a table that Trigg Maxwell picked up the butcher knife. It had been left there by Edith's 11-year-old sister, Mary Catherine, after she had peeled an apple.

Mary Catherine, a bright, friendly child, hovered over her mother today as she talked. Frequently, upon Mrs. Maxwell's orders, she dumped coal from a nearby mine into the squatty iron stove in the center of the room.

All around are reminders of Edith, who has not been in the house since she was taken off to jail on the twenty-first of July. On the floor is the cheerful red and brown linoleum rug she bought. Against one wall is her bookcase. The shelves are almost empty. Edith does a lot of reading in her cell these days. Long ago she had all the volumes of fiction brought to her in Wise. Left behind are a couple of textbooks she used at East Radford Teachers College, "Instructions on How to Play Pinochle" and her mother's Bible.

On the bottom shelf is a collection of dog miniatures. Edith evidently likes dogs. A bronze-colored statue of Rin-Tin-Tin stands on the small oval table which is used as a writing desk.

Family Wants to Move

When the kitchen was turned into a bedroom the cookstove was moved to a lean-to which opens off the present combination bedroom-living room. Here the family washes and eats its meals.

The shack is home to Mrs. Maxwell. Pound is home to her. Like her husband, she was born within these majestic Cumberland Mountains. She knows all the people for miles around. They used to be her friends and neighbors. Now that they've turned against her she wants to get away from it all.

"I'd like to go where I wouldn't have to see their cold looks any more," she said. "I don't think I could ever be happy here again."

The little group fell to discussing where they would like to move. It didn't seem to matter much to Mother Maxwell; just so she can get away. Earl, a traveling salesman who has been around a bit, said he'd like Tulsa or Salt Lake City.

"I'd rather go to Europe," said Mary Catherine.

Shirt Stains New Clew In Stammer Slaying

Fresno, Calif., Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Stains which police said might be blood were found on a shirt discovered in the rooms of a young laborer questioned in the killing of Mary Stammer, 14, it was reported tonight.

The youth, one of several detained for questioning, previously had been reported cleared of all connection with the case.

Unconfirmed reports circulated that the Fresno unit of the National Guard had been ordered to stand by to prevent any lynching attempt.

Walmsley was a native of Washington. His nearest relative was a sister-in-law, Mrs. Zina Walmsley, also of this city.

William C. Wrenn, 34, of 1907 K street northwest, a private attached to the Twelfth Police Precinct, died in Alexandria Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Wednesday, when his automobile overturned on the Mount Vernon-Richmond highway near Mount Vernon. Wrenn suffered a dislocated neck.

Wrenn, off duty at the time of the accident, was accompanied by Mrs. Mary Collins, of 2133 K street northwest, who suffered fractured ribs, and her daughter, Frances Collins, 18, who escaped injury. Mrs. Collins was still a patient at the Alexandria Hospital. Her recovery was expected.

The District department of vehicles and traffic will take an active part in the National Safety Council's program to reduce highway accidents 35 per cent by the end of 1940, the Chicago headquarters of the council announced yesterday.

The council has launched a five-year drive to save 38,000 lives through the application of intelligent methods.

William A. Van Duzer, Washington traffic director, sent the council the following telegram:

"We gladly join the National Safety Council in its declaration of war against highway accidents. What is needed, in my opinion, is more thorough education of all drivers to avoid accidents and swift, certain and vigorous punishment for those who refuse to be educated."

Texas Labor Leaders Threaten WPA Strike

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 29 (A.P.).—Unless Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, accedes to the demands of the Texas State Federation of Labor, a strike will be called on all WPA jobs in the State, about 50 labor delegates throughout the State decided here tonight. The meeting was called after the delegation conferred with Harry P. Drought, State WPA administrator.

Drought's response to the demands of the delegation was described as "evasive" by William J. Moran, of El Paso. Moran said the federation was demanding that the number of hours per month be cut to 70 or less. That would double the number of employes, he asserted.

Man Confesses Brutal Slaying Of Former Wife

Kidnaper Also Accused of Killing State Trooper During Pursuit.

By the Associated Press.

Twin Falls, Idaho, Nov. 29.—Two peace officers announced tonight that Douglas Van Vlack had admitted killing his pretty divorced wife, Mildred Hook, 22, whose body was found today in a culvert near here. She had been beaten and shot.

A coroner's jury already had named Van Vlack as the slayer and Prosecutor Edward Babcock announced he would charge the strapping former Washington University student with murder and demand the death penalty.

Oris Cryder, Twin Falls County deputy sheriff, and A. C. Parker, Buhl, Idaho, chief of police, said Van Vlack had admitted he slew Miss Hook, whom he abducted from Tacoma, Wash, because officers were pressing closely on their trail after a gunfight Monday in which Fontaine Cooper, State highway patrolman, was slain. Deputy Sheriff Henry C. Givens was wounded severely in the fight.

Babcock said he would try to obtain a signed confession.

Sheriff E. F. Prater returned Van Vlack to the county jail here tonight after having taken him to Burley, Idaho, this morning for safekeeping while the sheriff attended Cooper's funeral.

Followed Footprints.

Three physicians testified at the inquest that Miss Hook probably was shot after being struck a heavy blow on the head while her head and shoulders protruded from a railway culvert. Police believe she crept into the culvert, about nine miles south of here, to keep warm.

Members of a party of searchers testified they followed footprints from where Van Vlack's abandoned car was found after his capture Tuesday morning, northward along the highway five or six miles to a warehouse at Knull, six miles southeast of Twin Falls, and then back southward along the railroad track to the culvert where the body was found.

From that point, they declared, the man's footprints continued alone, southward along the tracks. Van Vlack surrendered to possemen who surorunded him as he lay at the side of the road about three miles from this culvert.

Shot Through Eye.

The girl was shot through the left eye, a wound identical to one that killed State Patrolman Cooper in the encounter with Van Vlack.

Ralph E. Leighton, former chief of police, said he believed the assailant induced Miss Hook to crawl into the narrow tunnel, ostensibly for shelter and when her head was thrust from the end, her arms pinned to her sides, battered in her skull and shot her.

Miss Hook's father, Joseph Hook, 50-year-old former cowboy, writer of mystery and crime fiction, was near collapse. Earlier today, however, he said he had "half given up hope of ever seeing her alive."

She was sought by Idaho officers as a material witness against Van Vlack.

Van Vlack's mother blamed his troubles upon his former wife. She said the young woman "kept telephoning him" after the divorce action was filed, "talking to him for hours."

Bodies of Four Sought; Held Comer Victims

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 29.—The State of Oklahoma tonight offered rewards of $125 each for the bodies of four persons believed killed by Chester Comer, offering none for the fifth "because the proof seems almost overwhelming that she is buried in the potters field at Kansas City."

Gov. E. W. Marland, on advice of the adjutant general of the National Guard and others, posted the rewards after Comer's funeral. The young Oklahoma City oil field and farm worker was believed to have killed Ray Evans, prominent Shawnee attorney; L. A. Simpson, Piedmont farmer; Warren Simpson, the farmer's son, and Mrs. Lucille Stevens Comer, his own second wife.

Adjt. Gen. Charles F. Barrett said "proof seems to be accumulating very rapidly, and identification is almost certain" that Comer's long-missing first wife was the girl whose body was found on a lonely road near Kansas City, Kans., in October, 1934.

Comer, seemingly demented hitch-hiker, died Wednesday night of pneumonia and bullet wounds.

Seeks Bloodstains in Suspect's Car

neath the seat of the car, and authorities were expected to take them to the Loring home for possible identification by Corinna's mother, Mrs. George A. Loring and other members of the family.

Redmond remained a suspect in the case last night though he vehemently denied any connection with the murder or with the assault he is accused of attempting. Authorities announced they have shattered any alibis he may have advanced to prove he was elsewhere than in Mount Rainier on the November night Corinna disappeared 48 hours before her wedding day.

"He was unable to establish an alibi," the Mount Rainier police chief, Eugene Plumer, announced.

Employes of the restaurant of which Redmond was the manager said he usually quit work between 7 and 8 in the evening. They were unable to recall at what time Redmond left on the night of November 4 when Corinna disappeared to be found five days later murdered on Saddleback Ridge, a few blocks from her home.

Yesterday relatives of the Loring girl confronted Redmond in the Upper Marlboro Jail but said they had never seen him before.

Meanwhile, authorities went ahead with plans for Redmond's prosecution on the attempted assault charge, setting a date for his preliminary hearing, but refraining from making public either the time or place.

Both Corinna's father, George A. Loring, and her brother-in-law, Leo Lo Jacono, visited Redmond in the Marlboro Jail. They agreed they never had seen him before, so far as they could remember.

Later Lieut. Joseph Itzel, Baltimore, in charge of the inquiry, questioned the father and brother-in-law about "loose ends" which developed from their earlier statements to police.

Livermore Son Shot by Mother Over Drinking on the floor, the mother with the weapon in her hands.

The bullet penetrated the chest, coursed downward through the liver and stopped near the spine.

The shooting occurred about midnight in the living room of the Livermore home in Montecito, exclusive suburb.

A court fight between the Livermores over custody of the boys is pending. There is another son, Paul, 12.

The shooting was reported to Undersheriff Ross by Dr. Ussher, who had been called to the home.

The physician declared, however, Mrs. Livermore "was too drunk to be responsible" at the time she cried "I've shot my boy."

The senior Jesse Livermore amassed and lost several fortunes in the Chicago and New York markets, chiefly in steel and wheat. He entered voluntary bankruptcy more than a year ago in New York and later was suspended from trading in the Chicago market. He applied for reinstatement last March, but the board of directors postponed action indefinitely and he withdrew the application.

In the bankruptcy proceedings it was disclosed he had set up $100,000 trust funds for each of his sons. Jesse jr.'s trust fund is tied up in the custody litigation.

Jesse, jr., was described by Undersheriff Ross as "more or less incorrigible." The officer said the boy recently left the Dean School in Montecito and entered the Laguna Blanca School, an exclusive private institution.

Livermore's first wife was Miss Netit Jordan, of Indianapolis. They were married in 1900 and divorced in 1917.

The former Miss Wendt married Livermore in December, 1918. A Reno divorce ended this union in 1932. Mrs. Livermore then married Walter Longcope, of New York, a former prohibition agent. A divorce last August ended this marriage and she resumed the Livermore name.

Woman Slayer Of Doctor Says Deed Justified

Blonde Holds 'Any Decent Girl Would Have Done the Same Thing.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—Occasionally faltering, her composure now and then shattered, Vera Stretz said today she felt no remorse for the slaying of Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, wealthy German industrialist, for whose death she is charged with first-degree murder.

In her first public interview, given in a bare room in the women's prison, the blonde university graduate answered questions, alternately composed and burying her face in trembling hands:

"I can't help feeling that any decent girl would have done the same thing under the circumstances," she said.

Would she do it again?

She blushed. After a moment she dropped her face into clasped hands, which trembled violently.

"Oh, please——" she half sobbed.

Again her composure broke when asked if she still loved Dr. Gebhardt, the father of two children and husband of a wife in Germany. She did not reply, once more burying her face in her hands.

Miss Stretz, 31, was arrested as she crouched, crying, on a fire escape of a Beekman place apartment near the room in which Dr. Gebhardt, painted as a gay Lothario by police and defense, was found shot to death. Many love letters, found by police told a story of long intimacy.

Samuel Leibowitz, attorney for Miss Stretz, stated flatly that the defense would not be based either on jealousy or insanity.

"It will be a valid defense, backed up by documentary evidence," he declared. "Jealousy is the bunk. It had no part, no bearing in the case."

Police have declared the motive for the shooting was Miss Stretz's burning jealousy over Dr. Gebhardt's waning attentions and his increased interest in other women.

Today they announced they had found a long-sought "mystery blonde" in the case—identified as a registered nurse, the mother of two children. It was this woman, they said, who registered with Dr. Gebhardt in a midtown hotel the night preceding the slaying.

Chamber Votes Faith in Laval To Save Franc

Second Confidence Ballot in Two Days Is 324 to 247.

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 29.—The Chamber of Deputies tonight voted 324 to 247 its confidence in Premier Pierre Laval's ability to defend the franc against devaluation, aid agriculture and relieve distress among low-scale pensioners, functionaries and war veterans.

Socialists and Communists voted solidly against the Government, but the radical parties split.

It was the second test of Laval's strength in two days. Yesterday, shortly after the convening of Parliament, he demanded a vote of confidence on the issue of whether the financial crisis should be debated immediately. The Laval cabinet came through with a surprising majority of 120, 43 more than today.

The cabinet faces two more tests—on its foreign policy and on the proposed law suppresing Fascist groups such as the Croix de Feu.

Defending his government's policy in the chamber, Laval recalled the conditions under which he took power.

"Knew Responsibilities."

"I knew what responsibilities awaited me. When exceptional powers were given us you well knew what had to be accomplished.

"The deficit stood at 8,000,000,000 francs. Twenty billion had to be borrowed. We took the necessary measures by decree."

An urgent plea for devaluation of the franc preceded the vote. Paul Renaud, Center Republican, a former finance minister, asserted cheapening the currency was the only remedy for the French financial crisis.

The present exodus of gold from France is due to four years of deflation, he asserted. The franc, he argued, should be devalued and aligned with other world currencies to halt loss of gold.

Renaud cited the American and British sterling bloc recovery in contrast to the French gold bloc crisis. Unemployment is showing a marked increase, industrial indices are falling and the crisis is increasing in countries where the problem of prices is unsolved, he added.

"Grave Danger in Delay."

Finance Minister Marcel Regnier replied that France is being submitted to violent attacks and the government needs the chamber's support. Any delay, he said, would cause grave danger.

"On the eve of possible panic, which could drag the country with it," the finance minister said, "the government demands a massive vote to prove its majority in the chamber with us to defend the franc and prevent a gold embargo.

"Circumstances forced the Bank of France to raise the interest rates, but there is room for hope that agriculture, especially wheat, is improving. The ministry of commerce is busy searching for outlets for French trade."

Leon Blum, Socialist chief, strongly impressed the chamber when he arose to announce the Socialists were voting against the government, asserting "sentiments in general are that the government's policy of superdeflation is doomed to failure and inevitably will lead to devaluation."

Selassie Claims Noncombatants Slain by Bombs

Women, Children Slain at Daggah Bur, Asserts Addis Ababa.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 29.—The Ethiopian government said today many women and children were killed when Italian airplanes bombed Daggah Bur, fortress on the southern front.

(The bombing of Daggah Bur was officially announced in Rome.)

"Nine Italian planes dropped 1,500 bombs," said the communique, "mostly incendiary, on Daggah Bur Thursday, killing many women and children.

"A new church and many houses were destroyed by fire.

"Four sick natives within the church were among the victims. There were no victims among the soldiers, who are trained to scatter in the fields every morning."

Emperor Haile Selassie, traveling by caravan, was expected to reach Dessye tonight. There he will assume personal command of Ethiopia's defense.

Elaborate precautions were taken to protect the Emperor in the event of an Italian air raid. He was accompanied by more than 300 chiefs and priests.

Ethiopians said they did not know how long the ruler would remain at Dessye, which is headquarters between the northern and southern fronts.

Some said he might remain there for the duration of the war and others that he might return, especially if reports of Ethiopian victories in the north are true.

Independent War.

Because Ras Kassa, important northern chieftain, has been unreported officially since he left Debra Tabor early in October with an army of 200,000, rumor has it he has gone off to fight an independent war against the Italians.

The rumors, however, were officially denied by government officials who insisted his army was combining with that of Ras Mulugeta and advancing toward Makale from the south.

The army of Ras Seyoum, it was stated, is flanking the Italians on the west side of the Takkaze River and maintaining contact with forces under Dedjazmatch Ayale, who is guarding the south bank of the river farther to the north, where it is called the Setit River.

Where and when the Emperor will meet his four commanders in the north has been kept secret, although it is generally believed he will see them at the same time.

Tribe Shifts Attack.

Aduwa, Ethiopia, Nov. 29 (AP).—Ras Seyoum, shifty leader of Ethiopia's warriors in northern Ethiopia, has moved from the Seloa section in the Tembien region (west and north of Makale) to the vicinity of Bora, Italian officers reported today.

Native Italian columns which moved into the Tembien area forced some of Ras Seyoum's followers to retreat from their positions on the Italian flank and withdraw farther from Italian-occupied territory, it was stated.

Ras Seyoum, it was said, apparently will try to join forces with Ras Kassa, leading another Ethiopian force in the north. Italian officials believe, however, Ras Seyoum still intends to defend Tembien, having left one of his chief lieutenants, Dedjaz Amare, in that area.

The latter's forces were throwing up defensive works in the Tzazzara district at the confluence of the Euri and Tonqua rivers.

Officers here expressed the opinion Ras Seyoum has been unable to mobilize a great number of men and has, therefore, decided to join Ras Kassa in the Aiba Atzala Valley, which runs south of Amba Alagi, 40 miles south of Makale.

(The Italian high commissioner in Asmara, Eritrea, clamped a rigid censorship on news dispatches from there. Italian military moves and names of commanders cannot be mentioned in dispatches, and correspondents will be held responsible for what is printed by their newspapers.)

Trainman Dies in Blaze Of Wrecked Rail Coach

Blairsville, Pa., Nov. 29 (AP).—One trainman died in the flaming wreckage of a gasoline-electric car, which plunged from the rails on a hillside near here today. Baggageman O. M. Wilson, 54, of Blairsville, was the victim.

Firemen, working in a snowstorm, found his body in the charred ruins of mail bags in the combination passenger - baggage coach operated between the towns of Torrance and Indiana by the Pennsylvania Railroad. Three other trainmen aboard escaped injury. Railroad officials attributed the wreck to a broken rail.

4 Are Killed in Poland In Anti-Jewish Riots

Opoczno, Poland, Nov. 29 (AP).—Four persons were killed and many injured tonight when police fired into a crowd of anti-Semitic demonstrators.

Officials said the crowd stoned a police squad which had been sent to the district to quell repeated rioting. Shooting followed immediately.

Italian Envoy, Admiral Head Naval Delegation

Rome, Nov. 29 (AP).—The government announced today Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, and Admiral Waldimiro de Pini would lead its delegation of ten at the London naval conference starting December 9.

De Pini was a delegate to the 1930 naval conference in London.

Laval Warning Of War Is Sent To Mussolini

opian crisis to a decisive stage, informed observers said tonight. Already an important Italian authority has been quoted here as saying addition of the oil embargo to the present economic siege against Italy would soon make continuation of the African war "impossible."

The situation thus created revived hopes in some quarters that Italy might soon be willing to consider a peaceful settlement of the African conflict.

"Discussion" December 12.

Geneva, Nov. 29 (AP).—Imposition of an oil embargo by League of Nations powers against Italy will be discussed by the League's committee of 18 on December 12, it was announced today.

An official League communique said Dr. Augusto Vansconcellos, of Portugal, president of the committee, had selected that date after consultations with various governments.

Observers generally believed the committee would decide on a date for establishment of oil sanctions, and that copper might be added to the list of products whose exportation by League powers to Italy would be prohibited.

Officials of the League stated Premier Laval of France had requested the change in the date of the committee meeting from December 5 to December 12, as other governments had agreed to the earlier date.

These quarters said Laval suggested the postponement because of a debate in the French Chamber of Deputies on nationalistic French organizations, scheduled for December 3.

Sizoo to Start Advent Services At N.Y. Avenue

Also Plans Night Talks in December on Men Known as Builders.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will begin a series of sermons on the Advent theme tomorrow, when he preaches to his congregation at 11 a. m. on "When Christ Comes."

During December Dr. Sizoo plans a series of sermons for the evening services also. He will discuss personalities which stand before the world today as builders of a new civilization. The future will make clear whether they are false or true Messiahs, but today these leaders of mankind have tremendous power and an unbelievable following, Dr. Sizoo commented yesterday.

During the course of his lectures, the pastor will point out the inadequacy of this leadership for the complete realization of the fuller life which mankind seeks. The general theme is entitled "The Parade of the Messiahs."

The French Congregation will meet in the New York Avenue Church at 4 p. m. tomorrow to hear a sermon on "Tresors Inepuisables," by the Rev. Andre Frank Liotard.

Covenant First Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, D. D., pastor. Bible College Plans to Take New Quarters

Columbia Seeks $36,000 to Purchase Former Turkish Legation.

The Columbia College of Christian Education, which conducts interdenominational and coeducational classes in general Bible study and teaching, plans to occupy the former Turkish Legation building at 1708 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

As a preliminary to the move from present quarters at 1734 H street northwest, a campaign to raise $36,000 has been launched. This fund will be adequate to purchase and furnish the new home, Miss Elsie Wade Stone, president, pointed out this week.

The college, now in its ninth year, has 100 students, representing 10 denominations.

"We had a definite increase in enrollment this fall," said Miss Stone, "and now there is a waiting list of applicants, who cannot enter the school because of present inadequate facilities. Our new home, which has five floors of spacious rooms, will give us the much needed room."

Officials of the institution have set out to promote a National College of Christian Education. Washington was decided upon as the strategic point for such training because of unsurpassed educational facilities and opportunities it offers.

Hervin U. Roop, noted theological student and author of several books on Christian ethics, is vice president of the college.

LaRoe to Be Speaker.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 29.—Secret police descended on the Wuerzburg Bishopric and arrested Vicar General Miltenberger and a cathedral priest, Dr. Harth, yesterday, it was revealed today.

The arrests, which followed a search of the two men's lodgings, were believed connected with the seizure of Prelate Banasch, associate of the Bishop of Berlin, recently, and it was thought they indicated a fresh attack on the Catholic clergy for alleged anti-Nazi activities.

The Nazi authorities tonight ordered the seizure of funds of the Protestant Confessional Synod. In church circles it was said the new move was designed by the department of church affairs to force the church to yield to the recent ultimatum of Hans Kerri, head of the department.

Kerri warned the synod Thursday that if it refused to co-operate with his church committee the synod would be dissolved Monday.

The funds seized are those which have been placed in the hands of trustees pending a solution of a dispute with the Reich finance department.

Reich Defense Self-Sufficient, Hitler Declares

It Will Not Depend Upon League, He Assures Record Audience.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 29.—Adolf Hitler served terse notice on the world tonight that "the German people will furnish their own protection."

In a brief allusion to international affairs during a speech before his biggest indoor audience, the Reichschancellor declared:

"We will rely on our own power—not that of the League of Nations."

Plainly in a happy mood, Der Fuehrer expounded his own philosophy of popular dictatorship before an overflow throng at the opening of the new Deutschland Halle—a vast stadium resembling a football arena with a roof.

Answering his own question, "What makes a dictator popular?" he asserted:

"I became popular by opposing so-called popular opinion."

The Reichschancellor declared his 15-year struggle to power had made the Nazi movement strong and successful because "we had to swim upstream."

Similarly, he asserted, the difficulties which Germany faces will serve only to make her stronger.

"The raw material problem will be solved," he promised.

Hitler poked fun at his enemies, who, he said, first predicted his downfall within six weeks and who now are trying to guess what dark horse eventually will succeed him.

Laughter and applause swept the hall as he jibed at "these obscure Caesars."

H. T. Wirgman Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for the Rev. Henry T. Wirgman, 82, retired Episcopal clergyman and author, who died Sunday in Emergency Hospital after a brief illness, will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Hines undertaking establishment. Burial in Rock Creek Cemetery will follow.

Mr. Wirgman, who lived at 14 Williams lane, Chevy Chase, was a native of Franklin, Va., and a graduate of the University of West Virginia. He began his professional life as an attorney in Romney, West Va., but withdrew from the bar to study for the ministry, graduating from Virginia Theological Seminary, in Alexandria, in 1885. He filled parishes in Detroit, Toronto and New York.

In 1889 he married Miss Theodora Booth, sister of George Booth, publisher of the Detroit News and several other papers in the Middle West.

Many years ago Mr. Wirgman withdrew from the active ministry and served as principal of high schools in West Virginia and Virginia. He wrote religious and political articles for magazines and newspapers.

Surviving Mr. Wirgman are his wife, a son, Stewart L. Wirgman; a daughter, Mrs. Alfred G. Masters; a brother, George H. Wirgman, and a sister, Mrs. T. A. Quinenberry, of Richmond, Va.

Josephine Croggan To Be Buried Today

Was Pension Office Clerk and Native of D. C.

Poore, pastor of the Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Howard F. Downs will officiate. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Miss Croggon, a former clerk at the Pension Office, retired 12 years ago after 40 years of Government service. A member of one of the city's oldest families, she was a member of the Society of Natives of the District of Columbia. Her father was the late James Croggon, and her mother the late Mrs. Elizabeth C. Croggon.

Surviving are two sisters, Miss Louisa Croggon and Miss Mary F. Croggon.

Henry Wallace Rites To Be Conducted Today

Funeral services for Henry Wallace, 57, a resident of Washington for 25 years, who died Sunday at his home, 1401 Orren street northeast, will be held at his residence today at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Wallace, a retired butcher, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Isabella Wallace; four sons, Frederick, James, George and Jack Wallace; three daughters, Miss Aminetta Wallace, Mrs. Amelia Pettit and Mrs. Edith Fronck, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Funston, all of Washington.

Anson W. Hard Dies; New York Yachtsman

Washington friends of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Wales Hard, New York city yachtsman, learned yesterday of the death of Mr. Hard in New York. He leaves a widow and five children.

The widow is the daughter of Mrs. J. Bailey Browder, of 2301 Connecticut avenue, and both Mr. and Mrs. Hard had frequently visited Mrs. Browder. Mrs Hard is the granddaughter of James A. McKenzie, former member of Congress and former U. S. minister to Peru.

Rites Held for W. A. Parks.

Funeral services for Walther A. Parks, 38, chief engineer for radio station WMAL, were conducted yesterday afternoon in the chapel of Frank Geier's Sons funeral home. The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, D. D., pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, officiated. Burial was in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Baltimore Rites Held For Miss McDaniel

Funeral services for Miss Annie McDaniel, 84, retired, District public school teacher, who died Wednesday in Baltimore, were conducted yesterday afternoon at the home of relatives in Baltimore.

Miss McDaniel was a domestic science teacher until her retirement in 1924. Until recently she resided in the Northbrook Apartments here. Her nearest relative, Mrs. Morris Morrison, a first cousin, lives in Baltimore.

Dr. Hodges Rites Planned for Today

Physician, 78, Had Lived in Miami 20 Years.

Funeral services for Dr. John W. Hodges, 78, former Washington physician who died Wednesday in Miami, Fla., will be conducted at 2 p. m. today in the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth stret.

Dr. Hodges had lived in Miami since leaving Washington 20 years ago. In the Capital he practiced medicine for ten years and was a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia from 1906 to 1913. Born in Baltimore, he was educated in the public schools there, and graduated from the Baltimore Medical College in 1892.

He was engaged in the drug business in Annapolis for several years, and in 1888 was elected president of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association. In Miami he specialized in treating nervous and mental diseases. At the time of his death he was a member of the Florida Medical Association and a fellow of the American Medical Association.

Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Father Mas-Janer Dies; Studied Here

Was Working on Ph. D. Thesis at C. U.

Word was received yesterday at Catholic University of the death of the Rev. Joseph Mas-Janer on Thanksgiving Day in Baltmore.

Father Mas-Janer was a student in the school of canon law at the university and, although a secular priest, had lived at the Capuchin College on Harewood road northeast for the last four or five years, during which time he pursued his studies. At the time of his death he was working on his thesis leading toward the doctor's degree.

He was born in Spain and received the degrees of doctor of philosophy and doctor of sacred theology in the universities of that country before going to Puerto Rico as a missionary, and he came to the United States from that island. He had been confined to the Providence Hospital for the past six months and was transferred to the Jenkins Memorial Hospital in Baltimore the Friday before his death.

Funeral mass will be celebrated at 8 a. m. today by the chaplain of the hospital.

Rites Set Monday For Albert Farley

File Clerk at D. C. Supreme Court for 45 Years.

Funeral services for "Uncle Albert" Farley, 72, file clerk at the District Supreme Court for more than 45 years, will be held Monday at 1:30 p. m. at Berean Baptist Church, followed by burial in Harmony Cemetery.

"Uncle Albert," who was known to more than one generation of attorneys and judges, died at his home, 1248 Jackson place, while he was holding a family reunion Thanksgiving Day.

In his career he missed but one day from work, and that was because of the illness which was to cause his death.

Surviving are two sons, Harry and Roy Farley, and two daughters, Mrs. Florence Weaver and Mrs. Harry Burleigh.

Father of Actress Dies.

Elyria, Ohio, Nov. 29 (AP).—Charles Louis Appel, 63, father of Lila Lee, the screen actress, died today.

Heads Or Tails.

Not a single District school teacher hesitated to sign the sworn statement required by the Comptroller General as a condition to receiving salary checks. Each was quick to affirm that last month he or she did not "in any school of the District of Columbia, or elsewhere, teach or advocate communism."

Such complete unanimity must lead to one of two conclusions. Either the oath is utterly superfluous for all these teachers, in which case the entire tumult has been a false alarm; or else there are some teachers so dangerous to society that they do not shrink from perjury when confronted by the necessity of taking an oath of loyalty—in which case the Comptroller General's slips are again totally useless.

Heads or tails, spin it as you will, the whole furor remains ridiculous, except for its deplorable evidence of lack of faith in American institutions and its dangerous encroachment on the true spirit of education.

Thoroughly Illogical.

The local tax and revenue study by the Commissioners' special committee is bringing out a great deal of valuable information that should assist Congress in formulating the 1937 budget. It has revealed, for example, that only about $5,000,000 is available in 1936 for municipal improvements, in contrast to $16,000,000 in the fiscal year of 1931. While Congress has been spending billions of dollars to stimulate employment throughout the country, vital needs of the Capital City have been neglected.

Public works have not proved a successful remedy for unemployment. Nevertheless, much practical relief can be given by the construction of essential public improvements during periods of economic adversity. Especially is this true when the community in question is free from debt. In spite of the heavy Federal debt, Congress adopted that theory for the Nation. Despite the freedom of Washington from debt, Congress rejected its local application.

Some local improvements have been financed outside of the budget through PWA loans, but these have been small in comparison to the accumulating needs. Apparently there is no hope of providing new schools, libraries, court buildings, etc., without a more liberal allowance for capital improvements in the local budget. In this connection it is interesting to note that, when the outlay for permanent improvements was highest, Congress appropriated $9,500,000 as its share of the Capital City's expenses. During recent years, when the District has been allowed only $5,700,000 to cover its numerous functions of a national character, additions to the municipal plant have been very meager.

No reasonable adjustment of tax levies could supply the deficiency resulting from this thoroughly illogical Congressional policy.

Shortsighted.

In its annual report for the fiscal year 1935 the Federal Trade Commission proposes a number of amendments to the anti-trust laws. These recommendations, designed to extend and strengthen the commission's powers of control over industry, are likely to disturb the placidity of trade association executives who have deluded themselves into believing that the demise of the NRA spells emancipation from all governmental control.

Some of those who have brusquely declined to attend the industrial conference called by Maj. Berry may even begin to doubt the wisdom of that decision. Their absence is intended to signify disapproval of all plans looking toward further legislative "regimentation" of industry. But the regulatory problems that loom ahead cannot be avoided by adopting the ostrich-like policy of refusing to look at them.

The tangle of code restrictions having the force of law is no longer to be feared, but the arbitrary provisions and prohibitions of the anti-trust laws remain. Furthermore, the Federal Trade Commission has emerged from the obscurity which descended upon it when the NRA was supreme with a request for much greater regulatory authority. The clarification and strengthening of our basically defective anti-trust laws will in no sense emancipate business from the unreasonable restrictions that in the past have so severely handicapped the activities of trade associations. On the contrary, such changes are likely to make a bad situation far worse from the point of view of the regulated.

Monopolistic industries have to be subjected to a certain amount of official control and supervision to protect the public against intolerable exploitation. Instead of fighting to evade legal restrictions of any kind farsighted business leadership should therefore be trying to secure a thoroughgoing revision of existing regulatory legislation. Only thus can there be validation of those agreements "in restraint of trade," which may be both reasonable and socially desirable.

The Federal Trade Commission report is a timely reminder that the death of the NRA has solved none of the pressing regulatory problems that existed before it came into being. The businessmen who hide their heads for fear they may see the storms ahead are making a great mistake.

Prosperity Of The Spirit.

It is unfortunate for the Nation that there seems to be no way of controlling that "swelling prosperity of the spirit" which President Roosevelt senses to be abroad in the land and which bubbled so ebulliently throughout his speech at Atlanta yesterday.

For what stands out as certain in an uncertain world is that this country's climb back to the stability which is the basis of progress is going to be a slow and arduous task, to be achieved only by co-operative effort, rigid self-discipline and subordination of personal ambitions to national well-being. And those are the factors which Mr. Roosevelt is most disposed to ignore, regardless of his feeling that "'progress' is a better word than 'recovery,'" whatever that assertion may mean to a convalescent.

In a purely partisan declamation it is perhaps permissible to refer to March 3, 1933—the day before Mr. Roosevelt was inaugurated—as a day when "the mechanics of civilization came to a dead stop." One might be similarly tolerant with a stump speaker who defines criticism of reckless deficit financing as attempts "to dictate to the Administration and to the Congress." But from the President of the United States something finer than such feverish flights of fancy should properly be expected. He is, after all, not merely a candidate for re-election; he is also the responsible executive of the entire Nation. As such, something more than a bitterly partisan attitude in his public addresses is properly to be expected.

It is tragic that evidences of real statesmanship in Mr. Roosevelt's addresses should be the exception rather than the rule. But that such is the case was again demonstrated in the Atlanta speech. At no place did it get to grips with the essential problems of the day; at no point did it even consider the possibility that all of the intelligence, patriotism and integrity of purpose in this country are not confined to the group of archangels at present controlling the Nation's destiny; and in no respect did it provide a basis of confidence in the future more substantial than Mr. Roosevelt's sense of "a swelling prosperity of the spirit."

The more assertively self-righteous the leader, the more incumbent upon him to be incontestably right. In yesterday's speech the President asserted that "many of the great bankers of the United States" told him, in the spring of 1933, that "the country could safely stand a national debt of between fifty-five and seventy billion dollars." The clear inference is that, compared with this astronomical figure, the nearly nine billions of additional public debt so far piled up by the New Deal is not worth noticing. But before that inference can be accepted the names of those who made this extraordinary statement to the President must be made public. Half disclosures of this sort, clearly attempting to depict "the bankers" as an irresponsible class, are a most unfair indictment from the Chief of State. The President's sense of justice, so vivid in some directions, should show him that this general charge needs chapter and verse substantiation.

Similar clarification is needed in Mr. Roosevelt's very confusing observations on the employment situation. After a backhanded swipe at those who, "careless of the truth and regardless of scruple," have attacked the WPA program as foredoomed to failure, the President announces that on Wednesday "there were 3,125,000 persons at work on various useful projects throughout the Nation." The difference between this number and 3,500,000, he added, "have received orders to report to work on projects already under way or ready to be started."

The wording is carefully obscure, but the meaning conveyed is that 3,500,000 unemployed have been or are about to be put to work by the WPA. According to the President's message to Congress, last January 4, there were then "3,500,000 employable people who are on relief." Some of these have certainly found employment through the industrial revival—according to the Secretary of Labor about 250,000 thus found work last month alone. On top of this comes the present intimation that the WPA has achieved its full objective. So the only possible conclusion is that there is now a great deal less than no involuntary unemployment of able-bodied workers throughout the country. If that is really so, Mr. Hopkins has been unduly modest about the truly remarkable success of this experiment. Even at the risk of seeming "regardless of scruple" we venture to suggest that the case is not quite as the President makes it appear.

Moreover, in the upward movement which is now happily apparent, a reasonably humble and contrite attitude, on the part of all classes in the community, is more desirable than that "swelling prosperity of the spirit" which serves to obscure awkward problems. Prior to the depression, the President rightly says, the Nation was living in a fool's paradise. There is more than a little evidence that he is now anxious to build up a similarly deceptive Eden in the minds of the electorate.

Double-Dealing With China.

The inability of the Japanese government to control its military leaders is again flagrantly illustrated in the seizure of strategic railroad centers in North China. Just a week ago Gen. Doihara was said to have been told by civilian officials in Tokyo that he had no authority to conspire with Chinese traitors for the establishment of an independent state in the Peiping-Tientsin area. At the same time the foreign office denied that Japan was assisting the "autonomy movement." All of those pious protests are now made ridiculous by the actual invasion of Japanese troops.

Japan's civil authorities are obviously concerned over world reactions to this further conquest of China. Great Britain's diplomatic inquiry as to Japan's intentions in this latest advance will certainly accentuate apprehension in Tokyo. For the British have extensive interests in North China. Outright seizure of this area by the Japanese would have repercussions throughout the world. The United States, for example, has troops stationed at Tientsin. What would be their status under a new regime controlled by Japan?

Such delicate issues have made the diplomats at Tokyo cautious. Obviously they would like to establish de facto control over these rich Chinese provinces without arousing hostilities or openly flouting the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. To this end extensive negotiations have been carried on at Nanking, and for a short time the bulldog tactics of the army were held in check.

As usual, however, the military command found a pretext to strike without the consent of the foreign office. "Rumors" that empty trains were being sent to the south to transport Chinese troops into the revolting province of Hopei furnished the excuse. Apparently the army intends to force the separation of the northern provinces regardless of foreign office policy. In view of previous independent action on the part of the Japanese warlords that is precisely what the Chinese have expected.

Nothing will be lost by the shattering of the false front which the diplomats were attempting to give this latest imperialistic coup. But the apparent breach between Japan's two governments—military and civil—has widened to a point where the responsibility of neither can be relied upon. While Tokyo is pretending that Japan has no part in the North China separatist plot, Maj. Gen. Isogai, Japanese military attache in Shanghai, informs Chinese officials that the Japanese army does not approve a Nanking program in the North China crisis. And Japanese troops "holding exercises" capture the Chinese depot at Fengtai.

Japan could not more effectively inform the world that her pretenses are not to be trusted and that her policies are dictated by uncontrolled militarists.

The Newer Lunacy.

That orbed maiden whom mortals call the moon may some day become twins, says Sir James Jeans, one of this world's most noted astronomers. After that, by an amoeba-like process of multiplication, she may become quadruplets, and ultimately, like the Cheshire cat which disappeared except for its grin, this satellite may relapse into a mere halo of moonshine. Aside from the sentiment which will be wasted on the prospect of a whole necklace of moons where only one pearl shone before, various difficulties must be considered before we allow Sir James' ideas to be put into effect.

Gambling on the number of moons visible tomorrow night is likely to replace roulette as a far more spectacular vice. Astronomy texts will have to be revised in schools all over the world, and children may be taught that a Copernican moon was all very well in the old days of bourgeois imperialism, but incompatible with a National-Socialist or Corporative or Proletarian State. In our own country, we shall undoubtedly hear a great deal about rugged individual sonnets being inadequate, and government metrical planning being required in the days of the newer lunacy.

We must also hope the old Persian Tentmaker won't object to that stanza being adapted to future conditions, something like this:

Ah, Moon of my Delight, this is a pain!
Get out your slide rule, count those moons again.
I had the score right when you kissed me last,
But this new number won't fit my quatrain.

"Holding The Bag."

From The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

With more hope than faith, the United States has watched the course of the League of Nations regarding the war in Africa. The United States, not being in the League, of course was obligated to do nothing, but Europe raised its hands in feigned horror and protested that its sacrifices would be in vain if we supplied all Italy's needs.

So while Europe continued to talk, the United States acted. We discouraged export of oil and other essential war materials to the combatants. The Secretary of State expressly refused to guarantee protection to an oil ship believed destined to Italy, and there was other concrete and convincing evidence that this Government meant exactly what it said.

Washington undeniably acted in response to public demand. The press of the Nation overwhelmingly opposes our giving aid to the larger of the two nations now combatant, and is even more nearly unanimous against our becoming embroiled in this selfish and tortuous Old World dispute. From political sources has come a certain amount of criticism of the State Department, but most Americans are convinced that the best way to keep us out of another threatened world conflict is to avoid such moves as would bring our neutrality into question.

"In one respect my journey was a failure," Mr. Farley declared, "for, to speak frankly, it was a quest for trouble—and I found none."

Holiday Musings.

To The Editor of The Post.—Sir: Thanksgiving morning, and the necessity of occupation or mental starvation before dinner. The Post, and the ideas assimilated from it; expression is easier than the physical effort of seeking a book to read.

Didst notice the picture of the wife beaters in court? The one at the bar has a bandaged head, and one behind a mouse on his eye. Ho, hum, were the three who stayed in jail so unfortunate?

"Thanksgiving"—1936—and no mention that it hung at the Corcoran last spring, entitled simply "Thanksgiving." Nor did it stir me. Hey, ho, the year still has me puzzled—this projecting one's self into the future and finding there but the pattern of the past. Depressing.

Tut, tut, the Guild seemed small minded. We have the light, yet because you saw it not in the past, you may not see it now. Could it have been but confession they feared inability to handle the General? He could have been barred for being press agent—for himself—with better reason.

Hoffman's idea, as boosted by Clapper, is sound, efficient, and yet I wonder. I think the very inefficiency complained of, as tending to maintain the present status, is in that way a bulwark of democracy. The most efficient government would be a tyranny and I am not sure in my mind that all steps toward the former do not advance, too, toward the latter.

The insulation of inefficiency. A nice phrase, I wish I'd used it before. But Hatim calls to dinner and I heed. SEDCUR.

The Captain's Retort.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Severe criticism is being heaped upon President Roosevelt's Administration because of alleged extravagance of expenditure and imperfect machinery in Federal relief.

All such partisan criticism reminds one of the case of a sea captain who was found guilty of bad judgment in the loss of his ship by an investigating committee which spent three months in determining what he should have done. The captain's only response was: "Gentlemen, you have spent three months in deciding what I should have done in a moment of emergency. I had to decide and act within half a minute." President Roosevelt can shield himself from the reproach of his critics by the retort of the captain.

Legalizing Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was recently quoted as saying "I favor legalization of gambling for the reason I am convinced it will be impossible to stop gambling in the District. Gambling under District control would yield much needed revenue." So the Government is to be the "kitty." That's a foxy move indeed, for ultimately the kitty gets it all, as everybody knows. This is a natural expansion of the present policy of government to act as "fence" or "stool pigeon" for racketeers, by taking as income tax, what the criminals haven't spent by the time they are caught, leaving the victims of these plunderers without recourse. Such a combination of government and safe-breakers is an almost fool-proof scheme. In other words, any crime may pass as legal so long as the crook "divvies" the loot with the Government.

But why limit the list of nuisances that are to be licensed? For instance, there is murder. Not more than 5 per cent of murderers are caught and punished. Why not legalize that, too? Right offhand I think of two more candidates for early attention, viz., whoever planned the replacement of our venerable mall trees with those shivering little anemic seedlings in stiff rows and, second, whoever is responsible for substituting buses for street cars on the Chevy Chase line. Other cases might come up for consideration as occasion required. Perhaps the AAA can plan a series of "benefit payments" for criminals while plowing under every third citizen. E. V. WILCOX.

Chevy Chase, Md., Nov. 27.

A Pardon Earned.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a minister of the gospel and as a citizen I am very much interested in the incident published on the front page of The Post of November 27, "Fugitive Returns to Lorton After 12 Years to Finish Term."

If the published account is substantially correct in detail, it appeals to me that there should be a pardon granted to the person involved. The end of punishment is correction. Justice demands some form of judgment, some penalty for violation of the law. But justice can be tempered with mercy to the great benefit of society in many instances. The mission of the penal institution is to again fit the individual for their place in society as well as to exact a penalty for the violation.

In the instance involved, the violator of the law has proven by 12 years of honorable living that he is capable of again taking his place in society. The fact of his returning is sufficient evidence that he has a sufficiently sensitive and correct conscience to guide him in his future relationship to society. The State has nothing further to be gained by the man serving the remaining 16 months of the sentence. In fact there is more to be gained by the State, and for the State, in the gratitude of the former lawbreaker and those connected with him, by granting the pardon.

I trust that there might possibly be something done in this instance, and also that The Post may make a worthy effort in any cause they may deem worthy.

False Witness.

The writer is a Catholic—and has the highest regard, respect, esteem and reverence for the thousands of noble, superfine priests of our faith, who by word and example, edify us.

But we do not respect Father Couglin's methods. (Nor do many others.) We think it would be a fine thing if he and Hugh Johnson would shut up! We're sick and tired of both of them.

"Good Neighbors" Chance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me say that no opportunity will ever present itself quite so worthy for us to "be good neighbor" than in the case of a former German soldier, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and his family, who are trying desperately to free themselves from a possible injustice thrust upon them through circumstantial evidence.

Justice and fairness to this young man will enable millions of us to lift up their heads when they are now bowed in shame.

Vindication Of Gascoigne.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sir William Gascoigne, who was born in 1350 and became chief justice of the King's Bench in England about 1402, or 1403, was a remarkable instance of Anglo-Saxon integrity in the interpretation of Anglo-Saxon constitutional law.

A preliminary instance of his firmness was the way in which he dealt with the Prince of Wales, son of Henry IV. This prince, of roistering and turbulent dispostion, came into court to defend one of his comrades who had fallen afoul of the law. Owing to his rank, he was brought before the chief justice. His attitude was truculent and boisterous. He said to Gascoigne, "I am the Prince of Wales, the son of the King, and I dare you to commit my friend." Gascoigne eyed him icily and said, "For that speech I will not only commit your friend, but you. You will remain in jail for an indefinite period until you apologize and mend your ways." Forthwith the heir to the throne and his friend were thrown into durance vile.

The prince appealed to the King. Henry IV sent word to him, "I have warned you again and again of your conduct. Your business is now with the chief justice. It is no affair of mine and you will stay in jail until he releases you." Whereupon the prince sent an humble request to the chief justice for a rehearing. Gascoigne said, "Do you regret your conduct, and will you alter it?" And Henry, afterwards Henry V, very meekly replied, "Yes, sir, I will not do it again." And he kept his word. He was a good son and a commendable citizen.

When all this was repeated to King Henry IV, he said, "I thank God that I have a chief justice courageous enough to uphold the principles of the realm and a son who is sensible enough to obey the laws."

So much for that incident. Now a more important matter in the history of Gascoigne as a light to this age. He had defended the right of Henry IV to the throne during the deposition of Richard II, and this was probably the reason why he was appointed chief justice of the King's Bench on the accession of Henry IV. The King then brought every possible pressure to bear upon him to destroy Archbishop Scrope and Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of the Kingdom, but Gascoigne was adamant. He refused to have any part in the prosecution of these men, whose only crime was hostility to the King, and so Gascoigne goes down to history in the language, the careful language of the British Encyclopedia, "He was one of the great lawyers who in times of doubt and danger have asserted the principle that the head of the state is subject to law and that the guide of the courts shall not be the voice of the executive, nor of any part of Parliament, but the known will of the nation."

This is a six hundredth year vindication by historic parallel of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Post Impressionist

Mass-Production And Emily

Post Office, Saturday.

HIGH as was the quality of Emily Dickinson's poetry, one is beginning to see that its quantity was equally remarkable. When the Amherst recluse died in 1886 she was supposed to have left few "literary remains"—but her indefatigable relatives have discovered more and more.

Nor is there any end in sight. Only the other day Martha Dickinson Bianchi bethought herself to rummage in another theretofore neglected desk-drawer in the old house that appears to be crowded with desks—and, sure enough, came upon more works of genious!

It was but a few days after the announcement of this treasure-trove that our friend Edward Peale says he received the following letter, dated from Amherst.

Dear Sir:

I am a right old man now, but I want nothing but a stable-boy fer Doc Dickinson when I can recollect one or two Satdays all the folks had went to the Dartmouth ball-game and Miss Emily come out to the barn. I reckoned mebbie I should get to drive her over there too, but she says, No, Mart, I cannot infracture my rules about not ever going off the place, and laughed in that way she had like a child, but I do hanker to go up hay-loft and I want you should histe me up the ladder.

To make a long story short she must a stayed up there three four hours, and then she kind of tumbled down into one of the mangers and says, O my glory Mart if I hain't lost some of my papers. But she was too much in a hurry to stay long looking.

So the other day after the shofer had been telling me how the girls kept running acrost poems of Miss Emily's hid away all over the cellar and attic and wo'th money, I begun to look again and by gum if I aint found a piece of yaller paper I mean turned yaller with age, in behind that manger, and if you know anybody you can sell them to, my address is on the envelope.

Thanking you kindly in advance, sincerely . . .

There is a signature, which we shan't reveal, and enclosed—so Peale says—were these verses:

Virtue is insipid?
Well, so are my petunias;
But take a deep long sniff of them
And you will reel with bliss.

Sleeping is monotonous,
But if you do without
You will go tottering to the house
We never speak about.

Where dainty little ladies
Wear thimbles in their ears,
And gentlemen of porcelain
Must wash themselves with tears.

A sage will prate of quidditie:
And write a learned tome,
But Mr. Mole and I know wisdom
Lurks beneath the loam.

I've heard there are no seasons there.
It never rains or snows;
So I'll not have to worry
About my winter clothes.

There Nature keeps her treasures
Of jewelry and gold,
Her Etna rockets, and her taps
Of water hot and cold.

There is the tunnel at the end
Whose terminus is God.
So why not our vacation spend
Under the starry sod?

3:

All you can say in Heav'n
Is How-de-do and Oh!
Then sit and stare and never have
To think it time to go.

You cannot say Goodbye,
Once you arrive above;
And thus, at least until we die,
I think it is with love.

4:

I'd give my memory of you
To see you once again.
I'd have no need of treasures
When I was rid of pain.

My heart would make a sudden prrt!
Here inside my breast,
And all my timid outside
Lie down to take a rest.

My soul would don her wedding-veil,
And picking up her train,
March toward her groom Eternity
Waiting in the aisle.

I never thought that I could leave
A fortune to my nieces,
Who'd search the dressers to retrieve
The last of all my pieces.

I am not certain that I think
They'll ever find the whole;
For some were down in pen and ink,
Some lingered in my soul.

Well, that last bit strikes us as suspiciously to the point. But the other poems seem to the Post-Impressionist as much like Emily Dickinson as the ones anybody else finds.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Off Gibraltar.

Gibraltar, Nov. 29.

THE attitude of the British on the great Fortress of Gibraltar is puzzling. This is one of the most important naval posts in the world. It's the keyhole of the Eastern Hemisphere, and the British have spent millions of pounds on the garrison's harbor works and fortifications.

From this window I can see not only the Hood and the Renown, two of the mightiest warships map has ever built, but several submarines, destroyers and auxiliaries, and the cruiser Sydney of the rather nominal and complementary Australian fleet. The Sydney is the new boat which left England two weeks ago, ostensibly on her way home. She showed up this afternoon inside the breakwater. She is painted a lighter shade than the conventional dark gray of the peacetime dress of the British fleet, and when she tied up alongside the concrete harbor structure she reminded me of a picture which I had seen a week ago in the London Sphere.

The lines under the picture said that the Sydney was bound for Australia, but there was something distinctive about her profile, so when this light gray warship appeared I got out the magazine and compared the picture with the boat across the harbor. There's no doubt about it. This is the Sydney which ought to be at the other side of the world, and this is Gibraltar where she tied up tonight.

• • • •

REMEMBERING old Admiral "Blinker" Hall, of the British Naval Intelligence in London House, the dick of the British Admiralty during the war to end war, I am surprised to find the British so casual and nonchalant about their navy. From the little balcony of my room in the Rock Hotel I have shot moving pictures with my amateur household camera of the Hood and Renown firing at an aerial target towed by a seaplane and missing the target by a possible quarter of a mile, and of the Sydney, supposed to be halfway home.

I have made movies of British submarines and cruisers and of a group of warships holding signal practice in the Mediterranean several miles away. Nobody seemed to care. I carried the camera openly, aimed it almost ostentatiously at some of their most valuable war boats, and nobody said it was against the law.

Old "Blinker" Hall, who was a friend of Franklin Roosevelt in the war days when he was Assistant Secretary of the United States Navy, would have had a person torn shred from shred with red hot tongs for much less than that. He didn't even admit there was a British navy. He wouldn't tell you the right time within ten years off a ton of free calendars. Old "Blinker" Hall was inclined to keep his own counsel, and he didn't much hold with the idea of people discussing the fleet, much less making movies of them for innocent home consumption.

• • • •

WE called him "Blinker" because he had a trick of batting his eyes at you as he spoke, as though he were nervous. But old "Blinker" wasn't nervous. He was one of those psychology cops who tried to make the accused do the talking by pretending to be bashful himself. He sent young British naval officers into Kiel, over into Zeebrugge, even into Berlin, to conduct observation and listening missions and brought them back, if he could, to tell what they had seen and heard.

After the war the British gave him a couple of initials after his name and a patriot's pension, and set him down to write the inevitable memoirs, even if they concern nothing more interesting than Delphinus culture, has lived an empty life and is a failure and no dice. His parents, if they live, are sorry they went to the trouble.

But I wonder if I am being deceived at this moment. Because surely by now the Italians, Germans and Japanese—three natural enemies who are sighting down their barrels at our old pals the British—have plenty of photographs, movies and stills of the Hood, the Renown, the Sydney and the day labor boats of the British navy which lie inside the breakwater at Gibraltar. If I could take fuzzy amateur movies of the Hood and the Renown, throwing wild missives at an aeroplane target, surely the Italians down at the office of the Italian Line or hauling in herrings on fishing boats outside could have made expert scientific reels of the same performance.

SO IS it possible, do you suppose, that they were just purring on what we used to call in the prizefight business the old song and dance when they were missing the target? And do you reckon that the Sydney was sent in here at great expense not to puzzle the amateur and high amateur photographer but to keep the enemy guessing? I use the term "enemy" in the hypothetical sense, of course.

And one more thing: When I went down this evening to ship my films back to New York, not wishing to carry them into Italy and Germany, where I understand the dictatorship is very austere, the man at the window in the post office made a courteous remark. He accepted the films and said they would go right along in the usual way. And then he said, "I expect you will be alone or almost alone on the Rex for Naples tomorrow."

Well, I hadn't said anything about going out on the big Italian boat for Naples tomorrow, and I had been minding my own business and leading a quiet social life in Gibraltar. Still this man called the turn. I am wondering tonight whether he is going to expose those innocent films of mine to the light and ruin them before they can be developed. Clever, those British. Even if they're dumb you can't be certain they aren't being clever.

The Dilemma Of Pierre Laval

He Faces Demands To Disband Chiefs Of Croix De Feu.

Able Diplomat Risks Seat As Parliament Meets In Paris.

By Andre Vullier.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WILL he fall or will he remain in power?

For the past few weeks this question has been the topic of conversation in nearly every Paris "salon" and the man who is thus being talked of is level-headed Pierre Laval, France's present prime minister and one of the ablest negotiators she has had in a long time, in the opinion of many.

That this question should now be popped up as a matter of course by nearly everyone in France is just the sign that the stormy French Parliament has assembled after a long summer adjournment, that Premier Laval and his cabinet members will have to face its tricky debates and that, in the course of some hard fight to stay in office, they may well be overthrown. Should this happen, France would again be left without a government and the President of the French Republic once more would have to look for another premier.

In fact, it seems that, since the days when the late Raymond Poincare was able to stay in office for a little over two years, from July, 1926, to the autumn of 1928, it has been a habit of the French Parliament to overthrow at least one French cabinet every fall.

• • • •

FOLLOWING on the heels of the British general elections, which in no way jeopardized the life of the British government, the re-opening of the French Parliament and the fears it justifies as to the future of the French cabinet stand as an illustration of the intricacies of the political game as the French play it and of the parliamentary system as they practice it.

The great characteristic of the French public life is that the spoils system does not exist here. The administration does not change with each new government, which explains why so many can fall without the country itself feeling any substantial damage.

In fact, it is only French ministers and cabinets that are overthrown every time they are denied a vote of confidence from either the Chamber of Deputies or the Senate. It may thus be said, in a way, that French stability is insured by France's famous administrative routine, which make it the most centralized country in the world.

• • • •

MINISTERS are appointed by the President of the French Republic, whose duty it is to pick out a premier most likely to obtain favorable votes from Parliament and to entrust him with the delicate task of forming the cabinet. It is the latter's job to select a team which will meet with both the Chamber's and the Senate's approval.

Although ministers need not necessarily be members of Parliament, it is a tradition that most of them are. According to the French constitution, they alone are "responsible," while the President of the French Republic is not. The latter, elected by the Chamber and the Senate assembled, wields no power whatsoever, except that of selecting the premier according to traditional custom, of appointing the ministers chosen by that premier and of presiding over the ministers' sittings. He never goes before Parliament and addresses no messages to it.

"His" ministers support him, as they are responsible "en bloc" before Parliament for the government's acts.

Nearly everything important in Parliament is discussed in their presence. If they deem it necessary, they can have any issue submitted to a vote of confidence, which means that they are risking the cabinet's life on its outcome, it often may be a question of but slight importance.

As a matter of fact, French governments rarely fall on technical matters. Their stumbling blocks are usually debates involving matters of general policy.

• • • •

THIS year, the stumbling blocks which clever-handed Premier Laval is expected to push aside are both of a financial and a political order.

Faced with the same wave of economic duress as had in turn led every parliament in the world to surrender some of its prerogatives, the French Parliament last June granted M. Laval special powers to legislate by decree—laws with a view to crushing speculation and defending the French currency. Where such emergency powers ended, however, was not clearly defined, but it was understood they were broad enough for Premier Laval to embark upon a drastic deflationary policy.

Will He Fall?

With unfailing tactics, Pierre Laval slashed all public expenditures by 10 per cent, including war veterans' pensions and payments on all government bonds. He interfered with private contracts, making it compulsory for landowners to cut down their leases by 10 per cent. He took steps to bring down the cost of living and to revive the depressed French economic structure by orthodox methods.

Whether he has succeeded or not, it is still too early to say. Yet, Premier Laval's emergency powers came to an end on the last day of October and his New Deal, so to speak, must come up for ratification before Parliament, only five months after it was launched.

• • • •

CONSIDERING the hardships and pains that inevitably followed M. Laval's deflationary policy, and with the general elections of May, 1936, only a few months ahead, it is generally felt that the French Parliament, preoccupied by electoral considerations, may hesitate before putting its mark of approval on the economic measures adopted by the French government. Nevertheless, on this ground, it is admitted that thrifty Pierre Laval has a fair chance of winning over enough opponents to line up a vote of confidence.

What is regarded by political observers here as a considerably more dangerous obstacle in M. Laval's way is the so-called "question of the leagues."

Patriotic organizations, or "leagues," have existed in France for a good many years. Their importance, however, has been steadily growing since the riotous days of February, 1934, when, following a succession of political scandals and of Socialist-Radical cabinets, the Paris population clashed with the police on the Place de la Concorde. The rioting was a spontaneous public protest against the filibustering methods of the Parliament. The Socialists and Socialist-Radical members of the Chamber of Deputies regarded it as an attempt against the Parliament's—and therefore the nation's—sovereignty. They put it down as the beginning of a Fascist movement.

EVER since that day, the movement has been gaining momentum. One organization, in particular, the "Croix de Feu," headed by Col. de la Rocque, which numbered a few thousands at the beginning of 1934, now aggregates some 300,000. Although they do not carry arms, they are organized with military discipline, they stand openly against the French parliamentary system as it now functions, and their parades are enough to send their enemies raging with the accusation of "fascism."

Opposed to this so-called "Fascist" league is another organization called the "Popular Front," under whose banner all the "leftist" elements in France congregate for "the defense of the republican ideal." All in all, the "Popular Front" probably represents the majority of the French electorate; the "Cross of Fire" is better organized and speaks for the majority of the bourgeoise. Clashes between the two organizations are now so frequent that many think they may become a permanent danger for the stability of the French political system.

This conviction has caused all the leftist deputies, who form a majority in Parliament, to force the issue of the disarmament and disbandment of the "leagues" upon the Laval cabinet. It is a slippery question for the premier. He may accept, which means he may lose a large part of the conservative support in the future, to say nothing of the possible danger involved in the compulsory disbandment of hundreds of thousands of young men who are determined to put up a fight. He may refuse and be turned down as once an issue is discussed in the light of "the republican ideal" or "the democratic liberties in danger," a French politician must go left.

IN a country where politics are Public Occupation No. 1, politicians are always quite touchy about anything that might seem suspicious to the ideologic convictions of their constituents. The fiercest battles in France are fought about principles and with a profusion of ideologic lingo unknown in America.

The reason for this, according to Andre Siegfried, is that the majority of French voters still fear the return of a reactionary power. It should never be forgotten that this country has a long past of monarchial power, with privileged classes, whose spirit, at least, still survives. The Republic itself, really, is never discussed, but rather the right of certain classes to lead the nation. The rapid growth of rightist organizations, or so-called "Fascist" leagues, whose members make no bones about their contempt for the Parliamentary regime, has been strong enough to revive old fears that have been asleep for years.

The Once Over

Stock Market News.

(As it may have to be written if Government officials continue to give out opinions on whether or not it is safe to speculate.)

Abadabba & Co.—We look for higher prices. Mr. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is reported restless again and there is every prospect that he will issue another statement okaying the market as a national pastime. If not Mr. Eccles, some one else.

• • • •

Jinksy, Jinksy & Jenks.—It is our opinion that customers should remain on the sidelines for the time being with an ear to the ground. Perhaps it would be better to have both ears to the ground. The statement yesterday morning by the Department of Commerce that business was never better was somewhat nullified by the statement of the Federal Trade Commission in the afternoon that things look rather bad.

Unless you are in touch with all the Federal boards caution would seem expedient.

• • • •

Horntooter & Meaks.—Yesterday's markets were somewhat confusing, as indeed were all the factors producing it. There was a slight rally on a newspaper opinion from Big Jim Farley that the public could have a nice time in common stocks. This gave way to a rather sharp break when Prof. Tugwell, speaking at Vassar, declared it very painful to the Administration to realize that all the brokerage houses were open again.

Our advice to investors is to wear ear-laps, skip all newspaper stories dealing with official Washington, and use their own judgment.

• • • •

Smith, Smathers & Smith.—Yesterday's early gains having been dissipated by the speech of Secretary Daniel C. Roper declaring all common stocks too high for this time of year, we anticipate that today's market will drift until Mr. Roper makes another speech declaring them bargains. A rally could occur any time on a few words from most any Administration official expressing the opinion that common stocks represent the royal road to riches. This may come at any moment, in fact we are advised that the present difficulty is to keep all the Government officials from talking at once.

Snubbed General

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Guild Rejects Johnson.

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON has the capacity for making news out of even his most off-hand actions, such as applying, in a casual way, for membership in the American Newspaper Guild, which sprang into being back in the dead cat and brick bat era when the General was noisily and unconstitutionally engaged in codifying American industry. His making of the application was news, because nobody had ever looked upon the General as a newspaperman, despite his daily syndicated column. And his decisive rejection by the Washington unit was also news and, in the opinion of some of us, good news, and for the same reason.

The American Newspaper Guild is a dignified and well-organized craft union of working newspaper writers who earn their living by the precarious occupation of eliciting information for the public and presenting it to the best of their varied abilities. A good many publishers do not like it because, strangely enough, it has as one of its purposes the radical intention of securing for the journalists wages and working conditions consistent with the exacting demands of the craft. Although, at present, it is not affiliated with the A. F. of L., there is a trend in that direction.

IN its membership will be found all sorts of newspapermen, ranging from copy boys to the highly-paid columnists, and in fact its national president is none other than Heywood Broun, who does not have to live on hamburgers and coffee by any means. But, from Mr. Broun down, all the members are men and women whose time and effort are spent in the work-a-day world. It is not an aquarium of trained seals. It has a few radical and a lot of conservatives fellows, some of whom have fought on the picket line. It has conducted strikes against unsavory conditions in some shops. Some of its members are good newspapermen. Others are in it because they hope its protection will make up for their professional deficiencies. In other words, it is an organization set up for the material benefit of all the individuals who happen to be working for newspapers.

It was into such an organization that Gen. Johnson sought entrance. He had, he said, a grievance against his publishers, a newspaper syndicate. His boss, he moaned, was cutting his copy, and he wanted protection from this tyrannical action of his cruel employer. So his name was proposed to the Washington Chapter. And by a vote of 31 to 16 it was rejected. There was a good deal of muddy oratory, hardly reminiscent of the gaudy verbiage of the general's own speeches, on the night of the great rejection. And he was roundly, and sometimes wearisomely, attacked by his enemies. The temper against him was so hostile that one of his admirers was forced to charge his opponents with conducting a lynching party. But the lynchers prevailed and Gen. Johnson was hung form the limb of a very sour apple tree, scorned by some of the very lads who used to scurry around, when he was the high mogul of NRA, rushing his fiery language to the telegraph operators.

THE main line of attack was that his interests lie less with the employe than with the employer and such is contrary to the constitution of the ANG. Not since the days of Al Smith had there been such a crying to take a peek at the record. The record was found against the general. It was also the consensus that he is not one who depends entirely upon newspapering for his living and therefore not "one of us," as it were, most of those present depending upon newspapering alone for their cakes and ale.

Certain left wingers attacked him with the phraseology of Marx. There was much said about his antagonism to labor and he was chided for unfriendly statements attributed to him. Nor was it forgotten what he said during the San Francisco strike. At times the meeting sounded like Union Square. About all those who wanted him in the Guild could find to say was that he is a good guy personally. That wasn't enough. The Guild, showing rare judgment for newspapermen, decided against good fellowship. I think the 31 who didn't want the general knew just about why they didn't when they voted. And I do not think this had much to do with strike breaking or ownership or any of the other heinous crimes charged up against the poor general.

THEY voted the General down because they didn't consider him a newspaperman. They admitted he wrote a column. Well, they reasoned, so have chorus girls, husband killers, and baseball players, but that never made them newspapermen or women. They looked upon the General as a trained seal, one who came into the business or game or craft or what have you, because he had little except a name to sell. He may write for newspapers, he may do a daily stint, and he may even wear his hat on the back of his head and drink out of a bottle and typewrite with two forefingers. But somehow or other a fellow who is a lawyer by profession, a manufacturer by trade, and a soldier by training and instinct, just doesn't fit into a newspaper craftsmen's guild.

That, I think, is why they tossed the General out. He just didn't seem to belong in that club. I'd like to think it was his record as a boss that licked him, that he was blackballed because of his social beliefs, that he was barred because of an intellectual dislike for his philosophy about the system. But I can't believe it was. He happened to go to the wrong school and they snubbed him, in his own once-famous phrase, for trying to chisel in.

Drys to Buck Line in Fight Against Liquor

Will Use Football Tactics to Revive Prohibition, Parley Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 29.—Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League of America, here to plan for the future, tonight announced both a forward passing and line-bucking attack against "Demon Rum."

"Our attack may be forward passing or we may buck the line," declared O. G. Christgau, of Washington, assistant general superintendent of the league. "It probably will be straight football for a while."

Christgau recalled with optimism that the campaign which brought prohibition, now repealed, was inaugurated in this brewery center in 1908.

Recalls Past Glory.

"We started in precisely the same way" he said. "By 1909 territory began going dry and by 1913 sufficient momentum had been gained to move for national prohibition.

"In 1920 the country went dry. If history repeats itself, about the same thing may happen again—but history may speed up.

"Preliminary reports from the States indicate from a one-third to two-thirds increase in general interest manifested in our cause. This is the first convention since the situation has settled down and the dust settled over repeal. It is our first chance to look over the map and make a definite plan."

Then he got down to details.

First, he explained, counties and states will organize. Then legislative and congressional campaigns will follow.

Plans Outlined.

"Where there is no local option the league will seek to elect friendly legislators to provide local option laws," Christgau said. "Where there is local option we will try to dry up the territory. When we have enough dry territory we will seek legislation for better dry laws. If two-thirds of a State becomes dry territory it may be expected that two-thirds of the State's congressmen will be dry."

The executive committee of the league, which opens its 28th annual convention here Sunday, met this afternoon to iron out details.

Rome Treasury At All-Time High

Bankers Expect Easing of Financial Restrictions.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 29.—Italy's treasury has more money in sight than it ever held before, financial experts said today. This fact was cheering to Premier Mussolini and his ministers, who meet tomorrow to talk over household expenses. Bankers expect financial restrictions applied in the war program to be eased instead of tightened.

Money is pouring in from big conversion loans and in gold from the people. Il Duce sought money for war in three ways: Taxes, cash from bond conversions and requisition of Italian credits and securities abroad. The people have added a fourth by contributing gold.

The Bank of Italy had nearly 4,000,000,000 lire in gold October 20, when it discontinued publication of a statement. Financial sources said it still had about the same amount. Eventually the bank will get the peoples' gold and much additional gold from foreign credits and securities, which have been requisitioned from Italians.

Scrap Trade Group Declines Parley Bid

Waste Dealers Turn Down Berry's Invitation.

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The National Association of Waste Material Dealers declined today to participate in the recovery conference December 9 in Washington, under the direction of Maj. George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

Charles M. Haskins, managing director of the association, in a letter to Maj. Berry, said the invitation to join the conference "has had the careful consideration of the board of directors of this association, and with its full approval I am advising you that it will not be possible for our association to participate."

The organization embraces the National Association of Waste Material Dealers, the Secondary Metal Institute, the Waste Paper Institute, Associated Rag Industries and the Scrap Rubber Institute.

"This organization," the letter stated, "is in full sympathy with the ends sought, but because section 3 of your letter of invitation plainly indicates that a permanent council is to be set up, it feels that it cannot commit itself or the industry which it represents to representation in a body which might later be committed to foster new NRA legislation."

Clark McAdams Dies.

St. Louis, Nov. 29 (AP).—Clark McAdams, 61, contributing editor of the Post-Dispatch, died today. McAdams was a member of the Post-Dispatch staff more than 35 years. His column, "Just a Minute," was a feature of his paper's editorial page for more than 20 years.

Child Swallows Pin, Is Flown to Hospital

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Bellevue Hospital physicians prepared tonight to remove an open safety pin from the throat of 15-year-old Lillian Lennehan, of Ramsey, N. J., who was rushed by plane from the steamer Cambridge to the hospital.

The girl accidentally swallowed the pin this morning in the washroom of the steamer en route from Providence to New York.

Using a fluoroscope and X-rays Dr. John O. De Santo, of Bellevue, found the pin, point upward, embedded in the soft tissue of the esophagus.

Transfer of the girl to the hospital was made by Bill Cleveland, newspaperman, after a Coast Guard pilot gave up the attempt because of choppy Long Island Sound waters. The girl was ferried in a small boat to the plane and flown to a seaplane ramp near the hospital.

D. C. Teacher's Oath Assailed As 'Lynching'

President of Union College Says Law Strangles Free Thought.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29—An attack on "lynchers" of free thought and ideas, through legislative statute and propaganda, was made tonight by Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., before the 15th annual convention dinner of the National Council for Social Studies.

Dr. Fox voiced particular censure for the Federal ruling which requires teachers in Washington, D. C., to take monthly oaths not to teach Communist philosophy in their courses.

"There are those who think they can lynch an idea with a sudden statute," he said.

"These lynching parties rely on smothering; but you can't violently smother ideas—they escape or explode in revolution. The only way to defeat an idea is to dissolve it with a better idea.

"These lynching parties never trust the court of general good sense; they will never wait, if they can help it, for a full and fair trial of an idea before that tribunal. They are ready to start with their own lethal apparatus whenever they think its guards are weakened by the loss of prestige. The first point of attack is the public school, since schools are immediately controlled by statute. • • •

"The latest attack has come not in some remote and primitive mountain village, but in the national Capital itself.

"There, by Federal statute the 3,300 teachers must take monthly oaths not to mention or advert to the philosophy of Communism. Thus, the Constitution is to be preserved by violating the spirit if not the letter of its first amendment."

Dr. George S. Counts, of Columbia University, told the council that the American Liberty League should call itself "the American Property League," or "the American League for Big Business."

Agricultural Fair Opens in Chicago

Millions in Livestock on Display in Great Hall.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Agriculture's world's fair—the thirty-sixth annual International Live Stock Exposition—attracted thousands of farmers to the stockyards today.

The huge amphitheater, where the aristocrats of the farm animals and the kings of the grain growers will be crowned during the eight-day show, formally opening tomorrow, teemed with activity. The familiar cacophony of the barnyard resounded through the arena as breeders groomed 12,500 cattle, sheep, and hogs for the most cherished prizes in all farmdom. Some 5,000 specimens of grain, the best of a bountiful harvest, were placed on display.

Everything was done with a flourish of pride. For here were the fruits of a year of hard labor. Officials described the show as the greatest in the history of the event with $5,000,000 worth of live stock and grain from 44 States, six Canadian Provinces, England, Australia and New Zealand under the vast roof.

Fifty-four boys and girls from 18 States opened the competition today. In teams of three, they participated in a live stock judging contest with agricultural college scholarships offered by the Chicago Association of Commerce the awards of the winners.

Railroads Will Report Number of Free Passes

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday ordered class I railroads and the Pullman Co. to report quarterly during 1936 on the number of free passes issued.

Interstate Commerce Commission officials said the information would give a clearer picture "of how many passengers the railroads are actually carrying" and show how free passes are affecting rail revenues.

At present, railroads report only "revenue passengers."

Railroads can issue free passes only to certain classes of persons, including employes and their families, physicians, clergymen, inmates and agents of hospitals and eleemosynary institutions, indigent, destitute and homeless persons, inmates of homes for disabled soldiers, livestock caretakers and certain Government officials.

Portugal Gives Pan American Macao Contract

Pact Believed to Be Last Link in U. S.-to-China Air-Mail Service.

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Nov. 29.—The minister of colonies today authorized the government of Macao, Portuguese colony near Hongkong and Canton, China, to sign a contract with Pan American Airways for the transport of air mail.

The contract, it is believed, will form the final link of air service between the United States and China. The line now extends as far as Manila.

Fliers Groom Clipper.

Manila, Nov. 29 (AP).—Uncle Sam's transpacific air-mail fliers groomed their China Clipper today for an early return flight while Manila still celebrated their history-making arrival.

Mechanics began conditioning the 25-ton sky liner for the 8,000-mile trip back to Alameda, Calif., a few hours after she sailed into Manila to complete the first air-mail crossing of the Western ocean.

The homeward journey is to start December 2.

The clipper alighted on Manila Bay at 3:31 p. m. today (2:31 a. m., Eastern standard time)—just four minutes behind the schedule tentatively made out by Pan American Airways five years ago when the transpacific project was conceived.

Plane Lands on Schedule.

Despite the record distance and hazards involved, Capt. E. C. Musick brought the big plane to Manila exactly on schedule—60 hours out of Alameda—but the sudden appearance of many small craft on the bay caused him to delay the historic landing by four minutes.

Its flying time for the 1,700 miles from Guam, final stretch of the transoceanic journey, was 11 hours, 25 minutes.

While the 1,400 pounds of mail was being taken to the Manila post-office, Capt. Musick was escorted to Malacanan Palace.

There he personally delivered a letter from President Roosevelt to President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth.

"You swept away forever the distance which separated the great continent of America and the Philippine Islands," President Quezon said.

The Clipper's elapsed time from Alameda, with overnight stops at Honolulu and Midway and Wake Islands and a Thanksgiving layover at Guam, was six days. This is 19 days faster than the best steamer time.

Class Hatred Laid To New Deal Aims

Fish Tells Rotary Club Discord Is Growing.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 29.—Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, said in a talk before the Rotary Club today that the present Democratic national regime has done more to create class hatred than any other administration in the Nation's history.

Attacking the President's brain trust, rather than the party itself, Fish said he did not believe the Democrats stood for abolition of the capitalistic system. He said he did not believe Rexford Tugwell spoke for the party in enunciating socialistic doctrines of government.

Fish declared the country need not fear a revolution engineered by the Communists or Socialists. He admitted that the radicals are doing a lot of talking and creating class hatred, and he blamed the Administration for aiding and abetting them.

Attacking the "soak the rich" policy he said that this simply drives wealth into tax-exempt securities or out of the country.

"Everything isn't wrong with America," he concluded. "All we've got to do is give business a chance and it will come back."

Roosevelt Race Doubted by Eaton

Won't Seek Second Term, Says N. Y. Republican.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 29—The Detroit News says Melvin C. Eaton, chairman of the Republican State central committee in New York, predicted in an interview today that President Roosevelt would not be a candidate for renomination.

"I know that boy and I know he can't take it," the News quoted Eaton as saying. "He can't face the opposition of the conservative Democrats. He is just like Lehman (Gov. Lehman of New York). Lehman can't take it either and I doubt if he will be a candidate for re-election next year."

Eaton was quoted as saying he is "satisfied we could carry New York against Roosevelt with a Western candidate. My idea of what the country needs is a big business man in the White House. The people have awakened to the fact that it is time to get these grammar school boys out of Washington. It wouldn't surprise me if an unknown popped up and got the nomination."

FTC to Learn Who Gets Cream in Milk Trade

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission set out yesterday to learn what happens to the difference between what the housewife pays for a bottle of milk and what the farmer receives for it.

Questionnaires for dairies and milk processors throughout the country were dropped in the mails as part of a general inquiry into farm income and profits of middlemen. Congress directed the commission to make the investigation and offer recommendations for improving the economic condition of farmers and consumers.

Society Waits Arrival Of Prelate, Air Mission

Archbishop of York, Here Monday, Will Conduct Conference at College of Preachers Dec. 9-14; Aviation Group Delays Trip Here.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Again distinguished visitors are to arrive in the Capital; this time a member of the Church of England, and a delegation of prominent airmen are the city's visitors.

On Monday the Archbishop of York will come to Washington to remain for two weeks or more, during which time he will conduct a conference for clergy at the College of Preachers from December 9 to 14. On December 8, His Grace will preach at the Washington Cathedral, and on Tuesday, the English Speaking Union will entertain at a luncheon in his honor at the Willard, when Mr. Alanson B. Houghton, president of the Washington Branch of the Union, will officiate.

When at the end of 1928 the announcement was made that the then Bishop of Manchester had been appointed by King George to succeed the Most Reverend and Right Honorable Cosmo Gordon Lang as Archbishop of York, it was no surprise, for he was regarded as well fitted for the task. It is a difficult matter to summarize the many activities in which His Grace has been engaged since he became Archbishop. He has a reputation as companion, counselor, conversationalist and host, and is said to be possessed of a phenomenal memory. Bishopthorpe, his home, is a center of hospitality and Mrs. Temple, wife of the Archbishop, who is a descendant of two well-known English families, those of Anson and Acland, is associated with her husband in much of his diocesan work. Bishopthorpe has felt her influence. She will accompany His Grace to Washington, and during their stay they will be entertained extensively.

As to the other visitors, the exact time of their arrival is indefinite, but Washington is anticipating the arrival of the British-Canadian-Irish Air Mission, due to reach the Capital on Wednesday morning. This group of 17 men, representing various branches of government, will come to Washington to negotiate a transatlantic air service, and will spend about a week here. At present they are in Canada. Their arrival in the Capitol was originally planned for Monday.

The Air Attache of the British Embassy, Capt. T. E. B. Howe, had planned a reception in their honor on Tuesday afternoon at the Carlton, where the delegation will stop, but due to the change in their plans has been obliged to postpone his party until a later date. There will be a dinner at the British Embassy, and members of the State Department will plan an itinerary with the embassy as soon as the delegation arrives.

Miss Tuckerman To Attend Dance In Manhattan

Here's Product That Banishes Face Troubles

All-Purpose Cream and Masque Stimulates Circulation.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FOUND—a missing link in the beauty scheme. It's a new combination all-purpose cream and masque that gets right down to the bottom of your face troubles and does things!

Although it's a mild and soothing preparation, it penetrates into the tiny pores and chases out the dirt and superfluous matter lodging there. It has astringent qualities that help those pores to contract after they've been cleansed. Meantime it is stimulating and the blood slowly mounts to the face pepping up a sluggish circulation.

Tired sagging skins are given a lift, and faded faces bloom anew after an application of this new and excellent beauty cream and masque. There's that about it that helps sallowness to disappear, and freshens up the most dismal complexions.

Complete Manicure Sets.

ONE of the best buys in the manicure mart today is that delightful set made by a leading cosmetician.

Everything you could need in the care and culture of your nails is compactly enclosed in an attractive leather case. There are scissors, penclis, orange sticks, files, two polishes, polish remover, cuticle remover and an excellent hand cream.

The case itself has a strong appeal. It comes in black, blue, or red, and folds up to a handy size for tucking away in a valise, or keeping in the bureau drawer.

With the gift season approaching you'll want to remember that a manicure set is always sure of a welcome.

Set of Six Perfumes.

PARTNERS in charm are the perfumes assembled together in a sextet to gladden the hearts and delight the noses of all the lucky recipients. Of course it's grand enough to receive one bottle of perfume, or even two, but to fall heir all at once to a set of six—well that is something!

One of the oldest and best known French perfume concerns is sponsoring a delightful set of six favorite fragrances. They come encased in an extravagantly lovely blue and silver box. The top, parted in the middle opens out to the sides to disclose the six little fragrant gems clustered in an attractive group.

Other fascinating groups are the trio containing two squat bottles and one tall one, also in a charming box, with gracefully arched top; the quintuple combination of some particularly popular perumes; and the duo combination.

Paisley Velvet Scarfs.

When cold winds play nip and tuck with the tip of your nose and the tips of your fingers you'll want to protect yourself from the icy blasts with warm and wooly clothes. Especially warm and snug, and unusually attractive too, are the paisley velvet scarfs shown in a downtown store. These are gayly colorful, with a luminous quality about them. Contrasting to the variety of hues in the pattern are the crepe linings, solid colored.

Treatment of the Nails.

Query—Could you please tell me some treatment I might give my nails. They are as brittle as they can be, and are peeling off like onion skins. The trouble only started about a month ago and seems to be getting worse.

Answer—Such conditions are not at all unusual when cold weather comes on. Skin and nails alike have a tendency to become dryer then.

Massage your nails every night with a good nail cream. Call or write and we'll be glad to recommend one. Every two or three nights until the condition shows improvement soak the tips of your fingers in a warm oil, olive oil for instance. You will find that if you follow this treatment your nails will be vastly better in a week or two.

MISS VIRGINIA COWLES.

Writer Finds Italy Solidly Behind Il Duce

Miss Cowles Says Women Are Convinced Expansion Is Necessary.

By Dudley Harmon.

IN ITALY even the distaff side is as solidly behind Mussolini's war with Abysinnia as his most enthusiastic general.

Instead of mourning the absence of their embattled sons and husbands, Italian women believe the campaign should be pushed until Italy is victorious.

Already hundreds of women have enrolled in the Red Cross for service on the battlefields of Ethiopia. Many more are diligently studying astronomy and other subjects to be ready to sight enemy planes in the event of an air attack on Rome.

This is the news 24-year-old Virginia Cowles, young New York writer visiting in Washington, brings back from a recent trip through Italy and northern Africa. In Rome she wangled a 20-minute interview with Mussolini, and in Tripoli, where she was sent by the Italian government, she discussed with Gen. Balbo, Governor of Libya, topics ranging from Fascism to the charms of American women.

"Italians, men and women, are backing Mussolini to the limit," Miss Cowles said. "They feel he has done so much toward cleaning up Italy and increasing its prosperity that they have the utmost confidence in him.

Expansion Held Vital.

"Naturally, in a country where no one dares to talk against the government, one naturally doesn't expect to hear much against its policies. But in this particular case, the Italians aren't pretending. From the poorest peasant to the most blue-blooded aristocrat, all are convinced that expansion is vital to Italy. A friend of mine is so enthusiastic that he came all the way from China to enroll in the army and will leave for Abyssinia next week. Princess Orsini, a member of one of the noblest families in Italy, has joined the Red Cross service, and I met many women in Rome who had banded into a corps to defend the city in case of an attack."

Miss Cowles believes that constant and clever propaganda by the government is largely responsible for the present attitude.

Attend Press Conference.

When she went to Rome in September, Miss Cowles attended the press conferences held regularly by the Italian government. Here she made the acquaintance of Dino Alfieri, minister of propaganda, who obtained the interview with Mussolini for her.

Of this interview Miss Cowles would say little, as the 20 minutes she spent alone with Mussolini were strictly "off the record." However, she is enthusiastic about his personality, which she describes as extraordinarily dynamic and self-assured.

"I was most impressed," she said, by the fact that Mussolini has a sense of humor. He speaks English only fairly well, and it is always difficult to be funny in a foreign language, but Mussolini succeeded in being most witty and amusing."

Miss Cowles reports that the prevailing spirit in Italy is one of youth. Mussolini is only 43 years old, General Balbo, 39, and other generals whom she met in Africa are still in their thirties.

"Although the Italians are definitely anti-British at this moment," she said, "they are extremely sympathetic toward Americans. Those who have been to America are anxious to return, and those who haven't yet made the trip, impressed by stories of Hollywood and filibustering Senators, can hardly wait to come."

When Breckinridge Long, American Ambassador to Italy, heard that Miss Cowles was going to fly to Tripoli in an Italian plane, he did his best to dissuade her, saying he could not be responsible if anything happened. Miss Cowles replied she was willing to take the risk, and left Tripoli the day that sanctions were declared against Italy in Geneva.

Her plane did not stop at Malta, as it usually does on this trip, but flew above the British battleships in the harbor, counted them, and wired their number to Rome.

"Upon arrival in Tripoli," Miss Cowles said, "I found the harbor thronged with Italian troop ships. Everybody in town seemed to be wearing a uniform. There were so many soldiers that hotels and private houses couldn't accommodate them, and hundreds slept outdoors in grandstands."

During her week's stay in Africa, Miss Cowles had an opportunity to see the lighter side of war. She was frequently entertained by Gen. Balbo in his home in Tripoli. Here the guests amused themselves by playing ball in the courtyard, and watching Balbo shoot birds in the moonlight.

Reader Interested in Making Appointment to Inspect "Quilter's" Work.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: If you are in touch with the correspondent whose letter, published Wednesday, was signed "Quilter," will you be kind enough to ask her to telephone me some morning between 8 o'clock and 8:30? If she has really good patchwork quilts I should like to see them with a view to purchasing one. Please make it clear that she is to telephone and not to come to my address without appointment, as my time is very closely engaged and her visit might turn out to be in vain if I should not be free. If you can reach "Quilter" only through your column, will you kindly refrain from publishing my name and telephone number and ask her instead to apply to you for that information? Very sincerely yours, L. D.

* * * *

DEAR L. D.: As you anticipated, "Quilter" failed to supply her name, address or telephone number when asking for advice on how to market her handiwork. My only hope of reaching her, therefore, is through the column. If she reads your response and asks for your telephone number, I shall be glad to give it to her. I have printed enough of your letter to make it clear to her that she should not attempt to see you without arranging in advance for an interview.

How Community Chest Helps.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I was glad to note your answer given Friday, November 22, in which you referred the woman who signed herself "L. E. S." to the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals, and appreciate your giving this additional help to those in Washington who need the kind of service the Bureau renders.

May I also call attention to the fact that Community Chest funds are used in paying for hospital or clinic treatment given persons who apply to the Central Admitting Bureau for such assistance. Thus, the bureau has a double relationship with the Council of Social Agencies and with the Community Chest.

I think many people do not realize that gifts made to the Community Chest are used in this way. I hope some time you may have the opportunity to bring out this fact.

Sincerely yours,
HERBERT L. WILLETT, Jr.,
Director, the Community Chest.

* * * *

DEAR MR. WILLETT: No time seems more opportune than the present for impressing on public consciousness the fact that Community Chest funds make clinic treatment and hospitalization possible for persons with limited incomes or no incomes at all. For that reason, I am publishing your letter as submitted, and will be glad to reiterate the facts contained therein if I should have occasion in future to refer correspondents to the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

These Women Know Secrets of Chic, Say New York Designers

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The "best dressed woman in America," according to New York designers, is Mrs. Byron Foy, shown above at center. At left is Mrs. Allen Ryan, jr., and at right, Miss Gladys Swarthout, of the Metropolitan Opera, both of whom ranked high on the designers' list. The New York dressmakers compiled their list in protest to one issued by Paris designers. They insist that the Paris list contained many "frumps."

'What Is Chic?' Debate Started By Stylists

U. S. and Continental Views of Best Dressed Women Clash Sharply.

THE ETERNAL question "What is feminine chic?" is being argued again in sartorial circles from Paris to San Francisco as a result of the recently announced lists of "best-dressed women."

Continental and American ideas of feminine style clash sharply in the rival lists drawn up by Paris and New York dressmakers. The New York designers insist the Parisian style authorities have included as well-dressed many women who are "frumps." The Paris dressmakers intimate that the New York authorities show a slavishness to convention, a lack of imagination in their selections.

The American list, which is headed by Mrs. Byron Foy, daughter of Walter P. Chrysler, motor magnate, leans toward youth. The Paris list is headed by Lady Mendl, the former Elsie De Wolfe, who though no longer young is said to wear clothes that are more widely imitated than those of any other woman. Mrs. Foy is described as wearing "type" clothes, preferring tailored suitings for street wear and dark furs in the evening. Lady Mendl wears what suits her best regardless of style or convention.

The American dressmaker selected prettier faces than did the Paris designers and they gave preference to thin figures.

$40,000 Budget Denied.

Lady Mendl on her recent arrival in New York was wearing a dark blue jersey dress with ultra short skirt and carrying a sable coat. She was liberally bejeweled and wore low-heeled shoes. She denied that she spent $40,000 a year on clothes, insisting $15,000 was nearer the amount. She named Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, of Paris, as her candidate for the world's best-dressed woman. Mrs. Fellowes was on the world list selected by Paris dressmakers though below Lady Mendl in sartorial rank.

Long regarded as one of the smartest women in the world, Mrs. Fellowes in her costumes makes use of striking accessories such as colored gloves, scarfs and jewels in modernistic settings.

Some of the other sartorial preferences of the women on the world list of the best dressed are described by the Associated Press as follows:

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt likes simple rich clothes and makes her selections quickly, sometimes from sketches; Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, tall, blonde and beautiful, dressed to enhance her coloring, generally chooses pastel shades for evening wear.

Mrs. Ernest Simpson is a devotee of simplicity. She wears her dark hair smoothly parted and coiled in a small chignon and chooses the simplest of clothes, often in black.

Mrs. Porter Likes Jewels.

Beautiful jewels are a favorite accessory of Mrs. Cole Porter, wife of the American song writer. She often has hers reset in striking s'ips and accessories which she wears with plain, distinguished frocks.

Mrs. John Marriott and Mrs. Gilbert Miller like rich materials in conservative shades and are fond of trim woolen ensembles for day wear.

Ina Claire, Constance Bennett and Kay Francis are famous for their ability to choose clothes to enhance their personality and achieve striking effects.

Among chic European women the Duchess of Kent, who last year married the fourth son of King George V, is universally considered a leader. Dressmakers say her personality and charm as well as her taste in clothes would single her out for attention anywhere.

Jewels are a favorite accessory of Madame Maria Jose Sert, wife of the Spanish painter and sister of Prince Alexis Mdivani.

Princess Jean Louis De Faucigny Lucinge is another smart continental who likes striking eccentricity in costume. She has her long pointed finger nails painted dark red or brown.

The youngest girl on America's best dressed list—Miss Mary Taylor, niece of Countess Di Frasso, is usually seen in black.

Increased Risk to Motherhood From Heart Disease Is Slight

Patients Should Be Watched With Greatest Care, However; Assurance Given That Sudden Deaths From Valvular Ailment Are Rare.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN yesterday's article mention was made of the added load placed upon the heart by pregnancy. It was pointed out that the condition does not cause heart disease, but that the additionl strain on a delicately balanced heart—only previously damaged by disease—may require the exercise of special watchfulness on the part of the physician.

The question arises, what are the chances—in the presence of heart disease—of carrying pregnancy to a normal termination? In answering we must consider one condition that is recognized as of prime importance—namely, a definite narrowing (stenosis) of the valve that lies between the upper and the lower chambers on the left side of the heart. Even though this narrowing may be considerable, many patients will go through pregnancy without the slightest difficulty and with no damage to the heart. There is just one rule that must be followed strictly: A pregnant woman with the type of heart disease noted above must be watched with the greatest care. In fact, we can say that any form of heart disease adds slightly to the risk of pregnancy, but that there is little danger if the patient can be observed at frequent intervals during the term. Of course, if heart failure actually exists—with shortness of breath, exhaustion, edema, etc.— pregnancy should not be permitted to occur.

In a series of 7,670 maternity cases reported recently by Reis and Frankenthal, only 102 exhibited definite cardiac disease, although 765 showed various types of heart murmurs without heart disease. This is a rather striking observation, indicating that heart murmurs, in a high percentage of cases, may be divorced from true heart disease. Of the 102 cases with heart involvement rheumatism was the cause in the majority, and in 86 of the 102 the trouble lay in the valve separating the two chambers on the left side of the heart.

By and large, we may say then that heart disease complicating pregnancy must not be neglected or forgotten; but at the same time it need not be feared provided the attending physician is alert to the situation and competent to manage it. The condition presents a most fascinating problem, but it is a challenge that modern medicine is able to meet, thanks to the pioneer work of the late Sir James Mackenzie. Prenatal care is extremely important and a proper dietary regime must be instituted and positive rules of rest and exercise strictly enforced.

There need be no question but that the normal, healthy heart will carry easily the extra load occasioned by pregnancy, and even a diseased heart, if the muscle is good, can carry more than a 50 per cent overload without showing signs of giving way (heart failure). We must not be blind to the fact, however, that even though the mother can go through pregnancy without difficulty, some slight damage may have been inflicted, particularly if anemia has complicated the picture which may mean that the heart and its blood vessels in ficiently nourished.

It would be a blessing if we could disabuse the minds of every one that a defect of a heart valve implies the probability of sudden death. Nothing is further from the truth. Sudden deaths from valvular disease are exceedingly rare.

Two Types of Fur Coats, Seal and Caracul, Are Fashion-Firsts for Women of All Ages

Models Conform With Trend to Comfortable Clothes for Winter.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Two types of fur coats are ace-high in the opinion of the lady-who-knows-her-fashions. The seal coat with rippled collar—and the caracul coat luxurious topped with silver fox. Both are sleek and flattering . . . both are definitely fashion-firsts!

Seal is ageless from a fashion point of view—and all ages are wearing seal! It's becoming to the "deb"—and to the smart older woman who knows what flatters and becomes her. There are many versions of the seal coat. Sometimes it goes in for high Peter-Pan-ish collars . . . swagger, flaring lines, and descends to three-quarter length. Sometimes it adapts itself to the not-so-young, with a softly rippling collar, and "sleek-as-a-seal" lines—like the coat sketched above at the left of the illustration.

Caracul, with its inky, marcelled-looking surface topped by luxurious silver fox is indeed, a regal outfit . . . fit for a queen! The lady wearing the caracul coat in our sketch is quite enveloped in the silvery pelts—she's literally ambushed in fur! Here's the last word for afternoon parties—she's dressed up enough for the smartest cocktail bar in town, yet (surprise!) the glorious collar can be shed in a twinkling, and the coat, simple and unadorned, left tailored enough for the most informal occasions.

Sometimes the caracul coat shuns elegance—and goes in for Dash. Snugly belted-in models, wide of skirt and high of collar, have a reckless Cossack air about them—and a good deal of youth and verve besides. All in keeping with fashion's yen for roomy, comfortable clothes for fall and winter.

A fur coat is a precious possession—to be carefully protected from the ravages of time and weather. To help you keep your fur coat looking its best, for as long as possible, we've prepared a leaflet: "Caring for a Fur Coat." Mail us the attached coupon — with requested inclosures—and we'll send it along.

Restoration of Old Homes Is New Hobby of Mrs. Doran

A KNACK for making old things new has led Mrs. Roxana Brooks Doran, wife of James M. Doran, former prohibition administrator, into a new activity—that of restoring old Washington homes.

"I couldn't build a new house," said Mrs. Doran, who will open her fourth rejuvenated home, the Pink House, at 3414 Reservoir road, Sunday. "But nothing gives me more pleasure than to take something old and make it beautiful and useful. I like to be able to contrive something out of nothing."

Mrs. Doran has lived in Georgetown many years and has absorbed the history and atmosphere of the old homes there. Her first restoration activity was in connection with her own home at 1231 31st street. Last summer she began branching out in her house-restoration plans and now is devoting most of her time to the work. She maintains an old house can be made a model of comfort and yet not lose its tradition and sense of the past.

Mrs. Doran's father, Edward L. Brooks, was pioneer in Minnesota of interior decoration and his daughter early imbibed his zeal for helping people make their homes more attractive. Mrs. Doran's mother was an artist.

On her marriage in 1909, Mrs. Doran came to Washington. During her husband's administration as Federal prohibition administrator, she wrote a book entitled "Prohibition Punches."

Many Variations of Oyster Stew Possible and Here Are Recipes to Help the Housewife

Rich Colonial Type or Bisque, Especially for Children, Favored

Dish Made of Skimmed Milk Provides Nourishment Without Excessive Number of Calories; How to Avert Curdling.

By Dorothea Duncan.

Oyster stew may not seem like a dish that permits of many variations, yet it can be served in forms to suit different needs. There is, for instance, the rich colonial stew that is almost a meal in itself. For children who enjoy the flavor, but dislike whold oysters, a bisque will be more suitable. And the woman who must always watch her weight will find that a stew made of skimmed milk provides nourishment without an excessive number of calories.

D. DUNCAN.

If you have trouble with the oysters curdling, cook them gently just until the edges curl and heat the milk to the scalding, not the boiling point. Be sure to heat the oysters and milk separately, combining them after they are thoroughly heated.

With these general rules in mind, now let's get down to specific recipes.

Colonial Oyster Stew.

¼ cup butter
1 pint oysters
1 quart milk
1½ teaspoon salt, pepper to taste
1 teaspoon paprika.

Melt butter, add drained oysters and cook three minutes, or until edges curl. Add milk, salt, pepper and paprika, and bring almost to the boiling point and serve at once with oyster crackers.

Oyster Bisque.

1 pint oysters
4 cups milk
1 slice onion
2 stalks celery
Salt and pepper
Sprig of parsley
Bit of bay leaf
1-3 cup butter
1-3 cup flour

Drain oysters and chop. Heat slowly to the boiling point and press through a coarse sieve. Scald milk with onion, celery, parsley and bay leaf. Melt butter, stir in flour and strain milk into butter-flour mixture. Stir over a low fire or over hot water until mixture thickens. Add the strained oysters and season with salt and pepper to taste. If a thinner soup is desired, more milk may be added. Serve with fried croutons or toast sticks.

Non-fattening Oyster Stew.

There are only 90 calories in this stew. For those who like to count them it works out like this:

1 cup (8 oz.) skimmed milk, 95 calories.
1 teaspoon butter, 30 calories.
6 medium oysters, 55 calories.
True, the sum is 180 calories, but that is because the stew is ample for two servings.

The procedure is equally simple: Scald milk, add butter, oysters and liquor, salt and pepper. Heat just until oysters get plump and curl at the edges. Then serve at once.

Science Controls Butter Content

Dairy Product Is Unfailing Year-Round Source of Vitamin A.

WHILE history reveals butter as one of the oldest and most prized articles of diet, it remained for the skill of modern science to disclose its superiority as a food and to watch the food habits and diets of the dairy herd—to the end that an unvarying quality could be supplied the year round.

It is known that the vitamin content of butter may be influenced by the diet of the cow. This, however, is not a practical problem since the food for dairy cattle at all times of the year ordinarily contains an abundance of green food. Authorities point out that there is thus assured to the cow a liberal supply of vitamins for transmission through her milk. Likewise, the cow with its enormous capacity for food can accomodate the quantities of green foods furnishing vitamin A for human consumption in a compact and palatable, form.

Butter is a dependable, unvarying source of vitamin A. While butter has that "staying" quality desirable in food fat, it is still quickly and easily digested. Furthermore, dishes prepared with butter invite most favorable conditions of digestion because of their great appetite appeal.

Measured in terms of regular, receiving dividends of vitamin content, satisfying nourishment, easy-to-digest food fat, rich, nature-given flavor, butter is a worth-while year around investment.

Tall Candles for Table.

Candles on a dinner table should be tall enough to prevent the flame from shining in the guests' eyes.

Pointers Given On Hand Care

Cold weather is rough on hands—especially hands that are kept busy washing dishes and doing other "soap and water" tasks about the house.

A good lotion at night is not enough to keep the hands soft and smooth. Start from the root of the trouble. Use mild soaps always, and if any irritating substance is necessary as a cleaning agent, keep your hands from coming in contact with it by wearing rubber gloves.

Dirt will do as much to cause dry hands to crack and chap as soap and water. A pair of old kid gloves worn while dusting will keep dirt from spoiling soft knuckles and nice fingernails.

Be sure to dry your hands well after each immersing in water. If the water from which you have removed your hands has been used for cleaning and is dirty, wash your hands well with a mild soap and fresh water before drying them. A soft, clean, dry towel should be used for drying the hands.

Keep a bottle of your favorite hand lotion in the kitchen as well as in your boudoir. Rub a few drops on your hands several times during the day. Applications several times a day will give skin which has become dry through constant dipping in water added protection and keep it soft and pliable.

If hands are unusually sensitive, rub them with a heavy cream before retiring. A pair of loose cotton gloves may be worn at night to protect the bed linen from becoming stained.

Here is a treatment for tender or brittle cuticle and hangnails: Massage the cuticle each night before retiring with warm olive oil or vaseline.

For bulletin, "Care of the Hands," write to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post, inclosing name and address and a stamp.

Freshen All Salt Fish In Water Before Cooking

Salt fish should be freshened before cooking. Place the fish flesh side down in a large pan of fresh water, set the pan in a cool place and let it soak from 1 to 48 hours, changing the water several times.

If the fish is to be cooked in liquid, it will need a shorter time in water than if it is to be cooked with very little moisture.

A Meal in Itself Is This Luscious Oyster Stew

The simpler the dish, the more perfectly it must be made if it is to achieve success. Fresh, plump oysters should be cooked just until the edges curl for the best stew. Methods of Foreign Cookery Interesting And Fully Explained in This Cook Book

D. C. Institution Is Used by Other Cities to Pattern Work.

Far fields look greenest and foreign foods, while they may not excel our own American dishes, have a pleasantly exotic flavor. Recipes contributed to the International Cook Book, compiled by students and friends of the Americanization School Association of Washington, offer an opportunity for us to introduce variety in our menus.

Particularly interesting are the methods used. "Fasnachtchuechli" or "Fastnightcake" requires handling that might be characterized as tender. The dough must be laid on a clean towel over the knees and "with your fingers draw out the circles of dough wide and thin as paper." The recipes apparently

Cooks who are interested in foreign foods will enjoy the display at the seventh annual international bazaar of the Americanization School Association, December 2 and 3, in Webster School, Tenth and H streets northwest. Some of the recipes contributed by students and friends are given in the accompanying story; others will be available at the bazaar.

Proceeds of the affair will be used to defray association expenses, assist needy members and spread cheer at Christmas by distribution of toys and baskets of food.

'Born Cooks' Who Know Ingredients Present Short Recipes.

are contributed to the book by what we often refer to as "born cooks," for length of baking and cooking temperature are uniformly absent. The skillful cook knows instinctively how many grains are contained in a "dash of pepper" and when a fried food has reached just the proper shade of brown.

The most succinct recipe is one for "Pap Drink," contributed by W. Liegus: "Beat the yolks of two eggs into a glass of orange juice. Drink."

"Creme Brulee," a recipe for which one Post reader asked several months ago unavailingly, is supplied by Miss Catherine Cain. The directions follow:

Creme Brulee.

6 egg yolks
1 pint cream
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup sugar

Mix yolks, sugar and flour well in a saucepan antd bring to the boiling point with the cream which has been heated, too. Stir constantly until thick, but do not allow to boil.

Line a souffle case (a mold) with caramel and pour in the above mixture. Allow to get perfectly cold. Sprinkle top fairly thick with icing sugar and stand under grill until candy is formed on top.

The following recipe, which is unusual enough in our own country to be interesting, is provided by Maria Wankova:

Czechoslovak Cake.

6 ounces butter
7 ounces flour
2 ounces confectioner's sugar

Mix together the butter, flour and confectioner's sugar and make into four flat rounds. Bake them in a slow oven and remove from the sheet when the cake is really cold.

2 ounces confectioner's sugar
3 ounces currant jelly
3 egg whites.

Now mix the sugar and jelly and add the egg whites. Spread this mixture on the rounds and put them together. On the second day, decorate with whipped cream and serve.

Washington's Americanization School, of which Miss Maude E. Eaton is principal, is watched by other cities who pattern similar activities after it. The students are not only foreigners who want to learn to be good American citizens, but underprivileged Americans who are trying to make up in their adult life for educational opportunities which were denied them in their youth. Both day and night sessions are held.

The Americanization School Association was organized by Souren Hanessian, who is also business manager, to round out the work of the school. Under the supervision of the Board of Education, the school does a great deal of valuable work for which public funds are not available. The association sponsors these activities.

The seventh annual bazaar, which will be held in the A. S. A. Library in the Webster School, Tenth and H streets northwest, on December 2 and 3, will help to defray association expenses. Luncheon and supper will be served each day. Articles for sale are being donated by members representing 50 nationalities. Foreign foods will be on display, and directions for making them also will be sold.

Bubbling Chicken a la King Enlivens Chafing Dish Supper

Like many another quaint custom of the past, chafing dish suppers have sprung into popularity again. Chicken a la king, for instance, may be served from the kitchen just as efficiently, but it is more fun to have the bubbling dish there on the table and it creates an air of informality that is conducive to conversation and good cheer.

The chicken a la king can be made at the table with guests assisting, or in advance, and kept hot in the chafing dish during the entire meal. With it we suggest a salad made with crisp lettuce or other salad greens with thin slices of onions and radishes, well seasoned and served with a French dressing. Hot muffins or rolls, with plenty of fresh butter and a tart jelly, dessert and a beverage may complete the meal.

For dessert we suggest baked rosy apples served with a pitcher of cream and butter cookies, coffee or tea for the adults and milk for the children.

The chicken a la king may be served on crisp slices of buttered toast. Made with plenty of milk, eggs, butter and cream, it is a substantial main dish that most people enjoy. If you are planning a supper party for eight, the recipe given is sufficient.

Chicken a la King.

2 cups cold diced chicken
1 onion
3 tablespoons butter
1½ cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 green pepper
3 or 4 mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup cream
3 tablespoons chopped pimento

Cook the shredded green pepper and mushrooms in 3 tablespoons butter 5 minutes. Add grated onion, flour (thin paste), 1½ cups milk, salt and paprika to taste. Add the chicken, pimento, bring to boiling point, and add ½ cup cream with 2 eggs beaten in it. Cook about 5 minutes. Serve on buttered toast.

On Cake Baking.

The four stages during the baking of a cake are as follows: first, cake should rise; second, cake should continue to rise and begin to brown; third, rising should be completed, and cake should continue to brown; fourth, cake should settle and shrink from pan.

Washington FLOUR

You will want to keep this superior flour in your pantry continuously because it is one flour which you can rely upon in every baking. There is a reason and you will soon discover it when you use it.

Every Sack Guaranteed

Plain Washington Flour for all purposes.

Self-Rising Washington Flour for biscuits, waffles, shortcakes, etc., made without baking powder.

Martha Washington Cake Flour that makes deliciously moist cakes that stay moist.

Sauerkraut, Old German Dish, Popular

Economical and Healthful, Former 'Alien' Is Now Among 'Best Sellers.'

When sauerkraut was introduced to the United States by German settlers it was regarded as an alien dish, but it has achieved such popularity that in restaurants and grocery stores it now ranks among the "best sellers," proving that it suits many appetites.

Economical, because cabbage or "kraut" is usually among the cheaper vegetables, sauerkraut has other advantages. The mineral and vitamin elements are health factors, balancing the starchy foods toward which we lean in winter months. The fermentation process by which it is made produces a racy flavor, stimulates the gastric juices and helps digestion.

The familiar "spare ribs and sauerkraut" is only one of many ways in which this vegetable may be used. Recipes which are worth filing, because they vary the formula, follow.

Sauerkraut With Apples and Spaghetti.

1 quart sauerkraut
1½ cups cooked spaghetti
1 onion, sliced
2 large apples, diced
½ cup hot water
3 tablespoons butter or a substitute

Brown the onion in the butter, add the drained sauerkraut and continue the cooking until the sauerkraut is slightly browned. Add the water, cover and cook for ten minutes. Add the apples and the spaghetti. Mix well with a fork and continue cooking until the mass is slightly browned and no liquid left.

Kraut Ensemble.

1 package noodles
1 can kraut
2 pounds fresh pork sausage

Form the sausage into patties and brown in a skillet, drain off the fat. Place a layer of noodles in a casserole, over them with half of the raw sauerkraut. Place half the sausage patties over the kraut. Then add a layer of noodles and kraut, and on top place the remainder of the pork sausage. Add ½ cup of water and bake covered from 45 to 60 minutes in a moderate oven. Remove cover from casserole to brown pork sausage about ten minutes before serving.

Sauerkraut and Beans.

This is an economical dish much in favor in southern Germany. To one-half pound of sauerkraut add one-quarter pound of wax beans (previously cooked) and cook the two together until done.

Young Dill Leaves Delicious Seasoning

Drab Pot Herb Broadens Flavoring Field.

DRAB-LOOKING dill, a favorite pot-herb that previously offered its spicy flavor exclusively to the lowly pickle, has broadened its flavoring field.

According to Miss Miriam Birdseye, of the Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture, the tender spicy young leaves of the dill plant, before it goes to seed, make a delicious seasoning. She suggests using chopped leaves to flavor the sauces for creamed chicken, shrimp, or other creamed meat dishes. A pinch of chopped dill on broiled lamb chops, fried fish, veal cutlets or steak with plenty of hot butter poured over it to bring out the flavor is delicious. Bits of leaves added to salads, omelettes, scrambled eggs and soups give a different flavor that tastes good.

Use Mushroom Stems.

Mushrooms can be the mainstay of a light meal. Fried whole, in butter, or cubed and creamed, they are excellent on toast. Waste not, want not; so use the stems as well as the caps. And remember, that the skin of the commercially grown mushroom is so tender that it need not be removed. Simply wash and cut off the bottom of the stem that has been exposed to the air.

Pudding Methods.

The water used in the utensil for steaming puddings should be kept boiling throughout the entire steaming process. If more water is needed, boiling water should be added.

Takoma Park Seeks Funds For Memorial

Concert, Play Benefit to Commemorate Founder of Town.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland and Mrs. Nice have been invited to act as patrons for the Gilbert Memorial benefit concerts, to be given by the Washington Shakespeare Society, Friday and Saturday, December 6 and 7, at Presbyterian Hall, Takoma Park, when the society will present "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

Other notables who have been asked to lend their support to the affair, given for the purpose of raising funds to establish a suitable memorial for the founder of Takoma Park, Benjamin F. Gilbert, are District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, George E. Allen and Col. Dan I. Sultan; Montgomery County Commissioners Frank H. Karn, president of the board of commissioners; Paul M. Coughlan, Richard H. Lansdale, Charles E. King and Robert D. Hagner; Prince Georges County commissioners headed by Perry Boswell, president of the board; Mayor Frederick L. Lewton, of Takoma Park, Md., and Councilmen John R. Adams, Arthur L. Conger, Harold W. Orcutt, Peter Remsen, Royal G. Sherburne and Millard C. Taft, and their wives, along with a large number of leading citizens of Takoma Park, particularly the residents of the community who settled here 50 years ago.

The benefit concerts are being sponsored by the Historical and Memorial Committee of the Takoma Park Citizens Association. Dr. William A. Hooker is chairman of the committee. Dr. E. V. Wilcox, president of the Shakespeare Society, is a former resident of Takoma Park and the society has previously appeared here in "As You Like It" and "The Merchant of Venice."

The field supervisors and allotment committee of the Montgomery County Corn-Hog Control Association will meet today at the office of the county agent, O. W. Anderson, in the courthouse at Rockville.

Plans for making the final check on hog production in the county will be made, and supervisors will be given instructions regarding the compiling of necessary information. This work must be completed before producers can receive final adjustment payment.

With a view of organizing a federation of county churches, a group of Montgomery County ministers this week created a new association known as the Montgomery County Ministerial Union. Additional Protestant ministers are being invited to affiliate before January 6, when an organization meeting will be held in Rockville.

The Rev. Edwin S. Sheppe, of Rockville, is president of the new union; the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, Silver Spring, vice president; the Rev. Thomas F. Opie, Olney, secretary, and the Rev. H. O. Cooper, Rockville, treasurer. The officers and the Rev. O. C. Barnes, Hyattstown, and Dr. Frank A. Tyler, Gaithersburg, comprise the executive committee.

Mrs. Frances E. Pond, Bond avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was granted an absolute divorce from William G. Pond, 4415 Illinois avenue, Washington, in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County, Rockville, Md., yesterday.

The petition stated that the couple was married at Rockville, Md., on November 17, 1831, and have no children. According to testimony, the plaintiff was deserted February 23, 1932. The plaintiff was allowed to resume her maiden name, Frances R. Roseman. Mrs. Pond was represented by Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, Md.

Mrs. Mary E. Howes filed suit yesterday for an absolute divorce from Edwin E. Howes, in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County.

The plaintiff charges misconduct and desertion. The couple was married on December 8, 1927, and have two minor children, Alice, 4 years old, and William, 3 months old.

Mrs. Howes asks that she be awarded the custody of the children and be allowed alimony. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Stedman Prescott.

Woman Badly Burned When Stove Explodes

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 29 (AP).—Mrs. John Jones, Quantico, was critically burned today by showers of flaming kerosene from an exploding stove. She was brought to a Peninsula General Hospital here. Dr. Jesse Wanner said she was not expected to live.

Mrs. Jones was attempting to light a fire in the stove. Her home was destroyed by fire set by the explosion.

Officials Urge A Central Site For Postoffice

New Arlington Building Would Improve Service, Board Is Told.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Consideration is being given the establishment of a central postoffice for Arlington County, it was learned yesterday.

Two postal inspectors, A. M. Simpson and L. C. Walker, yesterday attended the meeting of the county board at the request of Roy S. Braden, county manager.

The inspectors told the board that a central office would mean improved mail service in the county. They said that 60 per cent of the county's residents now receive their mail through branch offices at Clarendon, Arlington and Cherrydale.

In a letter to B. M. Smith, chairman of the county board, Representative Howard W. Smith stated:

"I have been working for more than a year on the matter of a central postoffice for Arlington County, and while the matter is not in shape where I can say definitely that it will be accomplished, the Postoffice Department is making certain investigations, and I expect to have a report in the next week or ten days. If the report is favorable it will involve a good many details connected with the postal service for the whole of Arlington County, and before doing anything definite about it, in that event, I would like to meet with the board and a small delegation from the Chamber of Commerce and the Civic Federation and go over the details of the matter."

After informing the board that his office was working overtime in searching property titles for Lee boulevard rights-of-way, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas was authorized to engage the services of Attorney Claude O. Thomas to assist him in the search. Douglas told the board that he has received $86,000 from the State Highway Department for the purchase of 25 pieces of property, and that an additional $17,000 is still to come from the State for more rights-of-way.

Total expenditures for the month amounting to $144,721.34, of which $100,000 was for retirement of water bonds and $15,345.85 for the monthly pay roll, was approved by the board.

In the afternoon the board, with Douglas and Braden, met the owners of property located between Columbia pike and Glencarlyn, which may be purchased for a park. This is the first definite step taken toward acquiring sites for park areas in the county.

Christmas savings totaling $97,642 will go in the mails from the three banks in Arlington County Monday. The sum is divided among the three banks as follows: Arlington Trust Co., $32,742; Old Dominion Bank of Cherrydale, $39,900; the Clarendon Trust Co. $25,000.

Work will be started today by the county road department in resurfacing all roads in Virginia Highlands along which sewers have been installed.

Roads in Ballston, Barcroft and Clarendon have received a gravel surface and are now being prepared to receive the final surface treatment of stone and tar.

The Arlington Lodge, No. 193, I. O. O. F., has nominated the following slate of officers:

Clarence Yeatman, noble grand; J. W. Myers, vice grand; H. W. Beattie, secretary; C. P. Heins, financial secretary, and Carl Sanderhoff, treasurer. Further nominations will be made at the meeting next Tuesday night. The election will take place Tuesday, December 3, in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon.

P.-T. A. to Hear Noted Speakers At Alexandria

The Alexandria Parent-Teachers Association will sponsor a parent-teacher institute Tuesday and Wednesday, when Mrs. Charles E. Roe, field secretary of the Parent-Teacher Congress, will be the principal speaker. The meetings will be held in the Jefferson School annex auditorium at 10 to 11:30 a. m. and 1:30 to 3 p. m. each day.

Dr. W. T. Sanger, of Richmond, president of the Virginia Parent-Teachers Association, will also speak, and Miss Ruth Bottomly, national summer-time round-up chairman, will be present and assist in the training school.

Tuesday's work will be on committees and their duties, and the last session on Wednesday will be a model Parent-Teachers Association meeting.

All patrons of the school are invited, as well as members of the various P.-T. A. school units, and many of those living a distance from the school are planning to bring a box lunch, to attend both morning and afternoon sessions.

District Deputy Murphy and State Warden Lucas, of the Knights of Columbus, installed the officers of Fitzgerald Council on Wednesday night at the K. C. home, St. Asaph and Cameron streets. The new officers are John A. Lannon, jr., grand knight; Frank Nowland, deputy grand knight; Robert Cary, chancellor; William J. Greenan, financial secretary; Richard L. Carne, recorder; Thomas J. McFarland, treasurer; Francis X. Buckley, warden; William A. DeVaughan, advocate; Thomas J. O'Reilly, inside guard; Richard Collum, outside guard; Charles Collum, lecturer; George W. Kimball, Robert Johnson and George Manger, trustees.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Park and Planning Commission, will address the Alexandria Association at its meeting to be held on Monday evening in Gadsby's Tavern. The mayor, other members of the city council and city officials are invited to attend.

The Alexandria Rotary Club will stage a turkey shoot on Monday evening at 7 o'clock, for the benefit of the Christmas party for the Alexandria Childrens Home and Day Nursery. The shoot will be on a vacant field a half mile west of King street, off Janney's lane. The field will be illuminated.

The funeral of Mrs. Fannie W. Embrey, 84 years old, widow of William Embrey, who died on Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Ritchie, Hinton, Va., will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the home of her son, John W. Embrey, 1505 King street, Alexandria, and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church. Mrs. Embrey is survived by four children, J. T. and J. W. Embrey, of Alexandria; Mrs. Carrie Wilkins, Middletown, Va., and Mrs. Ritchie.

Mrs. Vesper C. Hammond, widow of Edgar H. Hammond, died on Thursday night in the Alexandria Hospital. Her home was at 213 South Payne street. She is survived by one son, Joseph William Hammond; a sister, Mrs. C. W. Tucker, of Alexandria, and a brother, Joseph Padgett, of Richmond. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from Christ Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of the church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery, Alexandria.

Mrs. Sarah J. Simmons, 80 years old, widow of Henry Simmons, died on Thursday at her home at 707 South Lee street. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. L. E. Marrifield. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the home and will be conducted by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery, Alexandria.

Rev. Schermerhorn Dies in Home Here

The Rev. Lucien V. Schermerhorn, 70, who was in the service of the Lutheran and Presbyterian denominations for nearly half a century, died yesterday in the Washington Home for Incurables.

The Rev. Mr. Schermerhorn held several pastorates in the Washington and Baltimore presbyterys, the last of which was at Vienna, Va.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hillie Elizabeth Schermerhorn, and two sons, Vincent A. and Ellsworth H. Schermerhorn, all of Silver Spring, Md.; one brother, Philip J., of Schenectady, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. Alice B. Parker, Albany, N. Y., and Mrs. Rozella Shultes, Westbern, N. Y.

Funeral services will be at 10 a. m. Monday in the Fourth Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

D.C. Tax Unit Drafts 10-Yr. Fiscal Plan

Partial Report Will Go to Commissioners for Final Decision.

Program May Be Based on Outlays of $6,000,000 to $7,500,000.

A partial report putting up to the Commissioners for decision the limits of a fiscal program for the District for the next 10 years, was agreed on by the special municipal tax committee at a meeting yesterday.

Wording of the report, drafted by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel and committee chairman, is to be considered at another meeting today and submitted immediately to the Commissioners, Mr. Prettyman said.

The report may serve as the basis for a public hearing by the Commissioners. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced the Commissioners would not consider submitting any fiscal program to Congress without first giving the public opportunity to express its views.

Should the Commissioners accept the partial report as the basis for a hearing the tax committee will withhold completion of the report until after the hearing so that decisions of the Commissioners resulting from views expressed might be incorporated. The Commissioners may, however, ask the committee to proceed with completion of the report, along lines they suggest before calling the public hearing on the completed proposed program.

One of the outstanding features of the report is expected to be the figure proposed by the committee as the amount necessary for capital expenditures in the next few years. A first suggestion was that $10,000,000, would be required annually for this purpose.

This figure was modified during the discussions, however, and the committee figure may be put at $7,500,000 a year, although some members believe it should be put in the neighborhood of $6,000,000.

Determination of a reasonable figure will be put up to the Commissioners. What the figure should be in any one year, it was pointed out, would be materially influenced by any major capital outlay in that year. Provision for construction of the proposed small-court buildings was cited as an example. That one item is estimated to cost $3,000,000.

The capital expenditure figure will color the fiscal program. On the basis of an outlay of $10,000,000 a year the District would have to raise for next year something like $7,000,000 more revenue. Inheritance, revised utilities taxes, increased gas and automobile weight tax would yield $4,350,000, it is estimated. This would leave an additional $3,000,000 to be raised.

Neither is it expected to recommend enactment of all the "big four" (the four sources believed most likely to net the required revenue), which were cited for study by the Commissioners.

Need for increased revenue, however, is to be pointed out, especially in view of the annual increase of about $1,000,000 a year in operating and maintenance costs. This annual increase is greater than the prospective annual increase in revenues from existing taxes and the discrepancy seems likely to grow in the future, leaving less and less for capital outlay as the years go by unless present taxes are increased or new ones levied.

2,000 Jobless Here Get Work On PWA Jobs

1,500 Women Among Unit to Start Monday; New Plans Approved.

Two thousand more relief clients of the District are to be put to work on WPA projects beginning Monday, it was announced yesterday. This will bring the number at work up to 10,500.

Jobs for additional workers are provided in projects given approval during the day by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl. Approval carried a cash allotment of $400,000.

Of the workers who are to go to work on Monday, 1,500 will be women who have been engaged, for the most part, in sewing-room work, where various articles are made for other needy persons. About 250 other women are to go to work on the free school lunch project, along with 70 men. Others will be assigned to various scattered projects. Officials estimate a total of 13,500 jobs will be required to take all employables off relief and put them on the WPA security wage basis.

Projects approved by McCarl included construction of new buildings and animal cages and repair of existing buildings and equipment at the Zoo, to cost $229,632; repair drains and sewers, $56,802, and repair of roads and walks, $24,872; stone for new buildings, $13,832, a total of $334,938 for the Zoo.

The Army Medical Center was alloted $16,752 for grading and building tennis courts, $17,604 for tree planting and landscaping, $9,802 for painting interior and exterior of main building.

The National Training School for Boys was allotted $18,491 for grading main athletic field and six playgrounds, and $21,497 for landscaping and improving grounds and approaches. The amount approved for these projects by McCarl is $19,064 less than estimated as necessary. This will have to be saved by economies.

Meningitis Victim Arrested as Drunk

Treatment for Alcoholism Reveals Disease.

Arrested and booked for drunkenness at the First Precinct Wednesday, Thomas McLendon, 40, 487 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was found to be suffering from spinal mengitis yesterday.

Unable to appear in court Thursday, McLendon was held at the precinct. Yesterday afternoon the man appeared to be still suffering the effects of alcohol. He was ordered removed to Gallinger Hospital for treatment by Capt. Harvey G. Callahan.

At the hospital the man was treated for alcoholism, while there it was discovered he was suffering from spinal mengitis, and he was removed to the isolation ward.

Boy Is Cleared After Stabbing Of Companion

homicide squad, shook his hand, little Ray still tried hard to keep his freckled chin from quivering. But it quivered a little in spite of him.

Ray and William had been friends for a long time. They played together in Georgetown and "almost never had a fight."

But on Tuesday afternoon, when school was over, Ray found an old pocket knife in a trash heap near Thirty-sixth and Prospect avenue northwest. He polished it up a bit and carried it with him.

Teasing Described.

Then he met William and Frank Leebrick, 13. He showed them the knife. They played together until nearly dusk. Ray picked up a twig and started to whittle. Supper time came and the boys went home. After supper they met again. Ray still had the knife and the twig.

William was bigger than his playmates. When their fertile minds exhausted all ideas for amusement, the younger boys started to tease William.

They called him names—"Sissy," "Chaw-tobacco" and "Suds."

"We wanted to get William to chase us," Frank testified yesterday.

Frank told the coroner's jury what happened after that.

"Ray came to my house (1224 Thirty-sixth street northwest)" Frank testified. "He had the knife and it was open. He kept running in and out the back door and yelling at William, who was standing near the back porch. After a while my sister held the door so Ray couldn't come back in. Then I heard a noise. My sister opened the door and William fell inside, all covered with blood."

Ran to Tell Mother.

And then the wounded youngster, the jury was told, staggered down the back stairs and ran into the street. He was taken to the hospital by George H. Carter, a street car pitman, who was working nearby.

Just before he started to the hospital, William turned to Ray, who had followed him.

"Come to the hospital with me, Ray. You stabbed me in the heart and the police will be looking for you," he said.

But Ray ran home and told his mother what happened. And then the police came to his home, 1317 Prospect avenue northwest, and took him to the Seventh Precinct station.

As he took the witness stand yesterday, little Ray moistened his lips and told Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald that he would tell the truth. Then he told his story.

William followed him to the Leebrick home and chased him up the back stairs. Ray said:

"I ran into the house and came out again several times. Virginia Leebrick (12-year-old sister of Frank) held the door and I couldn't get back in the last time.

"William came up the stairs and started fighting me. I had the knife in my hand and I guess he fell against it. I didn't mean to stab him dead. He was fighting me and I was trying to back away. I was fraid he would knock me over a flower box and Mrs. Leebrick would get after us."

During Ray's testimony, his mother, Mrs. Luther Smallwood, sat across the room and listened. There were tears in her eyes.

And near-by sat Vernon Suddath, the dead boy's father. There were tears in his eyes, too. His wife was home—under the care of a physician.

A few minutes later the coroner's jury filed out. And then came the verdict:

"We find that William Suddath was killed during a playful altercation with Rayburn Smallwood. His death was accidental."

Brawl Shooting In Beer Garden Laid to Owner

Young Victim Is Dying as Hoyle Is Identified by Two.

Two witnesses have identified S. Bruce Hoyle as the man who fired a shot into the stomach of Irving Stewart, 23-year-old Washington mechanic's helper, during an early morning brawl in Hoyle's beer garden on the Marlboro pike yesterday.

Announcement of the identification was made last night by Montgomery Policeman Elon Turner, of Upper Marlboro, who is conducting the investigation.

Stewart, who lives at 627 Twelfth street northeast, lay near death in Casualty Hospital. Police said his condition was too critical to permit removal of the bullet.

Turner said witnesses told him Hoyle fired the shot as he was standing in the doorway of Hoyle's place, known as Bruce Inn, about a mile and a half from the District line, at the height of a free-for-all fight that began when one of the patrons of the place objected to a man dancing with his girl.

Hoyle denied he fired the shot. He said the shot came from a man standing in the doorway behind him.

Hoyle was taken into custody and placed under a $1,000 bond by Magistrate Horace Taylor pending outcome of Stewart's wound.

Identification of Hoyle was made, Turner said, by two of the 11 friends that accompanied Stewart.

P.U.C. Grants $118,665 Slash In Phone Toll

New Fees for Special Services Effective Tomorrow.

Reductions Approved Without Hearings in Public.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved reductions amounting to $118,665 a year in special charges and rates of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. The new rates are to become effective tomorrow. They do not represent a general reduction in rates.

Announcement by the commission it had approved the changes proposed by the company was the first time the new rates were made public. Notice that it intended to submit changed rates was given the commission by company officers November 20. Although never made public, the new rates have been the subject of confidential conferences between company officers and members of the commission, which waived the legal requirement of 10 days notice of changes and dispensed with public hearings prior to approving the reductions.

Equipment Cheaper.

Greatest amount of the reduction is embraced within a new "elective" rate for individual business telephones. This provides for 100 calls for $5.50 a month, 5 cents a call for the next additional 50 calls and 4 cents a call for the next 50 and 3 cents a call for all over that total. The present rate is $3.60 for the first 50, with the same rates for additional calls. The company estimated this would mean a total reduction of $44,200 to users of this service in a year. There are 6,400 of such users.

Charges for special equipment for deaf persons was reduced from $1.75 a month to $1.25. There are 92 of these in use. It is estimated users will save $550 a year.

Installation charges for "jack and plug" type of service was reduced from $4 a month to $3. This is the type of service where the telephone is carried about by the maid who plugs into jacks where wanted. There are 450 of these in use. The new rate will save them $450 a year.

Flat Charge Cut.

The company also reduced its extra charges for installation of extra length cords on telephones. For a 9-foot cord the charge was reduced from $1.50 to $1; for a 13-foot cord the charge was reduced from $2.50 to $1.25. There are 500 of these in use. The reductions are estimated to save $365 a year.

The flat charge of 60 cents a month for extensions from private branch exchanges was reduced to 50 cents. There are 621 such exchanges in use in the city. It is estimated the reductions will save users $16,500 a year.

Charge for semi-public telephones, such as those in boarding houses, also was changed. It has been $6 a month for a maximum of 90 calls. It will be $5.50 for 80 calls, plus 5 cents for each additional call. There are 1,770 such stations. It is estimated the saving will be $10,600 a year.

Reductions also were made in the service connection charges for extension telephones where two or more connections are made at the same time. There are 335 of these now in use. The reduction will amount to $10,000 a year, it was estimated.

Navy's 'Forgotten Man' Seeks Pay Due in 1881

Sands, Whose Father Embalmed Lincoln, Fights for Share of $332,342 Set Aside to Reimburse Yard Workers for Overtime Labor Years Ago.

The "forgotten man" among the Washington Navy Yard workers of the early eighties, who are now about to be paid for overtime work done more than 50 years ago, turned up yesterday.

He is H. A. Sands, 79 years old, of 1346 G street southeast, whose father embalmed Abraham Lincoln while one of Washington's leading undertakers.

Sands only yesterday learned that he was entitled to compensation under the long-delayed act appropriating $332,342.74 to survivors and heirs of 1,400 Navy Yard workers who were forced to work from sunup to sunset by a slave-driving cabinet member, Secretary of the Navy R. W. Thompson.

While calling upon his old friend, W. C. White, 75, of 2116 Thirteenth street southeast, Sands learned that White had filed a claim for $94.96. An examination of the veteran Washington Navy Yard workers listed in the Congressional act failed to reveal Sands' name, however.

"Why, I remember when we worked together in the Navy Yard," White recalled. "Sure he's entitled to the money, just as much as I am."

Sands, who subsequently spent 34

years in the service of the Office of Public Buildings and Grounds, says he was a laborer in the Washington Navy Yard in 1881 and 1882. He plans to take his case up with the anonymous Washington attorney who is putting through the claims of Washingtonians named in the act.

The lawyer, who now has a large and distinguished clientele began the fight for the pay adjustments when he was a young man just starting to practice law, about a quarter of a century ago. He prefers to remain anonymous.

Two other Washingtonians who actually performed service in the Washington Navy Yard when Secretary Thompson required them to work ten hours a day in the summer, because the days are longer, and eight horus in the winter, are Charles M. Nicholson, 79, of 813 I street southeast, and John C. Kiethley, 83 years old, of 351 Tenth street southeast.

These, with White, are the only known survivors listed in the act though there are 349 claims based on work done in the Washington Navy Yard.

The three known survivors, interviewed yesterday, were still somewhat skeptical of the news that they would shortly be paid the claims they had practically abandoned until Congress acted last session.

They were a bit vague about the details of the overtime work, done when the Washington Navy Yard was engaged in the repairing of wooden naval vessels.

"Fifty years is a long while, young man," White said as he tried to recall the length of time the 10-hour day was in operation.

Nicholson was more clear in his recollection that the period was from 1878 to 1882, inclusive. A one-time policeman, he will get $192.49.

"Wages were very low then," said White. "Laborers got $1.50 a day, and even the best mechanics were paid only $4. Now they get $8, $10 and even $15."

Grover Cleveland was given credit for ending the 10-hour day by Kiethley, who has $411 coming to him. Feeble with age and almost blind, Kiethley said: "I thought I'd never live to see the claim paid.

White, still hale and hearty despite his years, said that a score of lawyers had solicited the business of the Navy Yard workers whose claims became so enmeshed in Governmental red tape that they almost set a record in the Court of Claims that is filled with long-drawn out cases.

"They used to mail us cards and asked for $1 or 50 cents to represent us," White said. "One fellow got down as low as a quarter."

White estimated that he had spent about $10 in such trivial fees.

"And I won't believe we're going to get the money until I see it," he added.

Police to Test Alibis of Pair In Lynch Case

Burke Is 'Not Entirely Satisfied' by Stories of Two Men.

Hacker Gives Evidence Tending to Verify Kappel's Version.

Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, last night said that he was "not entirely satisfied" with the alibis of the two men under arrest in connection with the fatal shooting of Miss Elizabeth R. Lynch.

Miss Lynch, a switchboard operator employed by the Potomac Electric Power Co., was found dead on Wednesday morning in the kitchen of her home at 918 Fourth street northeast, a bullet hole through the left side of her head.

The men held are William A. (Dutch) Kappel, 34, a friend of the dead girl, and Leo Cullen, 31, of 718 Fourth street northeast. Burke said that a thorough check was being made of their statements.

Hacker Reports.

A taxi driver reported to police yesterday that he picked up a man at Fourth and H streets northeast about midnight Tuesday and took him to the 1200 block of New York avenue northwest.

Kappel had previously told police that he took Miss Lynch to her home about midnight Tuesday. When she would not permit him to enter the house—where he also lived—he left, hailing a cab at Fourth and H streets northeast.

Detectives were told by Kappel that he rode downtown in the cab, where he joined Cullen at a "club" in the 1200 block of New York avenue northwest. The two remained there until 6 a. m. Wednesday, police were told.

To Be in Line-Up.

The taxi driver is to appear at a police line-up when Kappel will be given a chance to identify him as the driver with whom he rode Tuesday night after leaving Miss Lynch.

Kapel told police that he returned home Wednesday morning, walked into the kitchen and discovered Miss Lynch lying on the floor.

Members of the homicide squad believe Miss Lynch was murdered. Bruises found on her leg and a broken kitchen chair indicate that she struggled with someone before she was killed, they say.

Man Demands Trial In Auto Death Case

Arraigned before Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday under the negligent homicide law, Joseph H. Chick, 1123 New Jersey avenue southeast, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial.

Chick had been held by a coroner's jury as the result of an accident on November 23, in which it is alleged he struck and killed Richard Good, colored, 88 L street southwest, at Seventh and Water streets southwest.

Drama of South Occupies First Place at Earle

Benny Davis Holds Stage; Ronald Colman Fox Hit; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SO RED THE ROSE." Paramount picturization of the novel by Stark Young, adapted to the screen by Laurence Stallings, Maxwell Anderson and Edwin Justus Mayer, starring Margaret Sullavan, with Randolph Scott, Janet Beecher, Walter Connolly, Elizabeth Patterson, Dickie Moore, Charles Starrett, Johnny Downes, Clarence Muse, Daniel Haynes and Warner Richmond. Directed by King Vidor. Previewed Tuesday, November 26.

Making no pretentions to the epic sweep of "The Birth of a Nation," nor yet to the poignant pathos of Edward Peple's magnificently nonpartisan play of "The Littlest Rebel"—soon to be released in picture form, by the way—"So Red the Rose," nevertheless presents a memorable and, in many respects, admirable study of the South that suffered the tragic demolition of its every ideal of gracious living in the War Between the States.

The Stark Young novel has been adapted to the uses of the screen by three of the most expert dramaturgists known to the contemporary theater—Laurence Stallings, Maxwell Anderson and Edwin Justus Mayer. The deftness of their work is demonstrated in the judicious curtailment of the number of pivotal characters involved in the book's relation of its lachrymose story, the skill with which perhaps too many threads of narrative have been combined in a single recital of dramatic events and the authentic "atmosphere" of the Old South that has been maintained throughout the movement of a tale that is by turns amusing, romantic and tragically tearful.

Follows Familiar Formula.

There are at the basis of this latest of the screen's pictured recapitulations of the numbing horrors of war the same elements of family disaster as marked David Wark Griffith's adaptation to the cinema of Thomas Dixon's novel of "The Clansman"—the same devastating emphasis upon the destructive vandalism of impersonalized enemies, the same maternal premonition of catastrophe and the same inexorable toll of hot lead and cold steel.

To some it will seem a work of supererogation to revive the bitter hatreds of a war that pitted brother against brother; some, furthermore, will resent the tacit argument on the side of armed belligerence that the picture seems to advance, but, in the large view, "So Red the Rose," will take its place in mass consciousness as another inescapable appeal to the easier emotions that lie near the surface of every American heart.

It is a fine crying picture for the ladies and a bit of realistic drama that occasionally will cause even the male throat to clutch slightly in the tension of sympathetic reactions that are not easily stifled.

Cast Is Well Chosen.

A great deal of the play's effectiveness, of course, lies in the perfection of the work of the fine cast that has been assembled for the leading roles. Margaret Sullavan has been better and looked lovelier than she appears in the feminine role of prime importance. She plays the part rather by rote, it seems to these eyes and ears—a little as if the whole matter bored her a trifle. Perhaps it did. The part of Vallette Bedford, however, is one of such infinite possibilities that one regrets that Miss Sullavan permitted some of them to elude her.

The stellar performance of the entire cast is contributed by Walter Connolly, sterling character actor, who has never been better than in the convivial role of the master of the rambling Mississippi plantation that furnishes the colorful background, dramatic locale and most of the motivation of a story that is redolent of a civilization that died a lamentable death in the years between 1861 and 1865. Janet Beecher, as the wife and mother of prophetic vision; Elizabeth Patterson, as an acidulous Mary Cherry, and those most excellent actors and singers of their race, Clarence Muse and Daniel Haynes, are others who do much for the drama's more telling moments.

Randolph Scott, Master Dickie Moore, Warner Richmond, long absent from the pictured scene, and Robert Cummings are among the foremost of the picture's male players who add impersonations of some distinction to its long gallery of expert protraitures.

Photographically, "So Red the Rose" is a gem of ingratiating scenic grandeurs and intimate glimpses of a spacious home life such as the United States no longer knows.

Benny Scores Again.

I know of no impresario who is able to impart so great a degree of enthusiasm to his charges or promote so noisy a volume of audience appreciation as Benny Davis, whose "Star Dust Revue of 1935" occupies the stage half of the Earle's current bill. Benny on this occasion has with him a group of youthful specialists who compare favorably with any he ever has presented during the dozen years that he has been doing this sort of thing on the side of a promotional interest in genuine talent.

The act follows the familiar formula of all Benny Davis acts. It features a surprising number of gifted youngsters, whose talents range the whole field of theatrical endeavor. The personnel of the revue is too extensive to be reproduced here en toto, but there still remains space enough—I hope—to make some mention of the unusual endowments possessed by Darlene Walders, a dancer, who combines grace and acrobatics with astonishing facility; Petey, the newsboy, a marvel on the harmonica; Tommy Rafferty, who will allay all fears that Will Mahoney never will have a successful successor; Barr and Estes, dancers of eccentric mold; Washington's own Winstead Trio of singers and Tony Angelo's agreeable tenor voice.

An exceptionally clever "Popeye, the Sailor" cartoon comedy, the newsreel and orchestral contributions augment a feature that is made to order for all communities below the Mason-Dixon Line—and most of those above!

Loew's Fox

"THE MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a play by Ilia Surguchoff and Frederick Albert Swann, adapted to the screen by Howard Ellis Smith and Nunnally Johnson, starring Ronald Colman, with Joan Bennett, Colin Clive, Nigel Bruce, Montagu Love, Frank Reicher, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Charles Fallon. Directed by Stephen Roberts, with music by Bert Kalmer and Harry Ruby. Previewed Wednesday, November 27.

There is a delightful quality of breezy, but unobtrusive, humor about this utterly inconsequential comedy of confused identities that lends it a charm few such feathery farces have possessed.

This is due not entirely to the sagacious manner of "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo's" intrinsic sparkle. It is due in at least equal measure to the skill with which the piece is played for the cameras and microphones by that master of repression, Ronald Colman, and his fascinatingly lovely leading woman, Joan Bennett.

These two deal in forthright fashion with lines that could be made either ridiculous or unbelievable by less adroit handling. Their reading is as effective as their miming is natural and unaffected.

The story has been told before on the screen. It has a great deal in common, as has been remarked here before, with "By Candlelight." It is based on the same sort of deluding premise of mistaken identity, although its developments are by no means as transparent as one at first supposes they are to become. There is a fine creation and maintenance of suspense in the frivolous tale of a taxi driver—but a former member of the Czaristic nobility in Russia—who is tracked down by an obscure dancer from a side-street cabaret.

Paul Breaks the Bank.

Paul Gallard, staked by the combined contributions of his menial associates in the Cafe Russe, knocks down a meager profit of 10,000,000 francs by 15 straight wins at baccarat in the Sporting Club at Monte Carlo. His fame as a gambler of icy indifference to the usual feverish temperatures of chance spreads like the proverbial wildfire. He is importuned on every hand to crowd his luck and attempt a further coup at the gaming tables. But he is adamant in his determination to let well enough alone. He is adamant, that is, until Helen Berkeley and her "brother" cross his path. After that, he takes particular pains to cross theirs as often as may be. They are, of course, the sly operatives of the gentlemen running the place of hazard in which Paul has made his killing. The idea is to see to it that he loses back to the bank all of the fabulous winnings that he earlier had taken from it. How it all comes out is why you will wish to visit Loew's Fox this week to enjoy an especially facile bit of writing, acting and direction.

Mr. Colman has never been rated among the top flight of the cinema's comedians. In this subject he approaches dangerously near what might be termed perfection in the depiction of a noble young man down on his luck.

Joan Bennett, as the girl in the case, seldom has been so alluring. Colin Clive, as her "brother;" Nigel Bruce, as a gentleman's gentleman, and Montagu Love as head of the board of directors of the club denuded of wealth by the fortunate Mons. Gallard, are among those who do most to see to the success of a gay little work that makes no claims to greatness, but well may boast a disarming and wholly captivating vein of spontaneous and literate humor.

Has Handsome Backgrounds.

Pictorially, "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" is a thing of vast beauty. It was filmed against particularly effective natural backgrounds and photographed with a skill that preserves all of the magnificence of a majestic alpine setting.

The stage bill at the Fox this new week is not to be rated among the theater's staggering achievements. Opening with the Carr Brothers and Betty, two masters of the laws of leverage and a dancer of parts, the vaudeville bill then becomes largely a matter of singing, "in one," and Helen Compton's Bryn Mawr Orchestra.

Joe Morrison in the headline spot, again reveals the excellent high and low notes of a tenor voice that has become familiar through his activities on the stage, screen and over the air. His numbers are well chosen to disclose the best features of a voice that is made to bedr down a little too emphatically upon the doubtful virtues of falsetto—a charge, incidentally, that frequently was lodged against such an admirable artist as John McCormack.

Orchestra Is Repetitive.

Eddie Ross and Harry Edwards, singing comedians—save the mark!—repeat their slightly threadbare combination of singing and banter, from which the banter might as well as not be omitted. As singers, they are not so bad.

Miss Compton and her Bryn Mawr instrumentalists suffer somewhat from a too-rigid adherence to precisely the sort of program that Joe Morrison already has delivered a little in advance of their appearance. They duplicate many of his numbers in their "cowboy medley." He calls his a medley of "songs of the West."

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture are the auxiliary features of a bill that owes its chief claim to attention to Mr. Colman's ability to play a gentlemanly comedy like the perfect gentleman he is.

Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

Adjectives and superlatives have always been delightfully unconfined when used in connection with a De Mille super-spectacle.

This is, perhaps, Mr. De Mille's super-super spectacle and to say that it is stupendous, colossal and gigantic—those good old Hollywood stand-bys—is doing Mr. De Mille and his "Crusades," not to mention the original Crusades, (which have rather been lost sight of) a very great wrong.

Mr. De Mille's "Crusades" have everything! And when we say everything—we really mean everything. It cost $1,500,000 to make it—and since the actual Crusaders combined didn't have one-tenth of that amount in their knightly pockets and since the Crusades, on the whole, didn't average anything like that sum—it rather makes the real thing look like small potatoes!

The Siege of Acre, the stirring battle scenes, the hand-to-hand combats, cannot be described. Their very immensity is awe-inspiring. The storming of the city wall, the thousands of people involved and the gigantic proportions of the whole thing are inclined to be a little thrilling and breath-taking.

Dazzling Oriental Beauty.

Then, of course, there are the typical De Mille sets of oriental, dazzling, luxurious beauty and the lovely feminine atmosphere clad in nothing much but chiffon and jewels. No wonder the crusades were popular!

The story? Oh, yes. Well, if you remember your history—and it really doesn't matter if you don't in connection with this picture—Richard the First (who rather liked to be called Coeur de Lion, we fancy), having nothing much to do at the time, and not being in favor of marrying Alice of France (history calls her Alais, by the way, but if Mr. De Mille prefers Alice, we won't haggle), scurries away to the Crusades. Halfway to the Holy Land, Richard runs out of food and supplies, which irks his 4,000 men at arms and 4,000 foot soldiers, etc., etc.

In order to continue his journey and secure these necessary adjuncts he marries Berengaria, a minor princess. He isn't much enthused about the situation at first, but, as time wears on, he thinks it wasn't such a bad idea after all.

However, by the time the bellicose Richard has managed to get a little romance in his soul, the charming infidel, Saladin, has snatched her away. We rather preferred Saladin, anyway. Punctuated by Eastern magnificance and scimitar-flashing and Western belligerence and swashbuckling the "Crusades" roll on, and it really doesn't matter about the story, anyhow. The pageantry of the whole production remains unequaled, and if you missed it when it played "top prices," you'll surely want to see it now.

Acting Is Submerged.

We'll admit that the acting is nothing much to write home about. Loretta Young makes an attractive Berengaria, Katherine De Mille makes a more than attractive Alais, or Alice, as you prefer. We think Richard passed up a good bet. Henry Wilcoxon, as Richard, seems a little confused. Ian Keith plays Saladin, and plays him beautifully, in the only really outstanding acting in the picture.

Other veteran performers who have small chance really to turn in the sort of performances we expect from them are C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale, C. Henry Gordon, George Barbier, Montagu Love, King Baggott, Stuart Holmes, Harry Myers and Philo McCullough.

A Metrotone News and a Micky Mouse cartoon, entitled "Mickey's Kangaroo," complete the program.

Columbia

"TWO-FISTED." Paramount's picturization of the play, "Is Zat So?" by James Gleason and Richard Taber, adapted to the screen by Ralph Spence and Edwin Morton, starring Lee Tracy, supported by Roscoe Karns, Gail Patrick, Kent Taylor and Gordon Westcott. Directed by James Cruze. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Try to imagine Jimmy Gleason's play, "Is Zat So?" without Jimmy and with only one "Is Zat So!"

Hard? Yes, we would have said, offhand, "terrible if not impossible," but we would have been wrong. It isn't terrible.

In fact, "Two-Fisted," the Jimmie-Zat-so-less version of the famous comedy, is rather pleasant entertainment, largely because Lee Tracy stops spitting words out like a machine gun and does a very nice job.

If your theater-going dates back ten years or so, you know the story of Hap, the wise-cracking prize-fight manager and his dumb fighter. Chic Moran, who find themselves suddenly esconced in the home of a rich young wastrel doubling as his trainers and butler and second man.

Tracy Clicks as Hap.

The battle in the drawing room is still there, and Chic's double negatives, but we missed Hap's love interest. The play is a little mild from age, but far from mildewed. There is a bit of cheap comedy dragged in, now and again, but the dialogue is frequently bright.

Tracy is very amusing as Hap; Roscoe Karns does well enough by Chic, and Kent Taylor is decidedly attractive as the wastrel.

Gail Patrick adds a decorative note, and little David Jack Holt is a spunky, if not clever, boxer.

Of course, we missed Jimmie because there's no one just like him, and missed Robert Armstrong, too, the original Chic.

The subsidiaries this week also are interesting, particularly the magic carpet tour of Argentina and the newsreel, with fine shots of Princeton-Dartmouth in a blizzard football game and the best close-ups of the President's smile seen in months. There are also a Charlie Chase comedy, "Manhattan Monkey Shines," and a hill-billy short.

Yule Seal Posters Placed in Windows

350 Boys to Get Tests for Tuberculosis.

Posters announcing the Christmas Seal drive of the District Tuberculosis Association were placed in store windows and other public display locations yesterday by volunteer workers of the Girl and Boy Scouts.

The posters picture the girl on the Christmas Seal trudging along a snow-covered street with letters and parcels in her arms, each closed with a Christmas Seal. The legend is "Tuberculosis Is Preventable and Curable" and "Buy Christmas Seals."

The 350 youths at the National Training School for Boys today will have X-ray examinations for tuberculosis, it was announced by Col. Claude D. Jones, superintendent.

She Put the Bank Together Again!

That is to say that after Mr. Ronald Colman, in the title role, had put what might be termed an awful crimp in the bankroll of the gentlemen running the principal gambling resort in Monte Carlo, Miss Joan Bennett, demurely pictured above, was commissioned to lure him back to the gaming tables in "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." Needless to say, after you have taken a casual look at the Bennett charm, the scheme worked. How it all eventually came out may be learned from the screen at Loew's Fox Theater this week, where the picture opened yesterday.

McNutt Assails 'Bogie-Monger' G. O. P. Critics

Governor Predicts Smashing Victory for Roosevelt in 1936 Campaign.

In characteristic fashion, Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana last night sank his teeth into the "bogie-mongers" of the Republican Party, and, maintaining that the opposition had neither platform nor candidate, predicted that Mr. Roosevelt, after a bitter campaign, would be returned to office by a greater majority than ever for his program of "subsidizing humanity."

Speaking at a dinner in his honor at the National Woman's Democratic Club, the gray-haired Governor stoutly defended the Administration on every point and said the alternatives offered by the opposition boiled down to a "dislike of sin."

Depression Licked.

Turning to potential candidates in the next election, he glibly disposed of Gov. Landon of Kansas by saying that the conservatives will control the next Republican national convention. "And I hope they do," he added. He referred to Hoover's recent attack as the "termite speech."

"I have come not to tell you that all's quiet on the Western front," he began his speech, "because it is not." But, he added, citing figures of returning prosperity in his own State, "the depression is licked."

"Our enemies," he continued, "are branding our policies as a sinister plot to communize the country. These bogie-mongers—for this is the most polite term I can use—sooner or later will die of their own insincerity."

McNutt was cheered when he said conditions were getting better. In his own State, he explained, manufacturing and wholesale taxes showed industrial production in the last quarter of this year had improved $100,000,000 and that collections on property taxes had been 101 per cent of the levies.

Turning his fire on Gov. Landon, he said, "I get a little sick of the speeches coming out of Kansas." He then pointed out that, while he did not like to boast, Indiana did not have a penny of bonded indebtedness and had cut her expenditures an average of $34,000,000 in the last two years.

Turning to platforms, he said that the Republicans offered no substitute for the gold deposit guarantee and farm policies of the present Administration.

Constitution Not Issue.

"They are trying to make the Constitution an issue," he declared. "But it never has been and never will be one.

"The real question of the next election is for all voters to compare their condition in 1932 and 1933 with the present. The present spirit of confidence, I want to emphasize, was not brought about by specific legislation, but through the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt. We have witnessed a revival of the American spirit and the conquest of fear."

He was introduced by Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the National Woman's Democratic Party.

Scientist Who Defied Curse Of Tutankhamen Critically Ill

Dr. Breasted Suffers From 'Undetermined' Malady; 21 Others Died.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—Dr. James H. Breasted, elderly Egyptologist, who was among those first to enter Tutankhamen's tomb and who had since scoffed at the supposed curse on its violators, was seriously ill today of an "undetermined" malady.

At first diagnosed as tropical malaria, his illness today was said by hospital authorities to be "not satisfactorily diagnosed as yet."

"Dr. Breasted spent a fairly good night, but his condition is serious," the hospital announced. He was taken to Medical Center from the incoming liner Conte di Savoia yesterday.

Dr. Breasted, director of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago and for 30 years an explorer of Egypt's temples and tombs, was returning from the Valley of the Nile when stricken.

All "Tommyrot."

Before sailing from Egypt he described the Tutankhamen omen as "tommyrot."

"Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh," is the inscription in heiroglyphics at the famous sarcophagus in the Valley of the Kings, near Luxor.

"I defy that 'curse,'" Breasted declared, "and if anyone was exposed to it, I was. For two weeks I slept in the tomb of Tutankhamen and took my meals there. I never felt better.

"The prophecy failed to deter my original explorers at the tomb, and it has been ridiculed frequently since the opening in 1924."

21 Men Have Died.

Twenty one men who penetrated the inner mysteries of the tomb have died of various causes. Among them was Lord Carnarvon, leader of the expedition, presumably from an insect bite; Sir William Garstin, Sir Charles Cust, Arthur H. Mace, Hervyn Herbert, Lord Carnarvon's younger brother; Richard Bethell, his secretary, and his young wife.

Dr. Breasted, now 74, was present to study chief developments in unearthing the massive tomb.

His findings include the information that gland transplanting is 3,000 years old; that Solomon did not make the first sea voyage; that Helen of Troy was real; that Egyptian surgical practices are 4,000 years old, and that human conscience dates back to 3,000 B. C.

During his latest trip to Egypt, Dr. Breasted and his bride of several months, the former Mrs. Imogen H. Richmond, attended the International Congress of Orientalists in Rome in September.

Officers Named By Alfalfa Club

Senator 'Pat' Harrison Elected Among Others.

New officers of the Alfalfa Club were announced yesterday. They are:

Corcoran Thom, president; Senator Pat Harrison, first vice president; Edward J. Walsh, second vice president, and Charles P. Light, secretary-treasurer.

A new board of managers, with terms ending December 1, 1938, were elected also. They include Joseph H. Himes, Charles P. Light, Thomas P. Littlepage and William J. McNally.

The new officers were elected at a recent meeting held at the home of Frank J. Hogan on Sheridan Circle.

'Heavy' Water May Aid Hunt For Criminals

Can Be Used in Detecting Drugs, Poisons, Scientists Are Told.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 29.—Heavy water, among the newest of different forms of matter being experimented with by scientists, may become an aid in tracking down criminals.

Dr. David I. Macht, pharmacologist, told the American Physical Society today about using deuterium oxide, or heavy water, in the detection of minute quantities of poison and other substances.

Scientists have not yet determined many of the effects of heavy water on living things, Dr. Macht declared, but he has proved that some enzymes, materials which promote some chemical reactions, work faster in deuterium oxide than in ordinary water.

Using such enzymes as oxydase, reductase and catalase, he suspended them in solutions which differed only in their heavy water content. Even with only one part of heavy water in 2,000 parts of ordinary water, he found the enzymes completed work in four hours requiring five hours in ordinary water.

The practical value of this discovery will probably lie in its use in more accurately determining the presence or absence of poisons and drugs in physiological reactions, Dr. Macht said.

"It is well known that minute quantities of powerful drugs or poisons are often more readily detected by physiological methods than by chemical or physical analysis, he said.

Army Rules Favorite Over Navy Today With 80,000 Watching

Central Beats Mexicans, 33 to 12

Richardson Leads Attack Before Record Crowd of 15,000 Fans.

Inter-High Champs Make Four of Five Scores in First Half.

By John R. Vosburgh,

A RECORD-BREAKING throng of 15,000 persons watched Central High roll over Mexico City's All-High team yesterday at Griffith Stadium for a 33-to-12 victory, which furnished the highlight to a colorful spectacle depicting on a football field what is being sought hourly on the field of international relations—good feeling and understanding among nations.

The score of the game, witnessed by the largest crowd ever to see a high school event in Washington, scarcely represents the true nature of this new venture in the realm of sports.

It hardly portrays, as sentimental as it may seem, how these 22 Mexican youngsters, who traveled 3,000 miles for this game, entered into the hearts of thousands of Americans in the stands, caused them to cheer the Mexican team in a deafening crescendo and roar out for the Latin visitors the familiar chant which American football crowds save for their idols, "Hold that line," or "We want a touchdown."

Smashing Victory.

For Central it was a smashing victory, a brilliant conclusion to the high school football careers of such favorites as Billy Richardson, Johnny Jones, Ross Chaimson, Paul Whedon, Charlie Kline, Vince Meenehan and of Emory Firmin, a reserve. For Richardson in particular it was a final tribute to the uncanny talent of one of the greatest high school players Washington has developed in a decade.

It was Richardson, the pint-sized, 5-foot, 3-inch halfback whose rabbit-like runs defy the law of gravity as he bounces first off this and then that tackler, who was responsible for the greater share of Central's marked superiority. A 55-yard run for a touchdown in the second quarter was his chief contribution, but of only slightly less importance were his 17-yard run which led up to the first touchdown, his 21-yard jaunt which led up to the third and his flawless pass to Charlie Kline for the fifth. He scored the second and was not in the game when Central tallied its fourth touchdown.

Colorful Uniforms.

The brilliance of Richardson's snaky running was rivalled only by the uniforms of the famous 50-piece Mexico City Tipica Band. Attired in brightly hued uniforms, the noted musical unit time and again brought forth roars of applause by its artistically rendered pieces and marching formations. The Washington Police Boys Band, in new uniforms, also brightened the carnival of color, sport and good will.

Mexican dignitaries and members of official Mexican families stationed here crowded the boxes along with school and civic leaders of Washington. Shortly before the game started the Tipica Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner" and the Boys Band rendered the Mexican national anthem.

In the flag-draped box of the Mexican Ambassador to the United States sat Erma Costillo-Najera, young daughter of the Ambassador, and Jane Quintanilla, daughter of the charge d'affaire, who were selected as queens of the game by the Mexicans. Mrs. Costello Najera, wife of the Ambassador, who is in Mexico, also occupied the box.

Outweighed Heavily.

The Mexican team, accustomed to hard, fast surfaces, took the muddy field facing the additional handicap of being outweighed 17 pounds per man.

Central made a "break" for itself not long after the game opened, Hugh Cramer, young tackle, blocking Ernesto Villareal's punt and Kline recovering it on the Mexico City 29-yard line. But the Mexicans, with thousands of bleacher fans calling to them to "hold that line" in the shadow of the bleacher seats, answered by taking the ball on downs, throwing Central back when it needed only a yard for a first down with two downs to make the distance.

But Central came back shortly afterward, driving from its own 37-yard line to its first score. The soft, muddy field by this time had completely darkened the white Mexican jerseys. With Vermillion, Johnny Jones and Richardson alternat-

Dern, Aboard Ship, To Listen to Game

Secretary of War Dern won't be on the side lines when the Army and the Navy start their traditional football game on Franklin Field in Philadelphia this afternoon, but he has notified Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, superintendent of the Academy, that he will be cheering just the same—from the deck of his cruiser in the middle of the Pacific Ocean.

The Secretary will listen to the broadcast of the game over the Navy's radio cruising on the U. S. S. Chester, but in spite of the naval surroundings he has promised to remain loyal to West Point.

A play-by-play description of the game will be radioed to the Chester.

When in college Secretary Dern captained an outstanding University of Nebraska football team.

Hoyas Meet Terrors in Last Tilt

Seek to Win Final Game of Season First Time in Nine Years.

GEORGETOWN'S best football team since Dr. Lou Little took it upon himself to develop a winner for Columbia will conclude its season today in the wide open spaces of Baltimore Stadium where it meets Western Maryland at 2 p. m.

The Hoyas not only face a formidable foe this afternoon, but a nine-year jinx that has pursued them since 1926 and prevented them from winning the last game on the schedule. Last year it was the Terrors who defeated them, and the year before that Carnegie Tech. But last night Head Coach Jack Hagerty intimated he believed his men would overcome both the Terrors and the jinx.

Hagerty doesn't underestimate Western Maryland, for past experiences have taught him that regardless of what they do in previous games the Westminster lads can always muster enough strength to provide Georgetown with 60 minutes of hard football. The Hilltoppers had their first taste of Terror poison back in 1929 when Dick Harlow invaded the old Hilltop field and whipped Little's eleven, 7-0.

There will be a strictly Washington item involved today, too, inasmuch as "Bull" Draper, who has replaced Bill Shepherd in the Terrors' backfield, and Fred Tehaan, Georgetown guard, were teammates at Western High School.

Although Western Maryland has

Fordham Brands Bribe Offer Hoax

$1,000 Bid to Two Men Declared a Joke.

New York, Nov. 29.—Fordham University athletic authorities today described as a hoax the published report that Joe Maniaci, captain and halfback, and Amerino Sarno, star tackle, were offered bribes of $1,000 each to "throw" the football game with New York University yesterday.

Fordham won, 21 to 0, with Maniaci in a star role. Sarno was put out of the game in the first half after precipitating a fist fight with Perry Geffen, New York University tackle.

According to Fordham officials a reporter who had heard a rumor of the "bribe" approached Maniaci and asked him about it. The officials said Maniaci jokingly told the reporter it was true and the report spread. Fordham officials denied that New York University supporters had anything to do with the matter.

Pro Game Seen As Threat to Colleges

Angell Asserts 'Big Three' Won't Yield; Attacks 'Intricate' Rules.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29. President James Rowland Angell of Yale suggested today the possibility that professional football may supplant the college game as a crowd-drawing sport, much as "paid" baseball replaced college baseball.

But Yale, Princeton and Harvard, asserted Dr. Angell in an article written for the official Princeton-Yale football program, never will yield to the "hired man" policy in college athletics.

The Yale head also criticized the football rules adversely and gave his opinion on several perplexing phases of present-day football.

Increased Temptation.

Dr. Angell asserted:

"Certainly there is abundant reason to believe that the general financial stringency has markedly increased the temptation to ill-advised colleges to augment gate receipts by hiring brilliant athletes and thus incidentally to promote, they suppose, the reputation of the institution and the loyalty of the graduates, with hoped-for increase of student attendance as a further consequence—a hope, be it said, which has little factual basis to rest upon."

He said that if college football was going "frankly professional," then it would have to compete with the commercial game, with consequences which might well affect the exchequer of the college athletic association.

"All prophecy," he stated, "is hazardous and it would surely be unsafe to predict that college football will follow the course of college baseball, which, not so many years ago, attracted thousands of spectators who have now disappeared.

Discussing three proposals offered as solutions to the "commercial" problem—endowments, the return to informal games of the pre-Victorian era, and the simplifying of the present program—he recommended the last. This would adopt a "less expensive program of intercollege sports" and "perhaps discontinue some of them as financial responsibilities of the college itself, or allow the students to carry them on unaided, if they so desire."

Game a Sell-Out! $110,000 Returned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 29.—The Naval Academy Athletic Association announced today that approximately $110,000 will be returned to disappointed ticket-seekers to the thirty-sixth annual Army-Navy service clash in Philadelphia.

Officials said that they were busily preparing to send back $60,000 in checks received with applications for the game before their supply of tickets ran out. Some $50,000 more in additional letters for tickets that came in late was not entered on the association's books and will be returned immediately.

ARMY VS. NAVY. Toss the form sheets out of the window, laugh at the betting odds and beware of the guy who tries to figure this out in advance, because here is a ball game that annually defies prognostication. Once that opening whistle toots in an Army-Navy game the result is more apt to be in the laps of the gods than in the keeping of either team.

POVICH.

Perhaps it is some hidden influence diffused by the 80,000 who annually throng Philadelphia's Franklin Field that causes the young men of the two service academies to surpass themselves when pitted against each other. Certainly, there must be something in the hoary traditions of the Army-Navy game that transforms the lads into so many furies bent firstly on avoiding defeat, secondly on beating Army or Navy, as the case may be.

Anyway, that is the age-old story of Army-Navy games—inspired battles that value every inch of ground to be gained as highly as, it seems, life itself. Because they do throw themselves into the battle to the hilt. Better football may be played on other fields, more often than not, in the big games, it is, but for sheer fight, unrestrained give-all and frenzy-to-win, Army-Navy games are tops.

Coaches of the two service schools are in a fine spot to develop this frenzy of battle. Essentially, the Middies and Cadets are regimented in their daily life. No other colleges can boast as fine an esprit de corps. Let a smart coach take advantage of those assets, appeal to a sense of duty that is already highly developed, whip his charges into what amounts almost to a maniacal urge to win, and—small wonder that the battle is fast and furious.

AND now, having cautioned all those who have read this far to pay no mind to pre-game predictions, I like Army. I like Army because I think Monk Meyer will break loose against the Midshipmen. If ever a guy is calculated to rise to the occasion, it figures to be Meyer, the son of an Army colonel, who has been meeting his big tests all season with performances that label him as a man apart, far above the common herd.

Against Yale, then unbeaten, the unheralded Meyer ran wild. Against Notre Dame, fresh from its thrilling triumph over Ohio State, Meyer continued his rampage. Against Navy today—well, the fellow never had a greater incentive. You've got to string along with the winner.

I know all about Army's lack of reserve strength and Navy's ability to put three teams of almost equal caliber on the field, but it doesn't scare this department. Because I happen to know, from admissions by Navy people themselves, that the reason Coach Tom Hamilton's team is not weakened when his second and third string elevens troop into the game is because Coach Tom Hamilton's first team is not so hot.

Navy has displayed an obvious weakness all season against a forward-pass attack, and in Meyer the Middies will be encountering a lad who all season has been able to pitch passes better than any individual Navy has met up with, including Shakespeare, of Notre Dame. Unless Hamilton has worked a miracle with his secondary defense, I foresee at least one Army touchdown on a pass.

On the inevitable other hand, Navy has its Snead Schmidt. He is the other half of the main event that pits Schmidt against Meyer. Nobody ever accused the stocky St. Joe, Mo., boy of being a soft touch when he is under way with the leather. If Schmidt gets half-way loose in a broken field, just forget what I said about liking Army.

Holy Cross Is Invited To Meet a Coast Team

San Francisco, Nov. 29 (AP).—Holy Cross has been invited to meet an unnamed Western team for the "Catholic National Collegiate football championship" in a game here either in December or January, Joseph O'Connor, director of athletics for the local Knights of Columbus organization, announced today.

The invitation is contingent on Holy Cross maintaining its unbeaten record by defeating Boston College in its wind-up game tomorrow.

Head of Browns Knows Nothing of Sisler Deal

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Louis B. Von Weise, of Montclair, N. J., president of the St. Louis Browns, today said he had heard nothing other than through the newspapers of the intentions of George Sisler and a group of St. Louis sportsmen and business men to try to purchase the American League club. Von Weise also is a trustee of the estate of Phil Ball, owner of the Browns.

Princeton Held 3-1 Favorite Over Yale

Unbeaten Tigers Seeking Revenge for Upset of Last Year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29 (AP). Except in the Yale camp where the football squad had adopted the slogan "It can be done," Princeton's undefeated and untied eleven was an overwhelming favorite to triumph over the sons of Eli in the bowl tomorrow.

A crowd of between 55,000 and 60,000 persons is expected to view the battle.

The Princeton Tigers, victims of a stinging upset last year by the Yale Bulldog, were anxious to make amends. Every one of the 62 players comprising the orange and black squad was quietly confident the Tigers would end the season with a spotless record and the "Big Three" title.

Although Coach Fritz Crisler of Princeton was non-committal as to the probable outcome, Ducky Pond, Yale mentor, said he thought his squad had more than an "outside" chance.

Princeton was a 3 to 1 favorite in New Haven tonight.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 29 (AP).—Tommy Brides, pitching star of the world champion Detroit Tigers, proudly discussed with friends today an assortment of new curves—the baby curves of a young daughter, born Tuesday night.

S.M.U., T.C.U. In Clash for Bowl Bid

Battle of the Unbeaten Will Attract 40,000; Air Games Ready.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 29.—Undefeated and untied Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, candidates for the Rose Bowl classic, had their aerial machines tuned tonight for tomorrow's Southwest grid classic here before nearly 40,000 fans.

It is regarded here as almost a certainty that the winner of the Southwest Conference championship battle will receive a prompt invitation to Stanford's New Year's Day party at Pasadena.

At Dallas, Coach Matty Bell worked feverishly with the Methodists, running his makeshift Mustang backfield through daring pass formations. The jackrabbit legs of little Bobby Wilson, 147-pound halfback, carry the hopes of Mustang backers.

The piston right arm of Sammy Baugh, pass-slinging sensation, and Jimmy Lawrence's bull-like line thrusts were Texas Christian's best bets.

Outstanding coaches the country over gathered tonight for the "natural." Among them were Ray Morrison, of Vanderbilt, until last year the ringmaster of the Methodist "aerial circus;" Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern; Bo McMillin, of Indiana; D. X. Bible, of Nebraska, and Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota.

Hotel lobbies were filled with visiting sports writers from coast to coast.

Every member on the Christian squad is ready, said Coach Leo (Cutch) Myer.

The Methodist team that walloped the University of California at Los Angeles, 21-0, in an impressive Armistice Day appearance, will be minus two of its stars in Harry Shuford, great fullback, injured in the U. C. L. A. game, and J. C. (Iron Man) Wetsel, stellar guard.

Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 29 (AP).—Stanford's Rose Bowl opponent for the annual New Year Day intersectional football game probably will be chosen Monday, Al Masters, graduate manager, said on arrival here today to set up a ticket office.

Middies Hold Big Edge in Reserves

Monk Meyer's Presence in Cadets' Backfield Is Chief Threat.

Army Ready, Davidson Says; Breaks Will Decide—Hamilton.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Football's annual "greatest show on earth," featuring this year a bitter struggle between Army's first-string power and Navy's reserve shock troops, unfolds on Franklin Field tomorrow for the entertainment of 80,000 spectators.

Whatever edge there is in this thirty-sixth renewal of the classic Service spectacle, rests with Army today, as both squads put the finishing touches on their training—Navy in a secret session at Temple Stadium, and Army in a limbering-up drill on a field near the West Point quarters, at Green Hill farms.

Although Navy outclassed Army in the matter of reserves, the West Point backfield brilliance, spotlighted by flashy Monk Meyer and the weight-edge of the rugged Army forward wall, made the Cadets a slight favorite to revenge themselves for the 3-to-0 setback of a year ago.

Cadets Are Favored.

There is no one Navy ball carrier who can compare with the great Buzz Borries, the thorn in Army's side in 1934, but to compensate for this the Annapolis squad is three deep in every position, while Army, according to Coach Gar Davidson, has no more than 19 first-class gridmen on its squad.

But among these 19 is the ace backfield combination of Meyer, Ed Grove, Bill Groh and Clinton True, who will start the battle. Navy's ball-carrying brigade is headed by the crack halfback pair, John Schmidt and Tom King, whose starting mates tomorrow are

Bright Light Gallops to Win in 4-Horse Bowie Feature Race

$3.10 Choice Takes Lead In Stretch

$58.70 Daily Double Mutuel Paid; 9,000 Watch Program.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRAK, Nov. 29.—A heavy, sticky track wrecked the scheduled feature race this afternoon and the Shandon Farm's Bright Light simply galloped to the wire ahead of the three other juveniles in the 1 1-16 miles contest, called the John Seymour Purse. What had appeared to be a promising race in the overnight entries lost cast early in the day with the scratching of C. V. Whitney's Bright Plumage and A. W. Abbott's Nightcap.

Only "win" betting was in order, as two of the four horses, Sweet as Sugar and Indomitable, were paired as the Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords entry. Thus the pay-off was on Bright Light, an odds-on favorite, at $3.10.

Bright Light won easily by four lengths after being under a strong grip of Jockey Johnny Gilbert for half the distance. Wha Hae, the pace setter for some 7 furlongs, was second, with the Jeffords entry bringing up the rear.

Double Pays $58.70.

The betting on the daily double was the heaviest in Maryland with the exception of Saturdays and holidays. The crowd of 9,000 put $15,996 through the windows. Those who profited were those who bet the combination of Wayaloft and In Front. The mutuel was $58.70.

Jockey Jimmy Sullivan, of Washington, turned in a saddle exhibition to win with Wayaloft in the first race for maiden juveniles. Sullivan sent the Monk's Way colt to the front entering the stretch and then held him together long enough to withstand the closing rush of Sumac, the favorite. The latter was shuffled far back on the backstretch. Let's Pretend was third in the field of a dozen youngsters. Wayaloft paid $9.10.

Favorite Disqualified.

The disqualification of a favorite marked the second race. King's Pleasure carried Boocord wide entering the stretch and the stewards ordered his number removed after consulting with Jockey Harry Richards, Boocord's rider. Boocord was moved into first money with Tightwad second and Red Label third. Boocord was making his move when he came abreast of King's Pleasure. The latter went toward the outside fence and Boocord had to follow. The pair finished along the outside fence. Boocord paid $13.

In Front, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman and trained by her husband, the Washington horseman, finished in front in the third race.

Xandra Circles Field.

Xandra, well played at a $6.40 mutuel, came from last on a field of five to win the fourth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. Merely was second and Hut, the favorite, was third. Maid of Arches, getting the worst of the break, was rushed along when reaching the front and tired.

Maddest added to the joys of the favorite players when he circled his field to triumph with ease at a $4.50 mutuel. Ilchester and Buck Langhorne were the other money horses.

Zembla, owned by Miss Betty Bowman, came from back of her field to take the day's finale.

WAYALOFT, away fast but outrun for the first half mile, swung to the outside when entering the leaders, were VITOPOL down, but tired suddenly and barely lasted to withstand SUMAC after going into a clear lead. SUMAC, away poorly, circled her field and closed a big gap. LET'S PRETEND improved her position on the outside and finished in stout fashion. VITOPOL raced strongly to dispose of BLOND JESTER, but had little left for the final drive. LETTER BOX raced forwardly until reaching the home stretch, then tired under punishment. EVENING HOUR broke well, but lacked speed. KIDI NADI saved ground, but could not menace. BLOND JESTER stopped after a half mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOCORD $13.00, $6.10, $3.60; TIGHT WAD, $4.10, $3.30; RED LABEL, $14.30.

KING'S PLEASURE, away nicely, was hard hustled to gain command, drew clear when straightened into the home stretch, then carried BOOCORD out all during the final furlong, for which he was disqualified. BOOCORD worked his way up on the outside, drew on even terms with the winner inside the final furlong, then was carried out for the balance of the trip while fighting it out stubbornly. TIGHT WAD, as usual slow to get into full stride, secured racing room on the inside to reach contention then finished willingly. RED LABEL came with good courage at the end. MARIO closed gamely from a slow beginning. CANTERSINE weakened early. ADAMS EVE raced in the deepest footing early and tired. FAMOUS CLAYTON broke very slow.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:44. Off at 2:53½. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IN FRONT (entry), $7.60, $3.30, $2.80; LOTOFUS, $4.00, $3.30; MISS BAM (field), $5.00.

IN FRONT, kept out in the firmer footing while holding a contending position, slipped through on the inside entering the home stretch, closed strongly and was going away after wearing LOTOFUS down in the last sixteenth. LOTOFUS opened up a clear lead in the first half mile but could not withstand the winner when vigorously urged. MISS BAM was prominent from the beginning and held on well in the closing test. RIDING HIGH was gaining steadily at the close. CHILLY EBBIE lacked her early speed and was never dangerous. NIGHT COURT weakened. LADY CARROT did not fancy the footing. PRINCE DANNY displayed early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—XANDRA, $6.40, $3.30, $2.20; MERELY, $4.40, $2.50; HUT, $2.30.

XANDRA, forced to better her position on the outside after losing ground at the first turn reached the leaders midway of the final turn, took command when straightened into the home stretch and came out under urging. MERELY followed in closest pursuit of MAID OF ARCHES, responded readily but was no match for the winner. HUT, raced in hand for six furlongs, came through on the inside at the stretch turn, but hung in the final drive. MAID OF ARCHES went into an easy lead, was rated until challenged, but failed to stay. LATIVICH was always outrun.

†Mrs. W. M. Jeffords entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT LIGHT, $3.10 out out; WHA HAE, out, out; INDOMITABLE, out.

BRIGHT LIGHT, rated close up in the early racing, disposed of WHA HAE when nearing the home stretch, drew clear and held sway until the end. WHA HAE was hurried into the lead, raced under slight restraint until challenged, then was placed to punishment, but was not good enough. INDOMITABLE was hurried along from the start, but was done after six furlongs. SWEET AS SUGAR was badly outrun from the beginning.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:13½. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's ch. c. (3), by Distraction—Vexing. Trained by H. Young. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:16, 1:43, 1:50 4-5.

†A. C. Compton entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—MADDEST $4.50, $2.70, $2.50; ILCHESTER, $3.10, $2.60; BUCK LANGHORNE, $3.10.

MADDEST, slow to get going and permitted to settle in his best stride before moving into contention, reached his opponents when nearing the home stretch, closed resolutely and came away after displacing the leaders. ILCHESTER raced forwardly early, shook off BUCK LANGHORNE after wearing down CHATTERFOL, but was unable to stay with the winner under punishment. BUCK LANGHORNE went prominently, but weakened after making a bold bid at the final bend. MANAGER BILL had too much taken out of him in forcing the pace and he tired. BEHEMOTH was held safe. LADY MARLBORO had no excuses. CHATTERFOL stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won by Miss Mary. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:39½. Winner, Miss Betty Bowman's ch. m. (6) by Vespasian—Odessa. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:52, 1:17 4-5, 1:45 1-5, 2:07.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEMBLA, $6.60 $4.80, $3.60; PENCADER, $5.80, $3.80; MUSLET, $4.70.

ZEMBLA, favored by improved handling over her recent races, worked her way up on the outside after being slow to gain full stride, reached contention nearing the home stretch, then withstood a stout drive to get up in the last sixteenth. PENCADER went in his best form, followed close to the leaders, then held on well after gaining a slight lead. MUSLET, permitted to drop far out of contention and steered wide when finished full of run when taken to the stretch. THREE DAGGERS could not make up any ground at the close. SAMBO BROWN weakened badly for the stretch run. KEEP OUT could not threaten. MARY'S MAY stopped as did WASWANAPPI. BYE BYE MARY was left when she refused to break.

Fraters Ready For Tilt With Corsairs

Large Crowd Is Expected to See Alexandrians Seek Revenge.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 29.—The Alexandria Fraters finished preparations tonight for their game Sunday with the Fredericksburg Corsairs with a signal drill at Baggett's Stadium, under the direction of Coach Nick Colosanta. The game will be in the nature of a consolation for the locals, and they will be out to avenge two earlier defeats at the hands of the Corsairs.

All members of the squad will be available for duty as they have fully recovered from injuries suffered in last week's game with the Norfolk Clancys.

The first game played between these two teams here drew the largest crowd of the season, and an even larger one is expected Sunday. The temporary stands erected for the high school game Thanksgiving Day will be left standing in order to accommodate the expected crowd.

The Virginia A. C., newly crowned champion of northern Virginia by virtue of its victory over the Pirate A. C. last week, will play its first game in the defense of the title Sunday, traveling to Arlington to play Alcova Motor Co. Coach Goldman has called a special signal drill for 10:30 a. m. Sunday on the Shipyard Field.

Two of Alexandria's unlimited basketball teams, the Old Dominion Boat Club and the Columbia Fire Department, are seeking games with unlimited teams. For games with the boat club, call Jake Mendelson at Alexandria 1303 between 5:30 and 6:30 p. m. For games with the fire department team call John Travers at Alexandria 510.

Preliminaries Of Ring Card Complete

22 Rounds of Battling to Precede Furr-Silas Bout Monday.

THE complete supporting card for the 15-round Sid Silas-Phil Furr bout for the District welterweight championship at the Joe Turner Arena, Fourteenth and W streets, next Monday night has been announced.

Three six-round bouts and a four-rounder will comprise the preliminaries. In the sixes, Kirk Burk, former District heavyweight champion, will tackle Jim Ferrar. Ferrar scored a knockout over Walter Buckley on the Levinsky-Gallagher card at Griffith Stadium.

In another six, Billy Landers, the Norfolk sailor boy who once was the District's most popular featherweight, will tackle one Jim Lancaster, a Wilmington, Del., boxer, who at present is doing well in Baltimore rings. Joe Green and Eddie Burl, featherweights, will meet in the remaining six-rounder, and a four between Joe Dotey and Stanford Carrier will open the proceedings.

The card will open the new fight site on W street to the public. All the erection work on the building has been completed, all lights are installed and the ring and bleacher seats are practically finished now. The final touches will be added today.

7 League Soccer Games on Sunday

Season Strikes Full Stride; Rosedale at Va. Avenue.

The local soccer season will swing into full stride this week-end with the Sport Center League scheduling four games for today and the Recreation League offering three Sunday sessions. Running up against lowly-ranking opponents, Park View and Littoria appear certain to maintain first position in their respective leagues.

In the most promising game today Rosedale will boot it out with Virginia Avenue on the latter's field at 11 a. m., while tomorrow's most likely-looking battle pits Sun Radio against Sabaudia at 2:30 p. m. on the Rosedale Playgrounds field.

Schedules and team standings follow:

C. U. Would Welcome Bid to New Orleans Sugar Bowl Game

Cards Eager To Extend Season

Shout for More Action; Bergman Acclaims His Stars.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S football season is all over but the shouting and its brand of shouting is no less emphatic than its brand of football.

The noise is not a prolonged celebration of the victory over North Carolina State, but an unholy howl for more football against bigger and better teams. The Cards think they're good, and because no bid for a post-season game has been forthcoming they regard themselves as the Oliver Twists of football.

Head Coach Dutch Bergman is inclined to agree with the players. He thinks it's a pretty good team, and if the truth were known he wouldn't mind playing in one of the various bowls New Years Day. The Rose Bowl, of course, is far beyond his reach, but Bergman wouldn't turn up his nose at New Orleans' Sugar Bowl game against either Tulane or Louisiana State, or the infant Orange Bowl at Miami, Fla.

Excuses Lone Defeat.

Bergman is disappointed because the team didn't finish its season undefeated, as he believes it should have. But he is willing to dismiss the DePaul defeat as one of the game's breaks. Catholic lost that one, 9-6, with "Irish" Carroll, its ace halfback, out of action with three broken ribs, and Bob Makofske and Bill Adamaitis, regular backs, unable to give their best because of leg injuries.

Yesterday Dutch said that with the squad at its best physical condition, as it is now, he wouldn't be afraid to put it against any team in the country. He sincerely believes the Cards have just reached their peak and that they would give any team 60-minutes of hard football if they didn't whip it.

Carrol Averaged 8.6 Yards.

Carroll, the sure-footed halfback who ran 41 yards in ankle-deep mud, twice reversing his field for a touchdown, is rated by Bergman as one of the ablest halfbacks who ever pulled on a jersey, and he makes no exceptions. Carroll's record for the season shows a net gain of 656 yards from scrimmage in 76 trips with the ball—an average gain of 8.64 yards very time he carried.

He thinks he has punters in Makofske and Foley, who can kick with the best of them, and he acclaims Mulligan as the best end he ever coached. He needn't make any apologies for the rest of the line, for it proved its worth against North Carolina State.

Bergman has, in fact, a suitable team for a Bowl game of one kind or another, and all he needs is a bid to prove it.

Barney Ross Beats Garcia Decisively

Fights as if His Title Were at Stake.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Fighting as if his championship were at stake, Barney Ross, world's welterweight champion, decisively defeated his Filipino challenger, Ceferino Garcia, in a blistering 10-round battle at the Chicago Stadium tonight.

By his victory, Ross avenged the humiliation suffered when he fought Garcia in San Francisco last September. In that battle, the Filipino dropped Ross twice in the first round and had him sprawling on the middle rope of the ring when the bell ended the round. Ross got up, however, to win a disputed decision.

Tonight there was no doubt as to the result. Ross set his own pace and made Garcia fight as he wanted him to.

Harvard Sports Show $2,306 Profiit for Year

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 29—For the first time in three years, Harvard athletics showed a profit for the year ended June 30, 1935, the Athletic Association's financial report showed tonight.

Receipts of the academic year 1934-35 were $554,150 and expenses, including guarantees paid to visiting teams, $551,844, leaving a $2,306 profit, this despite the fact that receipts were $46,445 less than the preceding year. This excess contrasts with a $32,882 deficit for the preceeding year and a $57,065 deficit for the year ended June 30, 1933.

Oddly enough, football, which had less success athletically than the other major teams, was the only sport showing a profit. Football receipts were $291,465 compared with $75,738 expenses.

Public Links Site Picked.

New York, Nov. 29—(AP).—The Public Links championship will be played over the Bethpage State Park course at Farmingdale, Long Island, July 20-25, 1936, the United States Golf Association announced today.

Football, American Style and Headgear a la Mexican

Billy Richards, star Central back, finds a hole in the Mexico City High School All-Stars' line and is seen en route to one of his lengthy gains yesterday at Central Stadium. Central, local school champions, found the Mexicans easy opposition in winning, 33-12.

District Commissioner Melvin Hazen (right), watched the game from the Mexicans' side of the field and went native to the extent of exchanging hats with Miguel Ludo de Tejada, master of the Mexican band. He also acquired a shawl in the swap. At left is Walter Lohrmann, of New York.

3 Duke Stars and Guckeyson Win All-Conference Honors

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 29.—Eight conference members are represented on the All-Southern Conference team chosen for the Associated Press by coaches and leading sports writers throughout the area.

Duke's Blue Devils in winning the conference championship placed three members on the mythical eleven—two of them repeaters from last year's all-star team—while North Carolina gained two berths.

N. C. State, Virginia Tech, Maryland, V. M. I., Virginia and Washington and Lee each has a single representative on the 1935 combination.

Two classy backs, Clarence (Ace) Parker, of Duke, and "Demon" Don Jackson, of North Carolina, piled up 61 votes apiece to run away with the balloting, while Washington and Lee's Hugo Bonino, a tackle, and Dick Buck, North Carolina end, were the most popular linemen, each with 47 votes.

Coaches' "Dream Team."

While there's room for considerable argument about the superiority of some of the first team members over those who landed on the second team, there's no denying the fact that the sports writers and coaches picked themselves an aggressive, capable, well-flanked line and a backfield that any tutor would be glad to call his own. Those backs can do anything and everything well. They have the speed and the drive. All of them can pass and every mother's son of them can kick that football all over the lot.

Apparently the Palmetto State has a genuine right for complaint what with Clemson's fine eleven and South Carolina completely overlooked. Clarence Inabinet, considered by some observers one of the finest guards in all of Dixie, didn't quite make the grade and Tom Brown, a classy tackle, was outvoted too.

Duke's "Ace" Parker, who was the only sophomore on the 1934 All-Conference team; Gus Durner, of Duke, a tackle, and good old dependable Steve Sabol, of North Carolina State, showed their class by winning all-star rank for two years in a row.

Although there were no unanimouse choices, the voters seemed fairly well agreed on the team membership with the exception of the fullback post, where Virginia Tech's great Foots Dickerson outpointed North Carolina's Jim Hutchins with only two votes to spare In the balloting, first team votes counted 2 points and second team votes 1 point each. The advantage shifted as the ballots poured in, with Dickerson edging out his opponent as the deadline fell.

Dick Buck was the popular choice for one of the end jobs with his ability to snag passes as the receiving end of that Jackson-to-Buck combination undoubtedly a great factor in the decision. The other flankman, Johnny Leys, of Virginia, earned his place on the strength of a stout heart and just about the finest defensive ability of any end in the conference.

Bill Ellis, of Washington and Lee, one of the longest kickers in the league, and Duke's Ed West were second team choices, while Cara, of N. C. State; Bershak, of North Carolina, and Willis, of Maryland, were well represented in the balloting.

Four Tackles Outstanding.

In the estimation of the voters, four outstanding tackles towered above the field. Two of them, 233-pound Hugo Bonino, of Washington and Lee, and Gus Durner, of Duke, were placed on the first team after running away from their competitors, while Tom Evins, of North Carolina, and Tom Brown, of Clemson, took second team jobs.

Simmons, Gulli Will Clash in Pin Match

Nation's Foremost Women Stars Battle Today and Tomorrow.

THE much discussed question of bowling supremacy between Ida Simmons, national champion duckpinnist, of Norfolk, and Lorraine Gulli, Capital star who was crowned No. 1 bowler of the country for seven successive years, will be settled once and for all this week-end in a special 20-game match.

Outclassing by far the large field of the Nation's foremost women bowlers, the match, which is sponsored by the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, is billed for the women's individual championship of the world. Though the champion is not selected by the congress until the end of the current season, the contest will have an important bearing upon that selection. Both girls have been averaging close to 117 in league competition.

The match will be divided into four blocks of five games each. The first ten games will be rolled at the Lucky Strike this afternoon and night, at 3 o'clock and 8 o'clock; and the second ten at Silver Spring at 2 p. m. and 7 p. m. tomorrow. As a special added attraction, the Sunday block will be preceded by a doubles match of six games between "Dot" O'Brien and Mary Stapleton, of Norfolk, and Blanch Wootton and Evelyn Ellis, of this city.

Arrangements have been made to provide for capacity crowds at both establishments.

The feature match of the Southern Intercity Duckpin League between the leading Occidental Restaurant team of Washington and the second-place Recreation Center Five, of Baltimore, scheduled for tonight at the Convention Hall alleys, has been postponed due to a threatened attack of appendicitis by Meyer Jacobson, of Baltimore, the league's high individual average bowler.

The Temple-Dixie Pigs will be entertained by the Peninsula Bus Team, of Norfolk. With both Astor Clarke and Meyer Jacobson, the two leading average men idle, Joe Freschi, Temple star, can regain the individual leadership with a big set.

Galt Davis, kingpin of the Rosslyn alleys, will pay tribute to a veteran of many duckpin battles tonight at the Rosslyn drives, honoring Milton Cruchley, 65-year-old bowler of the Rosslyn Independent and Commercial Leagues.

The stakes will be a handicap affair of ten games, five more than last year, with handicap based on one-half of scratch average of 120. The second block will be rolled on December 7, at Astor Clarke's Clarendon drives. The entrance fee is $5, which includes cost of games.

Ralph McReady is the defending champion, defeating Junie Johnson in a roll-off.

Joe Knight Winner, Loser Unidentified

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Miami Beach Boxing Commission wants to know whom Joe Knight knocked out here Monday night in three rounds, since Jack Kranz, Gary (Ind.) fighter, says it wasn't he.

Knight's opponent signed his name as "Krantz" and fans generally thought he was the fellow who once stayed the limit with Joe Louis. Folks began looking into the situation after he was floored nine times and then knocked out by Knight.

The commission here received a telegram from the Illinois Boxing Commission that the real Kranz has not been out of that State or Indiana in three months.

Boat Club Gives Dance.

Members of the Potomac Boat Club will stage their annual Thanksgiving dance tonight at the clubhouse beginning at 9 o'clock. Proceeds will be used for the purchase of new equipment. Potomac, boasting increased membership and with a number of new regattas scheduled, anticipates a banner season on the waterways next year.

Central Trims Mexicans, 33 to 12

ing carrying the ball, the Washington interhigh champions drove in championship style to the 24-yard line. Richardson then uncorked a dazzling 17-yard run to the 7-yard line. Jones added 4 more, Richardson another and Vermillion finally went over on a reverse through right tackle from the 2-yard line.

Mexicans Score.

Mexico City came back to tie the score in the same quarter, Enrique Cortez running back a punt by Joe Moran 25 yards to the Central 24-yard line. Villarreal's pass to Cosem was good for 10 yards and after Novarro had picked up 5 yards on two plays, he shot another pass over the goal-line, which gave the Mexicans the ball on the 1-yard line, due to interference by Jones with the receiver. Central held for one play, but another of Villarreal's fast, perfectly thrown passes to Cortez brought the score. Villarreal's drop kick was wide.

Richardson opened the second period by running 55 yards for the second Central score, literally wriggling out of one tackler after another to get free by the time he reached the 35-yard stripe. Vermillion blocking out the last Mexican man between him and the goal-line. A short punt by Villarreal gave Central the ball on the Mexican 36-yard line and an opportunity to break the tie shortly afterward.

Richardson's pass to Moran was called good because of interference by a Mexican player and Central took the ball on the 24-yard line. Richardson ran 21 yards in a style which had the stands on their feet, Jones added a yard and Moran went over for the score.

Jones went over for the fourth touchdown and the third of the quarter to end a drive from the 24-yard line, where Charlie Arnold had recovered a fumble by Cortez. A 13-yard run by Bill Wooten combined with Jones' short plunges for the score on fourth down. Two first downs by Richardson early in the second half and short gains by Vermillion and Jones put the ball on the 15-yard line, where Richardson tossed a pass to Kline in the end zone for the last touchdown. Jones rushed two extra points and drop-kicked another.

Against Central's second team, Villareal drove from Central's 38-yard line to the 4-yard line on three passes to Cosem, Cortez finally plunging for the Mexicans' second touchdown. Villarreal's, fast, accurate passing was superior to most of that displayed in the recent interhigh series, as was Cosem's pass-catching.

The stands booed to the echo when Central's first team was returned to action in the closing minutes. The Mexican boys were besieged by admirers 30 seconds after the final whistle, most of them feminine signature hunters. It took the players nearly half an hour to reach their buses.

Clamp on Subsidization Code Called Unfeasible in Report

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 29. Dr. Wilson Farrand, in a report on subsidization of athletes in colleges, said today, "It is not feasible to enforce the standards which have been set up."

Dr. Farrand, secretary of Princeton University, reported for the Commission on Higher Educational Institutions at the convention of the Middle Atlantic States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The standards, set up four years ago, refused place in the accredited list to any college which gave scholarships to athletes, effective September, 1933. The commission accepted a signed statement of the college president as proof athletes were not subsidized.

The report said the commission would not use auditors or detectives to uncover any subsidization.

"And yet," Dr. Farrand said, "while we have no evidence on which we could act in any specific case, the indications of extensive subsidizing of athletes in a number of institutions are so clear that it is difficult to see how an efficient administration can be so blind in what is going on."

The report said no college giving money or its equivalent to students with athletic ability could maintain its academic standards.

The commission reported that Duquesne University, of Pitsburgh had been added to the accredited list in February and that Houghton College, Houghton, N. Y.; Misercordia College, Dallas, Pa., Mount Mercy College, Pittsburgh, and St. Peters College, Jersey City, had been added to the list last week.

Lipps Gains Decision Over Turner in Garden

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 30.—Joe Lipps, Ti-Ti, Ga., heavyweight, scored his second straight win at Madison Square Garden by soundly spanking George Turner in a six-round preliminary to the McAvoy-McCoy bout tonight.

Lipps, who was brought from Washington, D. C. by Max Waxman, business agent for Jack Dempsey, clearly outfought Turner throughout. Turner, former University of Oklahoma star who scored impressively against Max Baer when the Livermore larruper was readying for the Joe Louis bout, tired badly at the end. Weighing 176½ to Turner's 183¾. Lipps showed a right hand that had the Westerner on the run throughout the bout.

Max Marek, the last man to defeat Joe Louis, scored a decision over Steve Dudas, of Edgewater, N. J., in another six-round preliminary.

McAvoy Is Winner Of U. S. Ring Debut

New York, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Jock McAvoy, light-heavyweight champion of the British Empire, tonight won a crack at world champion John Henry Lewis by pounding out a unanimous 10-round decision over young Al McCoy, of Boston, at Madison Square Garden.

An unexpectedly small crowd of about 5,000 saw the bout.

McAvoy floored the hard-hitting Bostonian for the count of four in the third round. But Jock absorbed plenty of punishment himself and was taking a lacing at the final bell.

He had piled up too large a margin in the earlier rounds, however, to lose the decision. Fighting from an "American" crouch and bobbing and weaving, Jock won six rounds, according to the United Press score sheet, and the other four went to the New Englander.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 29 (AP).—The University of Miami football team scored a 17-0 victory over Boston University tonight in an intersectional game. All scoring took place in the final quarter.

Gallico

On Way to Texas, Picks Navy Team To Conquer Army

By Paul Gallico.

EN ROUTE to Dallas, Tex., Nov. 29.—It seems to be so very far from New York to Dallas, that as I prepare this piece, I find I am still not there, but, they tell me, gaining rapidly. Although we have been rolling through Texas for some hours, I have not yet seen any football players. Someone told me they turned them out on the range down here to graze, like longhorns. I probably just haven't passed any football ranches. Advance notices from Dallas and Fort Worth would indicate that the two towns are simply steaming. We don't understand the meaning of football back home, except perhaps when Notre Dame comes to town, the way they do down in this section.

There is still plenty of food for discussion before checking into Fort Worth. My Thanksgiving Day selections were not conspicuously successful, numerically, so to speak, but I note that the Fordham victory was included and while I am sorry for N. Y. U. losing out on a Rose Bowl trip I suspect their authorities weren't going to let them take it anyhow. I feel somehow that there was a certain amount of justice in Fordham's victory. Fordham played a rough, tough schedule. N. Y. U. played an easy one.

There also will be one sports writer moving to parts unknown if Yale should by some miracle tie or defeat Princeton, or hold Princeton to one touchdown. In my own whimsical way I have indicated what I thought of the power of the two teams by selecting Princeton to win by the score of 147 to 0. I do not like Princeton because I found discourtesy at Princeton. Hooray for Yale.

THE REST of the Saturday selections to close out a wretched season seem to be Navy, 20; Army 13. Here you see the workings of a mind of a man who simply will not learn. All the dope points to Army's winning because of some splendid backs like Monk Myers, Grove and Grohs, behind a fine line—a line that played two entire Notre Dames to a standstill.

But I am Navy-minded this week, and that is a curious game anyway—it rarely runs to form. I have picked Dartmouth to beat Columbia, 18 to 6, and I suppose that there is where the big upset will come, but where is Dr. Little going to get the manpower to turn the trick?

Louisiana State to beat Tulane, 10 to 0, and your guess is as good as mine, and Southern Methodist, the game I am speeding to see, to beat Texas Christian, 7 to 2. In case you are interested in how I arrived at that score, I will be happy to tell you and you will have another glimpse of a great mind at work.

WHEN I took a poll of some of my syndicate newspapers as to which game they wished me to cover, Army-Navy, or Southern Methodist-Texas Christian, the returns over the wire were 7-2 in favor of Southern Methodist. That's enough for us.

I don't know how good that pick is right now. Two of S. M. U.'s key men, Harry Shuford, fullback, and a gentleman called Iron Man Wetzel, who plays at guard, are definitely out with injuries. They haven't even been in uniform for practice. Both men were important in breaking Bobby Wilson loose. T. C. U. is supposed to have the country's finest passer in Sammy Baugh. The Mustangs have been supposed to be one of those wild passing teams, but most of their important victories this year have been gained through the trenches, lads. Listen, they've even got me steamed up over this game, and I don't know much about either team.

They are so hot over it in these parts that there was even a violent row in this morning's paper as to which school has the better band. Final selections to wind up the season, and made in sort of a bewildered fog: Western Maryland to beat Georgetown, 14-6; Georgia to beat Georgia Tech, 19-14, and Holy Cross to beat Boston College, 14-7. And that ends it, a sorry season.

Influx of Gold Swells Stocks To 9.8 Billions

Holiday Demand for Cash Checks Climb of Excess Balances.

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks yesterday disclosed that the incoming tide of gold swept American stocks up $70,000,000 during the week ended November 27. The upturn brought total stocks to $9,874,000,000, a level $1,762,000,000 higher than at this time last year.

Member bank reserve balances increased at the same time only $7,000,000 due to the heavy demands for cash over the Thanksgiving holiday. This demand resulted in a heavy increase in money in circulation, which rose $81,000,000 to record the heaviest weekly gain in several months. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended November 27, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,474,000,000, a decrease of $17,000,000 compared with the preceding week, and an increase of $10,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On November 27 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,472,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. Increases of $81,000,000 in money in circulation, $7,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $19,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts were offset by increases of $70,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $12,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency and a decrease of $23,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on November 27 were estimated to be approximately $3,060,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Inland Steel Sells $10,000,000 Bonds

Chicago, Nov 29 (AP).—L. E. Block, chairman of Inland Steel Co., announced today that the company would sell to Kuhn, Leob & Co., New York, an issue of $10,000,000 of ten year 3 per cent serial first mortgage bonds, series "C", which would be disposed of without a public offering.

Block said the company intended to redeem on Febuary 1, 1936, all of its outstanding series "B" first mortgage bonds at 102½ per cent of the principal, plus accrued interest to that date. He said Inland was considering plans for additional financing, which, if consummated, would also involve the redemption, on April 1, 1936, of all the outstanding series "A" first mortgage bonds and the issue of another series of first mortgage bonds.

New York Life Cuts Interest And Dividends

Investment Yield Has Fallen, President Buckner Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—The New York Life Insurance Co. today announced adoption of a lower dividend scale and a reduction to 3 per cent in the interest allowed on dividends and other funds left on deposit subject to withdrawal. Both are effective January 1.

The proceeds of policies left under optional settlement or trust agreement, not subject to withdrawal, will be allowed 3½ per cent, the company announced.

Thomas A. Buckner, president, stated that the lower dividend scale and interest rates were principally due to the declining rate of interest on investments. He also stated that the scale of dividends adopted would result in a decline in the disbursement of dividends to policy holders of approximately 10 per cent. The decrease will vary by age and by plan, being larger under single premium and similar policies.

The approximate distribution of dividends during the coming year under the scale adopted will exceed $40,000,000, the announcement stated.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Decline in Late Selling; Wheat Higher on War Peril; Franc Improves.

New York, Nov. 29.—Stocks had a day of indigestion. Profits were taken in recent trading favorites, and the short seller became bolder. Prices were at their poorest in late afternoon, after a firm opening. Turnover in stocks was above 2,000,000 shares, and at one time, when selling was heaviest, the ticker tape fell several minutes behind the market. Bonds were firm in low-grade sections. December wheat rose 1¼ cents a bushel, to 98⅞ cents.

President Roosevelt's address in Atlanta was read in summary form a little too late to affect the market much, whether it otherwise would have done so. Just the same, one or two points in the address were somewhat irritating. For one thing the President said that "the great bankers" of the country told him in 1933 that we could safely carry a public debt of fifty-five to seventy billions. No banker, high or low, could be uncovered here in mid-afternoon who ever had said any such thing, even in his sleep, or who had ever heard any other banker say it, or mention ever having heard it.

Such a debt not only would mean prostration for the country, but it is disconcerting to think that any one in authority can speak of it so glibly. Anyhow, what is needed is not quibbling (which so many "friends of the Administration" enjoy) over the exact total Federal debt that might be carried, with or without inflation, but an honest determination to stop the landslide of charges that are piling up day by day. Some one, it may turn out, might prove to be in error in his estimate of the poor taxpaying beast's capacity to carry a burden.

Francs Improve.

Francs were firmer in tone, and as they went up sterling went down. The improved outlook lessened the rush for gold to be shipped from Paris, but the situation still is regarded as highly uncertain. Along with the war threats on application of sanctions, it will be a disturbing influence in the markets.

On the oil front the news was uncertain. On the other hand, the reports from London indicated that something might be done to help this country down from the limb out on which it has crawled through its exhortation policy on oil shipments. On the other, the louder threats of Italy to act with violence in case oil be added to the embargoed products by the League of Nations was far from reassuring. Meanwhile it looks as though oil may be allowed to flow freely for another two weeks.

Speculators didn't like the hostile talk in Europe, but purely for so-called technical reasons, namely, the belief that the market had gone up too far without a relapse, many of them lately have been cutting down their long positions, and even going short. Just now the market is without anything stimulating in sight, and even with peace abroad assured, all we have to anticipate is another session of Congress.

In the early trading in stocks the rails and the metal issues made some promises. They had to be hedged later, but losses in those groups were not severe. Prices fell away much more quickly in the motor and specialty groups. Losses from a fraction to 3 points were taken in the utilities, chemicals, motors accessories, steels, mail orders and foods. Oils and amusements were irregular.

Airplane issues continued firm and active. Telephone crossed 160 for the first time in four years, but could not hold its gain. Union Pacific, ex dividend, advanced 2½ points on the first sale. Some of the traction favorites rose further. Continental Motors went into new high ground. Celotex preferred fell 4 points to a new low. Wesson Oil extended its retreat. Durham Hosiery preferred fell 8 points from the previous sale in the first transaction in several weeks. Case, Manville, Western Union, Westinghouse, General Motors, Owens Glass, Chrysler and Montgomery Ward lurched heavily.

November Trading.

Trading in November was another splendid month, both for buyers of stocks and for the commission brokers. Turnover for the 23 trading days will be approximately 58,000,000 shares, the biggest November since 1929, and the third largest on record. Volume was the largest for any month since July, 1933, when more than 120,000,000 shares changed hands. The best day was the 14th, with 3,947,000 shares, the largest day since February, 1934. On eight days the turnover exceeded 3,000,000 shares. The most active stocks were Anaconda, Radiator, Bethlehem, Budd Wheel, Canadian Pacific, Chrysler, Columbia Gas, Commonwealth, Commercial Solvents, Gas, Curtiss-Wright, General Motors, Nickel, Central, Montgomery Ward, North American Radio, Studebaker, United Corporation, Steel, Warner Pictures, White Motor and Wilson. Industrial stock prices rose 4 per cent and the rails advanced 18 per cent. The industrial price average was the highest since 1931, climbing there on November 20, according to the Sun's table. Rails were at their best on November 25.

Margin Lows.

New low prices were established during November by about a dozen stocks that will affect the calculation of maximum loan value this month, under margin regulations. For the first seven days of December brokers may use the prices as of the end of October. Some of the stocks to figure in the changes are Celotex common and preferred, Connecticut Railway & Light common and preferred, First National Stores, Loose Wiles preferred, North German Lloyd, Paramount first preferred and Safeway Stores.

Freight Mounts To 15 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Car Loadings for Week of Nov. 23 Reach Total of 646,503.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 23 totaled 646,503 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced today. This was an increase of 84,561 cars, or 15 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934 and an increase of 60,765 cars, or 10.4 per cent above the same week in 1933. Loading of revenue freight for the week of November 23 was an increase of 18,173 cars, or 2.9 per cent above the preceding week this year.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 257,551 cars, an increase of 2,522 cars above the preceding week, 50,679 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 49,991 cars above the same wek in 1933.

Loading of merchandise less than carload-lot freight totaled 161,091 cars, an increase of 1,919 cars above the preceding week, and 1,988 cars above the corresponding week in 1934, but a decrease of 4,011 cars below the same week in 1933.

Coal loading amounted to 132,549 cars, an increase of 10,140 cars above the preceding week, 12,279 cars above the corresponding week in 1934, and 3,482 cars above the same week in 1933.

Grain Shipments Higher.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 33,358 cars, an increase of 4,225 cars above the preceding week, 5,399 cars above the corresponding week in 1934, and 1,218 cars above the same week in 1933. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 23 totaled 21,205 cars, an increase of 3,436 cars above the same week in 1934.

Livestock loading amounted to 15,408 cars, a decrease of 1,730 cars below the preceding week, 3,751 cars below the same week in 1934 and 2,199 cars below the same week in 1933. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended November 23 totaled 11,611 cars, a decrease of 2,883 cars below the same week in 1934.

Forest products loading totaled 28,570 cars, an increase of 2,521 cars above the preceding week, 8,402 cars above the same week in 1934 and 5,422 cars above the same week in 1933.

Ore loading amounted to 10,133 cars, a decrease of 2,147 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 6,483 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 5,604 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

Coke loading amounted to 7,843 cars, an increase of 723 cars above the preceding week, 3,082 cars above the same week in 1934, and 1,258 cars above the same week in 1933.

All districts reported increases for the week of November 23 in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight compared with the corresponding week last year. All districts also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

Miners' Wages Raised By Calumet & Hecla

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. announced a wage increase today of approximately 11 per cent, effective December 1.

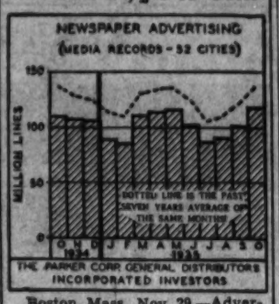
The company's statement said the "object of this increase in wages at this time is to meet, as far as possible, the increased living costs."

Am. Cigar Votes Bonus, Increases Rate to $12

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Directors of the American Cigar Co. today declared a stock dividend of one-twentieth of one share of common "B" stock of American Tobacco Co. for each share of American Cigar common and raised the regular rate to $12 annually by declaring a quarterly cash dividend of $3 a share.

Previously the company paid $2 quarterly. Both dividends are payable December 16 to stock of record December 3. The company is controlled by American Tobacco.

October Advertising Gains 7½ Per Cent



Boston, Mass., Nov. 29.—Advertising gets the business when other methods fail. Almost without exception those industries which are prospering most today are liberal advertisers. Newspaper advertising linage in October went 7½ per cent above a year ago and 16 per cent ahead of September linage.

Homestake Force To Get $100 Each

Lead, S. D., Nov. 29 (AP).—This gold mining town, where the "depression" was something to read about, made plans today to spend a $220,000 Christmas present.

The Homestake gold mine, one of the most profitable in the world, announced through Superintendent B. C. Yates that each of its 2,200 employes would get a $100 bonus December 18.

The distribution will mark the fourth consecutive year the company has remembered its workers with a substantial Yuletide gift. But the coming one is double that of the three previous years when $50 each was given miners, most of whom live here.

Wheat Climbs 2 Cents as War Clouds Gather

Heavy Eastern Buying Lifts Price; Corn Futures Easy.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—With much attention being given to menacing political developments both in Europe and the Orient alike, wheat prices jumped more than 2 cents late today.

Big concentrated buying orders attributed to sources East were largely responsible for the rise of wheat. Top quotations, however, failed to hold in the absence of any general sustained speculative demand.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅞ to 1⅛ higher than Wednesday's finish; December 98⅞-99; corn ⅝ off to ⅛ up, December 58¾-58¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions at a rise of of 7 to 12 cents.

Corn and oats were relatively easier than wheat. One reason was large receipts of corn, especially at Chicago and Buffalo. Weather conditions in the corn belt were reported as much improved. Provisions responded to upturns both of hog values and of grains.

Union Market Men Elect J. O. Harrison, Jr.

To solve the problem created by a marked increase in volume of retail and wholesale business, the Union Market Business Men's Association, comprised of merchants operating at the new Union Terminal Market, has appointed Judson O. Harrison, jr., secretary-manager of the association. Mr. Harrison, who is a graduate of Georgetown University and the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania, will devote his time to two projects: first, the erection of a new retail market which would supply a service similar to that of the old Center Market and have the additional advantage of ample parking space for retail buyers; the second project is the development of a trucking terminal. Mr. Harrison's new offices will be in the Union Terminal Building at 418 Florida avenue, northeast.

Hoyas to Meet West. Md. in Baltimore

not been outstanding this season, it has been far from a push-over, and the green sophomores under Coach Charley Haven's wing are just beginning to hit their stride. A 20-6 lacing by Catholic U. and 20-0 defeat by Villanova are the only real blotches on the record. The Terrors lost to Penn State, 2-0, and Bucknell 3-0, but they gave both plenty of competition.

Georgetown's starting line-up will be the same as the one that opposed Maryland. Noonan and Snyder, ends; Cummings and Vaccarro, tackles; Franks and Stralka, guards; Hardy, center; Keating, quarterback; Herron and Ferrara, halves, and Meglen, fullback. The boys apparently are recovered from their disappointment in losing to Maryland, and will try to vent their wrath on Western Maryland.

North DakotaSeeks Gate Share by Writ

By the Associated Press.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 29.—The Davis-Elkins College football team of Elkins, W. Va., will not get its share of the gate receipts of the Thanksgiving Day game with St. Thomas College until the court decides to whom the money belongs, officials at St. Thomas said today. A writ of foreign attachment was served on them before the game.

The writ was issued at the instance of the University of North Dakota because of an alleged breach of contract by the Davis-Elkins team last year.

Army Rules Slight Favorite Over Navy With 80,000 Due

Dick Pratt and Frank Case. In the backfield Army undoubtedly holds an edge, but Navy's Coach Tom Hamilton has the advantage in that he can throw two other ball-carrying quartets onto the field at any time to relieve his starters.

On the line the Cadets outweigh their rivals by 8 pounds to the man, and seem to be sturdier, position for position.

With the wind-up of training today, both coaches remained silent on predictions, but each forecast one of the closest games in the series, which now stands at 18 wins to 13 for Army, with three ties, and each coach described his charges as set to go.

"The two lines are evenly matched," Hamilton contended. "And on a dry field the breaks will decide."

Davidson's only contribution was "Army is ready."

Clear Weather Forecast.

The forecast is for clear, cold weather and University of Pennsylvania officials expect the field to be in near-perfect shape.

Philadelphia was jammed tonight with the invading horde arriving for the clash. Hotels were filled up, both here and in Camden across the river, and the overflow was finding lodging wherever space permitted.

The "big names," which are annually on the list of those present, began to pour in with the other crowds of spectators. Heading the service delegations to attend the game were Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Assistant Secretary of War Woodring, former Navy Secretary Adams, and leading officers of both Army and Navy.

Navy Followers Begin Leaving Annapolis

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Nov. 29.—Navy followers by the score today began their perennial trek to the thirty-sixth annual Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia, with the Midshipmen regiment scheduled to join the exodus of Navy gridiron fans tomorrow.

Naval officers, townsfolk with wives and friends boarded trains and buses for the traditional service clash to avoid a last-minute rush.

Offices of the academy were closed, as were many business establishments.

Under the command of Lieut. Comdr. Leonard P. Wessell, U. S. N., four battalions of 1,904 blue-clad Midshipmen will leave at 8:05 a. m. tomorrow in four trains, pulling a total of 30 cars.

The Naval Academy Alumni Association has set up headquarters in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. The Navy Athletic Association will also have its headquarters there.

High ranking officers of the Navy, congressmen and governors of States will be in the stands on the Navy side, when the game begins. The boxholders on the Navy side are:

Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy.

Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations.

Rear-Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Sellers.

Rear-Admiral William C. Watts, commandant, Fourth Naval District.

Capt. Forde A. Todd, commandant of Midshipmen.

Representative Carl Vinson, chairman, Naval Affairs Committee.

Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee notified the Navy that he would not be able to attend the game.

Gov. C. Douglas Buck, of Delaware; Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, and Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, all secured tickets from the Navy Athletic Association. Another distinguished visitor to attend the contest is Admiral Tamm, commander-in-chief of the Swedish navy, now traveling in the United States.

Timber Cutter Killed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Franklin, W. Va., Nov. 29.—Floyd Lambert, 60, of North Fork, Pendleton County, was fatally injured Wednesday when a log rolled over his body while he was engaged in cutting timber in the woods. Funeral services were held at his home at Macksville this afternoon.

Paroles Revoked.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 29.—Two prisoners have been turned over to Federal authorities by local police on a charge of violating paroles. They are Ira Sirbaugh and Russell E. Holiday. Sirbaugh was convicted of an assault on a prohibition officer and Holiday on a guard. Both were serving four-year sentences in Federal penitentiaries, police said. They failed to report to Federal authorities, as provided in the terms of their paroles.

Culbertson On Contract

Bridge Tournaments.

Tournament bridge differs from the common variety only in the intensity of each and every hand. Whether one is declarer in a grand slam contract or defender against a miserable two club bid, there can be no letup in concentration without the risk of catastrophe. In an evening's rubber bridge play every one allows himself a few moments of relaxation on uninteresting hands, but the haunting fear that an insignificant 50 or 100 points may turn the tide of battle in a match game keeps the players at fever pitch.

Consequently it follows that, at the end of a gruelling tournament, most of the contestants think longingly of a rest cure. But the fact that when the next tournament comes along all the old familiar faces are back again, is ample testimony that the thrill and excitement of tournament play offer lavish compensation.

Too Much Haste.

Haste in cashing an ace cost the defenders a game, incidentally clearing the way for good play on the part of the declarer. The hand was:

NORTH
♥K Q 6

WEST
♦A K J 9 5 3

EAST
♥A J 9 5 2
♦Q 6 4 3
♣Q J

SOUTH
♠A Q 10 9 3
♥8 4 3
♣A 9 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	[final bid]

West opened the diamond king and, on seeing his partner's deuce, made a good shift to the heart ten. East unwisely took dummy's queen with his ace and returned a diamond, which declarer ruffed. Two rounds of trumps, followed by the ace and king of clubs, the king of hearts and then a small club to West, cooked the defender's goose. West had nothing but diamonds left, and thus declarer was able to ruff in the dummy and discard his third heart.

A moment's thought by East at the second trick would have set the contract. The pattern of the dummy rather suggests the possibility of an elimination play and, in any event, with as poor a club suit as dummy shows, discards by declarer appear remote. East should have given a high signal on the first lead of hearts, but should have withheld the ace.

Today's Question.

Question: Can a revoke be made by the leader to a trick?

Answer: Yes. For certain irregularities a player may be required to lead a specified suit. Failure to do so when able constitutes a revoke. Such a revoke is established as soon as partner plays to the trick.

Post Staff Photo.

After more than 50 years' Government service, William C. Beck (F), assistant superintendent, Division of Railway Adjustments, Postoffice Department, will retire today, having reached the age of 70. Mr. Beck was with the Signal Corps, War, from 1885 to 1888, when he was transferred to the civilian rolls. He accepted an oppointment with Postoffice in 1890 and has served continuously in that department since. He is president of the Immediate Benefit Association. Photo shows Mr. Beck being congratulated on his enviable service record by his secretary, Mrs. Anna Strunk (P).

By Morgan Baker.

FINAL details are being whipped into shape for placing the 3,600 Soil Conservation Service employes under Civil Service in December. The act of Congress "to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion, and for other purposes" decrees that the personnel shall be brought under the Civil Service, and December 27, 1935, has been set as the deadline.

BAKER.

The personnel is divided into two groups: 600 in the Washington offices and 3,000 in the field.

The National Soil Conservation Service was started in October, 1933, when Public Works Administrator Ickes established the Soil Erosion Service in the Interior Department, and allocated PWA funds for its operation. Hugh Hammond Bennett, who for a score of years had been carrying on work in soil erosion and its control for the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture, was named director of the service.

On March 25, 1935, the Soil Erosion Service was transferred intact to the Agriculture Department. In the elapsed year and a half since its establishment the first comprehensive national program of erosion control and soil conservation in America was placed in operation.

On March 27, 1935, all activities of Agriculture Department, pertaining to the conservation of national soil resources, were centralized in the Soil Erosion Service, thus eliminating any possible duplication of work or purpose in the Federal Government from the standpoint of soil conservation.

Occupy Five Buildings.

On April 27, 1935, President Roosevelt formally approved the act which established the service as a permanent agency of Agriculture Department. At the same time the name was changed to Soil Conservation Service.

At present, employes of the service in Washington occupy office space in five buildings: The Standard Oil Building, 261 Constitution avenue northwest, where the executive offices are located; the Printcraft Building, 930 H street northwest, where the photographic laboratory and drafting rooms are located; a few offices at Thirteenth and E streets northwest; the Columbian Building, 416 Fifth street northwest, where some of the research sections and personnel are located, and the Appeals Building, Fifth and E streets northwest, where other research activities are conducted.

In addition to Director Bennett, the other executive officers are W. C. Lowdermilk, associate chief, and Henry Abbot, assistant chief.

Under these men the service is divided into four divisions: Co-operative relations and planning, conservation operations, business management and research.

Regional Basis Established.

Originally the service was divided into two parts, the Washington office and the field organization. The field consisted of the various individual demonstration areas operated by the service throughout the country. Each of these demonstration areas was headed by a regional director. A complete staff of agricultural scientists, who were specialists in a particular phase of the work, such as agronomy, forestry, engineering, etc., were responsible to the regional director.

At present the service is being set up on a regional basis, in which the country has been idvided into 11 regions, according to variations in the erosion problem presented, and in order to effect the most efficient operation.

Regionalization was necessitated, in large measure, by the establishment of 93 new erosion-control projects, which were made possible by an allocation of $27,500,000 of Works Progress funds in August. In addition to the 93 new projects, the service is continuing 47 projects already in operation, a total of 140. The complete service involves work in 42 States.

A sketch of the functions and objectives of the program will appear in this column tomorrow.

Mrs. D. Priscilla Edgerton, (P), assistant editor, Forest Service, a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of All Souls Church, heads the current event section of this active organization. Mrs. Edgerton, assisted by Miss C. Louise Phillips (C), Agriculture, will present a series of lectures, particularly for Government employes, at Pierce Hall on Monday nights through the winter.

200,000 Applications Filed.

Civil Service Commission announces more than 200,000 applications for the railway postal clerk examination. Receipt of the applications closed October 28.

It will be necessary to hold the examination in certain cities on succeeding dates because of the large number of competitors. The commission has received numerous inquiries from applicants who have heard that some persons in their own cities have been notified to appear for examination, whereas they themselves have not yet received notification cards.

The fact that an applicant has not as yet received an admission card has no significance, and is due solely to the different examination dates necessary.

All persons whose aplications have been accepted will in due course be sent admission cards, giving the date and place of examination, the Commission says.

Applicants examined on the first day, will of course, have no preference in appointments over applicants examined on any succeeding dates, as the entire register will be made up at the same time. Applicants are urged not to write to the Civil Service Commission concerning the date of the examination, as this tends to retard the work of the office.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor, today only, between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Joe Morrison, Helen Compton and her Bryn Mawr Orchestra; screen, Ronald Colman and Joan Bennett in "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Loretta Young and Henry Wilcoxon in "The Crusades"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Lee Tracy, Gail Patrick and Roscoe Karns in "Two Fisted").

Wins Gold Medal.

Donald Culross Peattie, formerly for several years connected with the Department of Agriculture, has been awarded the Limited Editions' Club gold medal for his book "An Almanac for Moderns," recently published. The medal is awarded annually to the American author of a book published during the year that most nearly attains the stature of a classic.

Writes on Fruit Decay.

J. R. Winston, senior horticulturist, division of fruit and vegetable crops and diseases, plant industry, is the author of a technical bulletin on "Reducing Decay in Citrus Fruits With Borax," just published by Agriculture. Losses from decay developing between the time the fruit is harvested and consumed, he says, are often serious and greatly complicate the marketing program.

EXAMINATION of a large number of replies received from public officials, members of Congress, college and university presidents, and heads of labor organizations, to a query from E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, as to the relative merits of experience as against college training in appointments and promotions for the Government service, reveals an overwhelming sentiment that no special favors should be accorded on educational grounds.

College presidents are no less in accord on this matter than are the other groups covered, Mr. Babcock says. More than half the members of the Cabinet were recorded, and all to the effect that there should be no discrimination on purely educational grounds, except, of course, where actual professional experience is essential, and where this means certain educational qualifications.

Since Mr. Babcock called attention to what appeared to be a tendency toward undue emphasis on education in civil service examinations, the Civil Service Commission has stated definitely that it has no intention to set up any type of examination that might constitute discrimination. This statement Mr. Babcock regards as reassuring, for his purpose has been to prevent the development of any caste system in the Government service whereby opportunities might be restricted.

The American Federation of Labor strongly indorses the attitude of the A. F. G. E., and its convention at Atlantic City directed the executive council of the A. F. of L. to take up the matter with the commission.

Two letters received today are particularly sound, Mr. Babcock believes; one from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and the other from H. C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers. Mr. Morgenthau states that it is the Treasury policy to promote from the ranks wherever possible, and he adds:

"As to recruitment at the bottom of the service, it is my opinion that we should constantly seek to improve the standards by which our employes are selected. With this end in view, the requirement of a college education is frequently stipulated in civil service examination announcements, but, as you know, it is almost invariably accompanied by the alternate of equivalent experience and training. This, I believe, is as it should be, unless the position for which the examination is held is of such a character that purely professional qualifications must be accepted as a primary requisite, in which event an exception to the rule must be made. With proper co-operation between the department and the United States Civil Service Commission, I see no reason why an applicant for any position should be discriminated against by reason of lack of a college education, if, practically, he is well-qualified to fill the position in question."

Mr. Fremming raises the point that college graduates may profit little from their training. He states that he protested at the A. F. of L. convention against the apparent tendency toward emphasizing educational qualification, and after disclaiming any feeling against college men, adds:

"If they are shown favoritism over experienced, capable and industrious men, then a manifest injustice is done and the practice immediately should cease.

"If this practice should become general in the employment of workers in the Government service, it would inevitably build up an 'aristocracy of intellect,' with consequent snobbery and discrimination that would create friction and disorder in the service."

Q. Do you know of any map of the United States that shows the boundaries of the various Congressional districts?—Helen Carr Fraser (P).

A. The Congressional Directory, the latest edition being that of April, 1935, contains maps of all the States and Territories, with the Congressional districts indicated.

United States Mints.

Q. In what cities are the United States mints located?—Marla Prague (F).

A. Last year there were six mint-service institutions in operation, as follows:

Coinage mints at Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver.

Assay offices at New York City and Seattle.

Mint at New Orleans, conducted as assay office.

'Big Ten' Alumni Invited To Special Film Show

Alumni of the "big ten" universities have been invited to a showing of "talking motion pictures in geology" by the National Park Service and the University of Chicago Club of Washington in the connecting Wing Auditorium, Constitution avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, Friday at 8 p. m.

The motion pictures, taken chiefly in the national parks, show atmospheric graduation, work of rivers, underground water, mountain building, geological work of ice, and volcanoes.

On the Air Today

TOMORROW'S Sunday Post radio pages will be featured by a new, revised winter listing of world short-wave stations. It's one of those things you may wish to clip out and keep at your receiving set for reference. Having had the information at hand for the last week, I have had an opportunity to check it and have found it not wanting.

Which reminds me that I have borne up well this last week in the face of considerable good-natured ragging over my admitted unfamiliarity with short-wave. But an admission is always good for the soul, I believe, and what I may have lost in the last year because of abominable reception conditions is rapidly being made up now.

A short-wave receiving set in my home in the last year would have been as useful as a 1910 calendar. There were even times when one or two of the local stations were as neatly taken out by electrical interference as an end by a couple of backfield men.

* * * *

Also to reflect on over the weekend are the subtle insinuations, equally good-humoredly made, that I have been subsidized by the radio manufacturers of the country. It seems my daily stint has been leaning heavily toward the virtues of the new 1936 radio receivers. I admit one-half the charge. I am not subsidized, but I am enormously enthusiastic over the superior virtues of a brand-new radio set over the uncertain characteristics of one built for honorable service five years ago.

There's many an automobile five or six years old performing yeoman service for its careful owner. But I'll bet a 1936 model will out-perform it in every department. And that's the way I feel about the new radio lines, the comparison being further strengthened by the addition of short-wave to present-day radios.

Lew White: Inaugurates service for the Intercity net's new electric organ, WOL, at 9.

Dixie Lee: (Mrs. Bing Crosby, as it were) and Frank Luther, Polly Moran and Cinema Director W. S. Van Dyke, guest for Wallace Beery, WRC, at 9:30.

"Red Sails": Played as No. 1 song hit choice of the Nation, with 14 other tunes, "Hit Parade," WRC, at 8.

For foreign listeners: Frank Black and orchestra present "Five Hours Back," short-waved to England, WRC, at 12:30.

Football: Army-Navy, WJSV and WRC; Yale-Princeton, WMAL Southern Methodist-Texas Christian, WJSV and WRC, at 4 (following eastern game).

Ted Husing: Resume of Army-Navy game, "Atlantic Family," with Frank Parker, CBS stations (not WJSV), at 7:30.

Raya Garbousova: Young Russian cellist, with Boston Symphony, WMAL, at 8:15.

WJSV advises that: Hal and Martha will be presented, beginning Monday, at 10:45 p. m., instead of the dinner hour as in the past . . . Arch McDonald missed the first broadcast assignment of his career Thursday night when a motorist maneuvered the Old Pine Tree's automobile into the ditch out in Maryland and caused him to miss his sports review . . . Beginning Monday, Harold Gray will be lost to Washington radio listeners as he goes to WBIG, Greensboro, and Walter B. Haislip, of WBIG, comes to WJSV. A "swap," as it were . . . Capt. Fernando Chiapparelli will tell you how horses and horsemanship lead to health in riding, Sunday morning, at 10:45. J. H. H.

SIMMONS 231-Coil Innerspring Mattress

Last chance to cash in on this splendid value! The average mattress has 180 coils . . . this has 231. Deeply cushioned in fine layer felt, closely button-tufted, with plenty of ventilators and tightly stitched edges. Choose it in single, double or three-quarter sizes. Each packed in a separate carton.
